The Third Report of the Class, which now reaches you has been intentionally held back in order to obtain a creditable number of replies to the notices sent to all members of the Class.

This delay should not and would not be necessary if notices were read and blanks returned promptly by members of the Class. The number of lost men is not large, but the number of men who, from inertia or some other complaint, could or would not answer is large and need not be so.

Year after year the vast majority of each celebrating Harvard Class sends in its "lives" for publication. We, however, are blessed with a distinct minority, who do not co-operate. A Class report is a matter of responsibility to every man who desires to be identified with his Class. It is his report and he must do his share to turn out a creditable publication. Unless in the future our Class takes a brace in this respect, we bid fair to earn a reputation neither desirable nor representative of what most of the men deserve.

Our Sexennial came at the time of the Mexican crisis, (No. 37), which was slightly more virulent than other cases of the same complaint. This, added to the ever-present and depressing situation in Europe, created an atmosphere of tenseness and strain which we all felt. Yet we had the satisfaction of knowing that our Class ambulance had started for Verdun and that Harvard 1910, as a Class, had contributed its mite towards trying to make the greater part of the world forget or at least forgive America's cowardice and avoidance of a great moral issue. Since the war began many of our classmates have been risking their lives on French and Belgian soil for the defence of the great principles of humanity. At least two of them, Seeger and Coit, have been killed. Can we do less than think a while of what this means and to resolve that never again, if we can prevent it, shall the world listen for the spirit of free America to speak and turn away disappointed?

C. C. LITTLE,
Secretary.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

ELMER DAVIS ADAIR

I was in the Harvard Law School two years. I then studied law one year in a law office, in Scranton, Pa. I have since been practising law.

EDWIN KING ADAMS

Upon leaving Harvard, I entered the law department of the University of Pennsylvania, from which I was graduated in 1911. Since that time I have been engaged in the general practice of the law in Philadelphia and vicinity.

GEORGE CARLTON ADAMS

Not knowing what business I should enter upon graduating from college, I went one year to Harvard Law School. My idea in entering the Law School was to obtain a grounding in the rudiments of the law and to acquire the power of judicial reasoning. In the fall of 1911, I entered the store of L. P. Hollander and Company, where I have been applying myself ever since to learning the business. In August, 1912, I was thrown from a horse in Wenham and received a severe concussion of the brain and compound fracture of the skull. This injury prevented my working for about six months. Complete recovery did not come until a period of two years had passed. In the meantime I had my appendix removed, making a total of about thirty stitches in a year and a half. A naturally robust constitution brought me through these experiences and today I am at work harder than ever. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Skating Club of Boston, Oakley Country Club, Duxbury Yacht Club.

JOSEPH WEBSTER ADAMS

Joseph Webster Adams was born at Princeton, Ill., March 28, 1887. His youth was spent at Mason City, Iowa, where he was graduated from high school and commercial college.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

He entered Harvard College in 1906 after one year of preparatory work at the Harvard School in Chicago. His work in college was considered excellent and courses were chosen to fit him for a business career: banking, accounting, mathematics, etc. He had a decided musical talent and each year in college added one or more courses in musical composition and orchestration to his other work, gaining recognition in both, the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing some selections arranged by him. He was a man with high ideals, by nature very sensitive, with much strength of character, and full of energy, enthusiasm and determination. After his graduation, in June, 1910, his health being undermined by his struggles the last two years in college, he spent most of the summer in France. In October, 1910, he entered the employ of White, Weld and Company, of New York and Chicago, remaining with them until July, 1913, when failing health forced him to give up active life. In the spring of 1913 he wrote the music for a play given by the University Club in Chicago. His strength being much overtaxed, tuberculosis developed, and in July he was sent to Saranac Lake, N. Y., where he spent most of the days remaining to him. He died, August 2, 1914, of pneumonia following an operation for appendicitis and was buried at Mason City, Iowa.

“Born to the future, to the future lost.”

EARL AUGUSTUS ALDRICH

One year excepted, I have since graduation been teaching English composition and (as a sop to Cerberus) a little English literature, at Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio. During the excepted year (1914-1915) I studied at Harvard and acquired the master's degree. The summer vacations I spent at home, in Fall River, Mass., studying a little and collecting lepidoptera rather more. In the spring of 1912, I became engaged to Miss Elizabeth Orlady Wood (Oberlin College, 1912), of Brooklyn, N. Y. We expect to be married in June of this year. Like most teachers, I am looking toward the doctor's degree. Next year I shall be at Columbia, and the year following (1917-1918) at Harvard. In addition to my teaching, I am engaged in the somewhat slow process of preparing for the press the monumental diary of George Ticknor. Ticknor was professor of belles lettres at Harvard during the middle portion of the last century. He studied and travelled abroad in 1815-1818 and during the thirties, when few Americans went to Europe and when an American was a social lion merely because of his birth. The diary is consequently of much interest, particularly for its description of the appearance of Central Europe immediately after the Napoleonic wars and for its account of nearly everyone worth mentioning in a social or literary way, both in England and on the Continent. Such names as Byron, Mme. de Staël, and Chateaubriand appear in its pages at many times, and make it of interest to both student and general reader.

FRED CAMMEYER ALEXANDER

During the year after graduation (1910-11), I taught mathematics and physics in the Framingham (Mass.) High School. Since then I have been engaged in rattan manufacturing, being a director and department manager of L. S. Drake, Inc., of Boston.

ARTHUR FREDERIC ALLEN

I was forced to leave college just at the beginning of my senior year, on account of my health, and have been unable to do any settled work until the fall of this last year (1915). I am studying at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, as a special or unclassified student.

HAMPTON RAY ALLEN

I did not return to college junior year, but entered the employ of the Home Fire Insurance Company in their home office in New York City. However, not liking the indoor work and office routine, I determined to become an advertising salesman. After following many leads I finally secured a trial with the New York City Car Advertising

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

Company to sell the space in their Eighth Avenue cars. Never shall I forget old Eighth Avenue with its varied odors and its relics of a past commercial glory. Fortune favored me and I was promoted to sell the space in the Fifth Avenue busses. One of the clients I secured for the busses was the proud old house of Brooks Bros., who still display their dignified card therein. This I feel is at least one permanent achievement of my business career. Many a sunshiny day I worked hard to induce the proud merchants of this wonderful thoroughfare to advertise in the busses, and I shall always love Fifth Avenue for what it is as I love Eighth Avenue for what it has been. Later I became a full-fledged salesman, selling space in all the surface car lines to any one who would buy it. After being two years with the Car Advertising Company, I became convinced that great riches lay in selling the polished wooden advertising signs of a Brussels concern to our national advertisers. Accordingly, in May, 1911, I entered the employ of the American Joxyl Company as a salesman. "All the world's a stage" and comedy and tragedy were played here. The "Angel" or backer of this concern was a wealthy lawyer, who wasn't wealthy when the company went on the rocks. That was the tragedy. There were as many intrigues for his favor as at the court of Louis XIV. Every one, who wasn't manager, wanted to be, from a broken-down lawyer, who had lost the decision to John Barleycorn, after many hard bouts, to an ex-captain of the German Army. The bitterest feud was between the war-lord's huge ex-captain and the manager, a giant Irishman. The Hudson Terminal building is well built, but I often feared for it when open violence threatened in the office between these two mammoths. Perhaps they have met in Flanders or somewhere in France and settled it once for all. Like a good American, I remained neutral and sold goods. But this concern was heavy at the top with big salaries—mine not among them—and it went to the wall. Thereupon, I transferred my activities, in March, 1912, to the service of the Passaic Metal Ware Company who made lithographed steel advertising signs.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Here for four years I sold metal advertising signs in New York City and found it more prosaic, but also more remunerative. During this time it was my good fortune to have business relations with the late Bob Andrews, whom I had not known very well in college. He was assistant advertising manager for Lamont, Corliss and Company. He straightway gained my love and respect and I wish to pay my tribute to him here. He was one of the squarest and most honorable men with whom I ever did business. On January first of this year my fellow-salesman in the New York field and I entered the steel advertising sign business for ourselves. We have our office right under the clock in the Metropolitan tower, overlooking Madison Square. Things have gone well to date and any member of the class who happens to be in that vicinity, is cordially invited to drop in or up and view the city from the top of the fifty-story tower.

HAROLD AMES ALLEN

I started work July 5, 1910, with the Pawtucket (R. I.) Electric Company, managed by Stone and Webster, in the meter department. During the next four years, spent with this company, which later changed its name to the Blackstone Valley Gas and Electric Company, I was doing a great variety of things, all connected with the operating end of the electric company,—such as mapping overhead circuits; helping on power-plant tests; taking charge of operating statistics, including operating reports to the Boston office; taking charge of a low-pressure district steam-heating system, which served the business section of the city; carrying out recommendations of accident and fire inspectors in the various buildings of the company, in addition to a great variety of jobs that didn't seem to belong to any particular department. In August, 1914, I was transferred to the Woonsocket division of the same company as power engineer. My duties here have been to look after all power business in mills having installations of 75 k. w. or less.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

This has meant conducting power-plant tests, in mills generating their own power, to determine what their power costs were; then to induce them to buy electric power; to oversee the motor installations and to keep in close touch with these customers at all times. Member: Winnesuket Country Club, Woonsocket, R. I., National Electric Light Association.

ROGER AMORY

September, 1910, to October, 1915, I was with Stone and Webster of Boston, during the last three years of that period doing investigation and analysis work; October, 1915, to date, trust officer of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston.

SEYMOUR LANSING ANDREW

Working like the well-known devil.

ROBERT ENGS ANDREWS

Robert Engs Andrews was born at Jamaica Plain, Mass., on April 23, 1888. He died at his home in Brookline, Mass., on May 22, 1915. He prepared for college at the Brookline High School. Entering Harvard in the autumn of 1906, he completed the requirements for the A.B. degree in three years, graduating in 1909 as of the class of 1910 and returning in June, 1910, to receive his degree with his class. In November, 1909, he became secretary to A. J. Peters, congressman from Massachusetts, and spent the following two winters in Washington. Here he also acted as special correspondent for the "Boston Common," a short-lived publication of that time. In June, 1911, he resigned to enter the publishing house of D. Appleton and Company, New York. From here, finding the atmosphere uncongenial, he went in August, 1911, to Lamont, Corliss and Company, a large New York firm. Here he became interested in the advertising department. The work and surroundings were congenial and Andrews made rapid progress until in September, 1914, when an opportunity for considerable advancement presented itself, he entered the employ of the Butterick Publishing Company, as the right-hand man of the advertising manager. The work was exacting and Andrews applied himself to it with all his strength. The tax on his vitality was too great, however, and on December 12, 1914, he was obliged to resign because of ill-health. Coming from a family of artistic and literary tastes, Andrews showed marked ability in imaginative design and in literary statement. This interest in literary pursuits cropped up throughout his lifetime. He wrote stories for the high-school paper, and in college became Ibis of the Lampoon, as well as being one of the editors of the Advocate. He was extremely popular while at college and was a member of the Phoenix, Hasty Pudding, Institute of 1770 and D. K. E. With the exception of his correspondent's work while at Washington and an occasional short story or play written for magazines, his literary tendencies were more or less held in abeyance until the advertising work with Lamont and Corliss gave him opportunity to exercise his imagination and creative ability in design. The rapid strides which he made in this work showed his aptitude for it. One rarely finds the qualities of optimism, imagination and personal charm combined in the remarkable manner that Andrews possessed them. His social ease and aptitude was the reflection of a deep, whole-hearted love of men and the things they did. His quick wit, ever ready and to the point, would often serve as an able assistant to the keen, constructive intellect, that commanded the attention and admiration of men and women in all walks of life. The feeling of admiration never failed to ripen into true affection. The wholesome absence of destructive, pessimistic elements in his character, the magnetic quality of his humor and manner, the comfortable feeling that he understood and sympathized, won him friends wherever he went. A career of brilliant promise was cut short by his death. There remains, however, a memory of human efficiency and of simple, noble traits, which forever will be a source of inspiration and of happiness to those who knew him.

SAMPTON WALTER ARNHEIM

Member: Norwood Golf Club, Sunnysdale Country Club, City Athletic Club.

[Mr. Arnheim has nothing further to add to his last report.]

RALPH HARRIS ARONSON

From 1911 to 1913 I was timekeeper, foreman, estimator and engineer with the Roebling Construction Company of Massachusetts; from 1913 to 1914, plant manager of Essex Mills, Pictou, N. J., for American Felt Company; from 1914 to 1915, assistant manager for the trustees of the Auger Baking Company of New York; from 1915, secretary and manager of Federal Macaroni Company, 132 King St., New York. Member: Harvard Club of Boston; Westfield Golf Club, Westfield, N. J.

THOMAS GARDNER ASPINWALL

From September, 1910, to April, 1912, I worked for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company in their yards at Fairmont, W. Va. I think I am justified in the use of the word "work", as I reported for duty at 6 P. M., and was relieved at 6 A. M., and thus continued without ever missing a night. In May, 1912, I entered the traffic department of the Pennsylvania Railroad—starting in as a junior clerk in Broad Street station, Philadelphia. In August I was transferred to that prince of cities—Camden, N. J.,—and in February, 1913, to Buffalo, N. Y. In January, 1914, I moved again, this time to Baltimore, Md., and in March, 1915, I was transferred back to Philadelphia, completing a "swing around the circle." My title is that of "freight solicitor" for the Pennsylvania Railroad and Union Line, with headquarters at the Bourse, although at present I am "in the trenches"—which means, in Pennsylvania Railroad language, that I am buried in a special car-tracing bureau instituted for the purpose of alleviating as much as possible the present congestion of freight at eastern terminals. It's a great life, this railroading, if you don't mind moving! Member: Harvard Club of New York.

ROBERT WRISLEY ATKINS

Member: Harvard Club of New York, Harvard Club of Boston, Exchange Club of Boston, Belmont Country Club, Belmont.

[Mr. Atkins has nothing further to add to his last report.]

WILLIAM FREDERICK AVERY

Immediately after graduating I went home for a week's visit before leaving for a summer trip in West Virginia and Pennsylvania as agent for the Scarborough Company. On the seventh of July, 1910, I landed in the little town of West Union, W. Va., in a God-forsaken mountain section where I was to sell state-maps to unsuspecting natives. After eating a dinner of various dishes stewed in cold grease, accompanied by a comparatively edible dish of blackberry sauce and bread-and-butter, I sallied forth into the "business section" of the county-seat which boasted nearly a thousand inhabitants. The size of my bank-roll was not much larger than that of the average carried by a man just out of college, and I remember wondering if I were going to be able to extract enough from the three lawyers, one judge, one doctor, eight politicians, and four business men, to pay my car-fare to the next town to which I should be assigned. The next day, however, I met my "trainer," who was to show me how it was done. We made out pretty well and covered the entire town in less than four hours. The rest of the month I spent more profitably in Grafton, W. Va. In the fall I came to New York and arranged to study music for one year. As soon as I had connected myself with the American Museum of Natural History, I began studying, and attended all the concerts I had missed during the last five years. I shortly became connected with the Music School in a business way in a capacity which ranged from mailing bundles of music to writing sales and follow-up letters for practice instruments and studio-accessories. In August, 1912, Charles D. Jarvis, '10, D. E. Osgood and myself organized the National Publicity Service, starting on a few hundred dollars, and plenty of nerve. Osgood soon sold out, and Jarvis and I got a lot of good business from the Democratic and Republican national committees during election time. To our misfortune, Jarvis' health went back on him about this time and it proved a serious blow to our young hopes. Charlie Jarvis is the gamest proposition I have ever met. In the spring of 1913 Jarvis went West and I went with the New York Central Railroad, where I still am. My vacation trip to Habana, as they spell it in Cuba, may interest some of the class. I stopped off at Richmond, Va., St. Augustine and Miami, Fla., on the way down, spent the first week of March in Cuba. At present I am living in bachelor quarters with Leon R. Jillson, '07, and Farnham Bishop, '08, an arrangement which secures us some of the comforts of home and dispenses with many of its expenses and troubles domestic.

ELLIOT COWDIN BACON

Shortly after graduation I travelled to the Far East, by way of Europe and Siberia, returning to Europe by way of India in April, 1911, to become private secretary to the American ambassador at London. In January, 1912 I resigned, in order to make a trip around South America spending several months in Upper Peru and Bolivia. I returned to the United States in August, 1912, and entered the Harvard Law School in September. Two months later, however, I was offered and accepted the position of private secretary to the Governor General of the Philippine Islands and immediately left for Manila where I remained until August, 1913, resigning upon the change of administration. I then returned to the United States by way of China, Siberia, and Europe, and in July, 1914, entered the office of J. P. Morgan and Company where I have been ever since.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

On June 5, 1915, I was married to Hope Norman of Beverly, Mass. Member: Tennis and Racquet Club, Boston, Racquet Club, New York, Piping Rock Club, Meadow Brook Hunt Club, Knickerbocker Club, New York, Manila Club, Manila, P. I.

LAWRENCE GEBHARD BAILEY

I am now an instructor of English in Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y.

CHARLES MELVILLE BAKER

After June, 1910, I took a trip to the Coast and in the fall entered the Graduate School, where I received an A.M., the following June (1911). I spent two happy but unremunerative years as English instructor at Syracuse University. McCleary and Whitmore held the job before me, and now L. G. Bailey rules in my stead. In 1915 I obtained the position of English teacher in the Syracuse Technical High School.

DONALD MELVILLE BAKER

I am in the United States most of the time, making and selling paints, colors, varnish, etc. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Country Club, Springfield, Nayassett Club, Springfield, American Chemical Society, New York.

GEORGE YELVERTON BAKER

George Yelverton Baker was born at Newport, R. I., September 26, 1886. His parents were Darius Baker and Annie (Barker) Baker. He first attended a private school, later the public schools and was a graduate of Rogers High School in Newport. He entered Harvard with the class of 1910, and specialized in forestry, a course of study which was then a part of the college curriculum. He was graduated in 1910 with the degree of Bachelor of Science, and returned to Cambridge the following year to continue his studies in forestry.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

and in 1911 received the degree of Master in Forestry. In the early fall he was employed in the Forestry Service of the United States in Colorado, with headquarters at Fraser. He was thus employed about six months, and while there took the civil service examinations for Assistant Forester and for Forest Ranger, and passed them both. On receiving his appointment as Assistant Forester, he was assigned to work in Oregon in the summer of 1912, and from that time until his death in Seattle, Wash., on April 15, 1915, he was continuously employed in connection with different forest reservations in Oregon and Washington. He was interested in and enjoyed his work, and was achieving success in his profession at the time of his untimely death.

HARRY STEARNS BARKER

After leaving college I spent three years on the Pacific Coast, engaged part of the time in a large resort hotel and part of the time in various phases of the fruit industry. Since then I have returned to Massachusetts and established a large pear orchard here. I took the short course at Amherst Agricultural College in the winter of 1913-1914 and am planning a trip to the Coast again this fall and winter.

JOHN LESTER BARR

[Mr. Barr has nothing to add to his last report.]

THOMAS WINSLOW BARRINGTON

I spent the years 1910-1912 in the Graduate School of Applied Sciences, Harvard University, receiving the degree of M.E. in 1912. I went to Chuquicamata, Chile, in the fall of 1912 as engineer for the Chile Exploration Company and remained there until June, 1915, when I returned to Cambridge. I left Cambridge in December for Brighton, Trinidad, B. W. I., as geologist for The Trinidad Lake Petroleum Company, The Petroleum Development Company, the Bermudez Company, and the New Trinidad Lake Asphalt Company, with residence at Brighton and properties in Trinidad and eastern Venezuela. I returned from there April 11th and am on my way to Kennecott, Alaska, as engineer for the Kennecott Copper Corporation, 120 Broadway, N. Y. Member: Amicable Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Cambridge, Mass.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

LAURENCE VINTON BARTLETT

The month after graduation I spent in the Maine woods, having many enjoyable experiences fly-fishing, canoeing, and tramping; after which vacation I returned to go into the employ of B. F. Spinney and Company, Boston, manufacturers of women's boots and shoes. I was with this house until the following spring, when I went on a trip through the West with Ezra S. Eaton of our class. We left Boston the second week in June, stopping first at Buffalo whence we went to Duluth via the Great Lakes on the Anchor Line Boat, Octorara. From there we made the following stops: Minneapolis and St. Paul; the Yellowstone Park; Butte, Montana; Salt Lake City; Los Angeles and Pasadena, at which city we stayed approximately two weeks. We then went by water to San Francisco, and, after a trip of one week in the Yosemite, we took the boat from San Francisco to Seattle, then to Vancouver, Victoria, B. C., and through the Canadian Rockies, coming back to the States via North Portal, to St. Paul, Chicago and Boston. On August 1st, 1912, I went to work for the A. C. Lawrence Leather Company, Boston. Shortly after this I became engaged to Miss Elsie H. Hastings, and in June, 1913, the death of my father occurred after several months of serious illness. On July 3d I was married and moved to Boston, where we lived until the birth of my daughter, Barbara, when we moved back to Lynn, where I am now residing. In January, 1914, I was sent to Canada to represent the above-mentioned firm and it is in connection with my various trips to that country that I have had, especially since the war began, some very interesting experiences; two of which were especially so: first—my being held by a guard and officer of the Canadian Army at Quebec for trying to take some pictures and it was only after much questioning that I was able to convince them that I was not part of the German spy system; secondly, my being in Quebec City when the first overseas contingent sailed for Europe. At present I am covering Southern and Western Massachusetts, a portion of Connecticut and Eastern Canada for the A. C. Lawrence Leather Company. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

HARRY CLAYTON BEAMAN, JR.

I left college at the close of my junior year to take a position with one of the Boston wool houses, which wanted a man to send to China. After a short experience in the Boston office I spent a year in Tientsin, North China, as assistant to a man they had previously sent out to open a branch office. Besides wool we handled almost all the products of North China, and I found the business exceedingly interesting. I have felt often that the experience gained there, and in the trip around the world which I took in order to get to my station and back again, well repaid me for the loss of my last year at college. About two years and a half after my return I joined another Boston wool house, with which I am still connected. My business took me pretty thoroughly all over the New England states, and several times on longer trips through the South and Southwest. Soon after my marriage I had the somewhat novel experience of travelling by automobile alone with my wife over a considerable extent of the back country of Texas, our journeyings often carrying us into districts where an automobile was as strange a sight as a Texas steer would be in New York. Last summer I started again for China, taking in the San Francisco Exposition on the way, and at the present writing I am back again in the neighborhood of my old station in Tientsin. I have had the good fortune since leaving college of being connected with a business which has carried me pretty well all over the world, including a fairly thorough acquaintance with the various parts of the United States. Twice I have crossed Canada from coast to coast; from a steamer I have watched the volcanos near the western extremity of the Aleutian Islands, and I have swum in the breakers at the famous Waikiki beach at Honolulu. I have been able to spend some time at Tokyo and the various Japanese seaports, and have traversed about half of the island of Nippon by the miniature Japanese trains. In China I have visited Shanghai and the coast cities up to Tientsin. I have played regular American ice hockey in Tientsin and Peking, and have hunted northward beyond the Great Wall and into Mongolia. On my first return trip from China I crossed Siberia and Russia, visiting Moscow, Berlin, Paris, and London, later, crossing the Atlantic to New York. I am arranging now a trip to South America, and as this will be my first experience in crossing the equator, I am looking forward to it with considerable enthusiasm. I have given this somewhat long list of my wanderings, not that I feel I can take any personal credit for having accomplished them, for it is due to the business I am in that I have had these unusual opportunities, but because they have been my principal occupation in the seven years since I left college. If this brief record of some of the remote corners of the earth visited by one of their members is of any small interest to even a few of the Class of 1910, I hope it will serve to remind them pleasantly of a classmate who, I fear, will be unable to join them in the Sexennial Reunion this June. I have prepared an English-Chinese Vocabulary for Hillier's "The Chinese Language and How to Learn it." (Tientsin, China, 1916). Member: Princeton (Mass.) Country Club, Tientsin (China) Club, Tientsin (China) Hockey Club.

EDWARD LEONARD BEARD, JR.

After graduating, I spent eight months in an advertising agency in Boston, studying the best methods used in securing results in the large advertising campaigns, and incidentally earning a living. I then put in six months learning to sell the hardest thing in the world,—insurance. In the fall of 1911, I accepted a position with the Best Manufacturing Company, of Pittsburgh. I spent one year at hard labor, starting in the foundry and ending in the estimating department. I then went on the road for three years, covering at different times nearly all the United States east of the Mississippi River from New Orleans to Buffalo. In the fall of 1914, I was offered the position of New York representative of the Walworth Manufacturing Company, of Boston. This position I now hold, looking particularly after power plant piping work and piping contracts of all kinds. All members of the class will be most welcome at our new offices and warehouse, 19 Cliff Street, New York City. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Pelham Country Club, Flushing Country Club.

EDMUND NEVILLE BENNETT

Ever since graduating, I have been in the employ of Brown and Adams, Boston wool merchants, and since 1911 I have been connected with the buying force of that concern. Beginning in 1911, I spent three summers in northern Ohio, engaged in buying wool from the farmers, and while there made my headquarters the first year in Mansfield and later in Cleveland. In 1913, the duty of eleven cents per pound on wool being removed, my employers decided to enter the South American market as direct buyers. With another I was assigned to that work and so for the past three years I have made annual trips to Buenos Aires, Argentina, where in the largest wool market under one roof in the world they sell more wool in a week than in all Ohio in a year. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, University Club, Cleveland, Belgrano Athletic Club, Buenos Aires.

EDWARD EVERETT BENNETT

After graduation, I entered the Harvard Law School, and was graduated from there in 1913. Since then I have been working like the dickens to earn an honest living.

ARTHUR LYMAN BESSE

If I've done anything interesting since leaving college, it's one thing more than another. Only if I had realized that I would have to crow about it at the end of six years, I would have taken notes on the way. When I left college I got a job in dad's clothing store. I didn't have to sweep out every morning because they knew blamed well that I didn't know how; but I learned how to sell dress suits to members of the Bricklayers' Union and neckties to women at Christmas time,—which is somewhat of a liberal education in itself. One day we got a new store and varnished it all up, but the varnish got to my insides so that I played sick and went to Europe to get some fresh air. The air was sure different, if not always strictly fresh, and somehow the store ain't never looked the same since. I got visionary in Europe and when I came back I went into the real estate business, but somehow I was too honest or too easy (I don't yet know which) and now I'm back again exerting my influence toward the complete democratization of America through the medium of the ready-made clothing store. Come one, come all,—Long, Short, Skinny, Fat,—you'll all look alike when I get through with you! I took another European trip in 1912, when I drove a Packard over the Dolomites and all the other mites. It was supposed to be a pleasure trip but was really all a put-up job to get my room-mate to propose to my sister a la Robert W. Chambers. He fell into the trap very nicely—but that's his story. The winter of 1914 I spent in Kansas City, Mo., and the past year in Syracuse, N. Y. This rolling-stone business may be all right (I haven't quite decided yet); but my acquaintance is growing lots faster than my bank account and I only just about get acquainted in one town when the whistle blows and I move to one of our other stores. Maybe 'tis better so. I've heard of them as who believed in safety first and they tell me to "ask the man who owns one"; but all the same I've a sneaking feeling that I wasn't cut out for a bachelor. JOHN LOUIS BINDA

The day following the close of college, I left for New York and from there sailed on the S. S. President Grant for Germany and Constantinople as attaché to the American Embassy there. I arrived at the time of the overthrow of Abdul-Hamid; so things were interesting from the start. I started right in to learn Turkish and a few of the other languages used there. My first winter saw me down with typhoid, and very little hope was held out for my life. I managed to pull through after three months of it, and went to the Carpathian Mountains, in Roumania, to recuperate. At Sinaia, the summer capital of Roumania I was presented to all the members of the royal family. I was asked to be a second at a duel between two officers. My officer scratched the arm of the other and so they kissed and made up. I returned to Constantinople after seeing some of Russia around the Black Sea. After nearly two years, I was sent to Saloniki, which now belongs to Greece, as vice-consul in charge of the American consulate. This was the time of the Albanian uprisings; so, what with this and the tortures inflicted by the Bulgarian, Greek and Turkish bands upon one another, I had the opportunity to learn at first hand of the "Balkan horrors." I travelled about Macedonia a good deal. After a year of this, I returned to America for a leave of absence of two months. I was about to give up service when I was notified of appointment as secretary of the diplomatic agency at Cairo, Egypt. In going to my post I visited Italy and the Dalmatian coast. I was in Patras, Greece, when the Balkan War broke out. There was no way of getting out as all boats and railroads were taken over by the government. I rode in a freight car packed with fifty soldiers and about two million "reserves" to Athens. Winter in Cairo was delightful. Dancing, horse-racing, Sphinx by moonlight and other kindred entertainments took up most of the time. I took a trip up the Nile to Luxor and Karnak. This alone was worth the whole trip. The following summer I left the service, and went to Detroit, where, after making some money in the real-estate boom, I returned East in time for the grand opening of the Yale Bowl. Since then I have been lecturing and writing on the present war and on conditions in the near East, also some moving picture scenarios. I expect to return abroad as soon as I can complete arrangements and after the sexennial reunion. I have written: The Awakening Behind the Veil in Turkey, A Trip to Salonica, The Coward, N'Maine, Sinaia: The House of the Fairy Queen. Member: Club of Constantinople, Constantinople, Turkey; Cercle De Salonique, Saloniki, Greece, Turf Club, Cairo, Egypt, Khadivial Sporting Club, Cairo, Egypt.

CARL BINGER

Shortly after commencement, I returned to Cambridge for a course in physical chemistry at the Summer School. The rest of the summer (1910) I loafed in the Adirondacks. I entered the Medical School in the fall. The course in physiology with Dr. Cannon interested me particularly, and gave me a first insight into the scientific side of medicine and the importance of medical research. At the close of the first year I sailed for Europe. The summer was spent in Germany. In Frankfurt I met the great Ehrlich and did some work in physiologic chemistry in Embden's laboratory. At Heidelberg I spent several enjoyable weeks, reading German medical literature aloud with a classmate and tramping through the lovely Neckar Valley. At Dresden I visited the International Hygiene Exposition—a marvel of completeness—and chanced to meet there Dr. David Edsall who has since become professor of medicine at the Harvard Medical School and physician-in-chief at The Massachusetts General Hospital. As a teacher, as a chief at the hospital, and as a companion on several tramps in the White Mountains he has been a source of real inspiration. During the second year at school I became interested in some work in experimental pathology with Dr. Wolbach, the associate professor of bacteriology. Much of my spare time for the rest of the course at the Medical School was spent in his laboratory. For patience, exquisite technique and good sportsmanship in research, he is unexcelled. The third year was the least satisfactory,—overcrowded with short concentrated courses. The fourth year was the best,—courses elective and some leisure time—and fine good fellowship among my classmates. I had a delightful two weeks Xmas vacation with one of them in the Maine woods. Then came hospital examinations. I got what I wanted,—the east medical service at The Massachusetts General. Before entering the hospital (Aug., 1914,) I went abroad for two months and did some mild mountaineering in the Dolomites. For a combination of hard work and sheer fun there are few things I have experienced that can equal an interne's job. My two weeks allotted vacation at the hospital I spent with a fellow house-officer in a thrilling canoe trip along the Massachusetts coast. I left the hospital in November, 1915. I was given a Sheldon travelling fellowship in medicine. I came down here to Baltimore in December and am enjoying myself much at research under Professor John Abel in the department of pharmacology at the Johns Hopkins Medical School. I have written a Note on the Effect of Nicotine Injection on Adrenal Secretion (with Cannon and Aub); a Contribution to the Parasitology of Trypanosomiasis, the Cultivation of a New Filterable Spirochaete; Notes on a Filterable Spirochaete from Fresh Water (with S. B. Wolbach). Member: Aesculapian Club, Boston, Harvard Club of New York, Johns Hopkins Club, Baltimore, The Alpha Omega Alpha Medical Honorary Society.

WILLIAM HOWARD BISHOP

I left college in the summer of 1908, intending to return in the fall, but afterwards decided to continue the work I had taken up during vacation (with Underwood and Underwood, New York) until the following college year and return to college better prepared financially and physically to continue my course. By the time the autumn of 1909 had rolled around, however, I had again changed my plans, and this time very radically. Instead of going back to Harvard, I entered St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore, to begin a six years' course in preparation for the priesthood. The years that followed were without notable event, save the last, in which I was ordained by Bishop Shahan at the Catholic University, March 27, and sang my first solemn high mass on Easter Sunday at St. James Church, West Falls Church, Virginia. These are the happiest and greatest events of my life. My first appointment was as assistant to Rev. C. M. Bart, pastor of St. Teresa's Church, Anacostia, D. C. This was a "week end" appointment to endure only until I had finished my year at the Catholic University. In June I was sent to Notch Cliff, Md., to be chaplain for a community of sisters of Notre Dame. This, too, was temporary. On August 1, I was permanently stationed at Mt. Washington, as assistant to Fr. Craig.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

LEONARD RUFUS BISSELL

In the fall following the June of graduation I went to Boston to hunt for a business opening. Instead of a job, however, I received an invitation to cruise through the West Indies upon a 64-foot auxiliary schooner. The schooner was owned by Seward A. Moot, Harvard '11, and on board there was also one other guest beside myself, Edward Green. All three of us were from Buffalo, N. Y., and well acquainted. We left Marblehead, Mass., on November 15, 1910, and sailed down the Atlantic coast to Cuba, around Cuba to Jamaica, returning home by the Bahama Channel route north. On the way we stopped at every port of any size and had exciting and interesting experiences too numerous to mention. While in the West Indies I left the schooner and visited Panama and Costa Rica. In the latter place I visited a Bahama plantation and the home of a native Costa Rican whom I had met when he was attending Andover. The rest of his family spoke nothing but Spanish and I had to use the sign language somewhat. Shortly after my return to Buffalo, in April, 1911, I engaged in the insurance business and am now associated with Armstrong, Roth, Cody Company. Member: University Club, Park Club, Yacht Club, Chamber of Commerce, Westminster Club, Harvard Club, Kiwanis Club, secretary of Life Underwriters Association.

HORACE BARNABAS BLACKMER

In the fall of 1910 I entered the third year of the full course at the Faelten Pianoforte School of Boston, at which institution I was studying during my college course, and in June, 1912, I was graduated. In the fall of 1910, also, I was appointed organist and director of music at the Church of the New Jerusalem, 136 Bowdoin Street, Boston, which position I still hold. Following my graduation in 1912 I opened a studio for pianoforte instruction in Malden, and have been kept very busy ever since. Member: University Club of Malden. Harvard Musical Association, Boston, Mass.

FESSENDEN SEAVER BLANCHARD

During the summer of 1910, I went abroad for a short trip. I began work in October of 1910, in a cotton mill in New Bedford,—the Page Manufacturing Company, and worked there on various jobs for nearly two years, trying to get a general knowledge of the different processes of cotton manufacturing. After that I spent a year in a cotton broker's office in Boston,—E. A. Shaw and Company. Since the middle of November, 1913, I have been in the treasurer's office of the Pacific Mills, where my most important work is buying the cotton used by the mills. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

ERNEST CARLEY BLEECKER

Ernest Carley Bleecker was born in Marmora, Ontario, Canada, March 20, 1887. He was a descendant of an old Dutch family that came to New York in the early part of the eighteenth century. His immediate ancestors were amongst those who left the newly-formed American republic when it passed from British rule and were, in Canada, called United Empire Loyalists. He received his early education in his native town, then attended high school in Brockton, Mass., for four years, graduating from that school with a very creditable record in 1906. He attended Harvard College for the next two years, taking an Arts course and covering three years work in that time. He earned and was awarded several scholarships during that period. In April, 1909, he went to the Pacific coast and spent two and one-half years in connection with lumbering and logging operations in Oregon. Wishing to add technical knowledge to his experience in this work, he returned to Cambridge in September, 1911, to take up Forestry work at Harvard. After completing the desired course, he obtained a position with the Canadian government as Assistant Forest Supervisor of the Crow's Nest Forest Reserve in Alberta. The work was most congenial, and he threw himself into it with an energy which characterized all his actions, regardless of the effect on his own physical resources. Three months later an attack of la grippe, aggravated by a long drive through a western blizzard, brought on an attack of peritonitis which, later, was found to be of tubercular nature. Four months were spent in western hospitals, and four months more in his own home, but, in spite of his brave struggle to combat the disease, all efforts were unavailing. He passed away Nov. 23, 1913, regretted by a wide circle of friends. No one valued friendship more highly or possessed a greater gift for making and retaining friends. His keen sense of humor, with his natural kindliness of heart, his ready sympathy and understanding, made him a general favorite. A calm philosophy, which enabled him to look on life as from a high plane, enabled him, also, to accept his illness with its disastrous effect on his plans for the future, as something to be endured without complaint. He was, through all that long and trying period, the comfort and support of his friends, and when his time came,

“He laid himself down with a will.”

THOMAS SPRIGGS BLUMER

My senior year was spent at the Harvard Law School and likewise the year following; but, after two years, I decided that the legal profession was no place for me; so I gave it up, and, after a summer's vacation, started, in September, 1911, with Holbrook, Cabot and Rollins, contractors and engineers. They were at that time building the New York aqueduct and I was assigned as a timekeeper of a gang of dagoes in Brooklyn, with hours from 4 P.M. until midnight. This was an excellent experience, and I will always look back with pleasure upon the three months that I stayed there. In December, 1911, I started with Stone and Webster of Boston, where I stayed until March, 1914, when I came to the National Shawmut Bank, where I now am. Member: Harvard Clubs of New York and Boston, Tennis and Racquet Club, Boston, Tavern Club, Boston, Agawam Hunt Club, Providence.

WILLIAM WARDEN BODINE

[Mr. Bodine has nothing to add to his last report.]

GUSTAF SAMUEL BOHLIN

The first year after graduation I spent with the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, on the electrification of the Harlem River branch in New York; the second year with the Turners Falls Company on the enlargement of their hydro-electric development; the third year again with the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, on preliminary work for electrification between Boston and Providence; the fourth year with the Contractors' Mutual Liability Insurance Company, on safety inspection. Since April, 1915, I have been with the Interstate Commerce Commission, working on the federal valuation of common carriers in the United States.

FRANCIS RICHARDSON BOLLES

After graduation I took a vacation until the middle of October, 1910, when I went with the Western Electric Company at Chicago, Ill. The first year was consumed in the student educational course. After this work I was transferred to the Pittsburgh branch. Two months later, I went to the factory; remained there for a year. Then was transferred to the comptroller's department at the headquarters in New York. I remained here for about two years. I was then transferred to the Pittsburgh branch as accountant. In March, 1916, I severed my connection with the Western Electric Company and went with the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company whose headquarters are in Akron, Ohio. In May, 1916, I was placed as office manager of the new Pittsburgh branch. On June 1, 1916, I was married to Miss Margaret Spangler Williams of 431 Shady Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

EDWARD BORDEN

I started to work for C. H. Pope and Company, in New York. I worked for them three years and then went with George H. Waring and Company, Fall River. After working for them for one year, I opened an office of my own as a cotton-goods broker, and am still at it. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Harvard Club of Boston, Quequechan Club, Fall River.

ROBERT WETHERBEE BOYDEN

Ever since graduation I have been busily engaged in instructing the young, or attempting to do so, and in trying to steer as many of them as possible in the proper way; viz., toward Harvard. The scene of my endeavors has been, from 1910 to 1915, the Moses Brown School in Providence, R. I. This last year, 1915-1916, I have been teaching at the Volkmann School in Boston, I have taught history and English, with a little Latin and algebra thrown in, to vary the monotony. Outside of my academic work I have coached the school-track team at Moses Brown, have developed a school glee club, and had charge of the school paper. I do not need to mention all the little things that I have done in connection with life in a boarding school, such as dormitory duty, tender guarding of table manners, etc. Anyone who has been a pupil or teacher in a boarding school knows all about those things. In the summer vacations I have done various things. In 1910 and 1911 I was assistant superintendent at the Y. M. C. A. camp at Friendship, Maine. In 1912 I worked in the lumber department of the Pullman Company in Chicago. In 1913 I was once more in a boys' camp, this time as counsellor at Camp Wildwood on Moosehead Lake, Maine. The summer of 1914 found me in search of the culture that travel is supposed to bring in a trip to the western coast. I tried it again—I mean travel—last summer, this time turning toward Canada for a short trip. Member: University Glee Club of Providence, 1910-1915.

SIDNEY CLARKE BOYER

Upon graduation, my first employment, in the fall of 1910, was with the W. H. McElwain Company, makers of shoes, in the capacity of assistant to the purchasing agent. In the spring of the following year I left this first-named department and went into the sales department at Manchester, N. H., where I remained until the fall of 1913, at which time I entered the employ of the New England Cotton Yarn Company. After having spent about nine weeks in one of their Fall River Mills, I was transferred to the Boston office of said company and at the present time am travelling in New England as one of their representatives. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Wellesley Country Club, Wellesley Hills, Mass.

J. ALBERT BRACK

I was submaster of the Newburyport High School, Newburyport, Mass., from September 1, 1910, to June, 1913. I was teacher of mathematics at the Newton (Mass.) Classical High School, September, 1913, to June, 1914. I was appointed to the sub-principalship of the Lynn English High School, July 29, 1914, and to the Boston English High School junior mastership, on September 14, 1914, in which position I have continued. I have translated: The German Military System (published in the Boston Transcript, 1908), and The German Navy in the present World War (published in the Boston Transcript, December, 1914). Member: A. F. and A. M., North Star Lodge, Ashland, Mass.

JAMES HAROLD BRADDOCK

After having been vaccinated with most of the economic courses and numerous English composition courses, my first impulse upon re-entering this perspiring world was to become a financial magnate. I told myself that I should be content with controlling one corporation. It didn't matter whether my corporation might be the Lackawanna Railroad or the National Biscuit Company. On the theory that the lower one starts the further he can climb, I accepted a position with the Biscuit Company at $15 a week, with the object "to learn the business from the ground up"; and my duties included everything such as driving a wagon, unloading freight cars, recording sales, taking orders, inspecting stores, and maintaining pin-head maps showing the grocery stores throughout the United States. At the end of the first summer I saw no immediate prospect of being promoted to the presidency or general managership, and my good friend, Frank Bugbee, had a strangle-hold on the secretary-treasurership. Accordingly I resigned. When leaving, I for the first time learned from the general manager how indispensable I had become to the company. Nevertheless, having turned my face toward lower Broadway, I saw no way of gracefully turning back. So I went to the New York Bureau of Municipal Research and took a position on the staff. That was in the autumn of 1910. By the beginning of 1913 I had done considerable municipal researching and had covered my head with glory and my feet with gore. My fellow-workers, Henry Bruère and William H. Allen, had helped keep the bloodthirsty wolf from my door by increasing my salary every once in a while when I wasn't looking. Instead of satiating my appetite, however, the pabulum served only to make me hungrier. Ergo, I began to plan plans whereby I should multiply the bread and fishes. On the principle that to be struck by lightning one must be where lightning is, I participated with Daniel A. Reed, attorney, and known as the Cornell football coach, and Harold S. Buttenheim, editor of The American City Magazine, in establishing The American City Bureau, an organization for building and re-building chambers of commerce. Our offices were located at 87 Nassau Street. That was in April, 1913. Since that time I have kept out of mischief by spending five or six weeks each in cities as far east as Bridgeport, as far west as Oakland, as far north as Kalamazoo, and as far south as Jacksonville. I have helped give a civic revival to some of our somnolent cities. I have participated in separating some penurious persons from their first "free-will" offerings. I have managed to keep the afore-mentioned wolf hot-footing it just behind me, sort of around the corner in the back alley. I have written: How New York Views Its Budget Exhibit (Twentieth Century Magazine, November, 1911, page 21); The Efficiency Value of the Budget Exhibit (Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, May, 1912, page 151);

JOHN WILLIAM STANSBURY BRADY

In the fall of 1910, I entered the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where I remained until the next June. Then I went abroad and spent a year and a half travelling, living a great part of the time in Switzerland, with a side-trip to Buenos Aires, and one to Norway for skiing. I came back toward the end of 1912 and entered the Graduate School at Harvard, to prepare for entrance into the Medical School. Being abroad the summer of 1915, I decided to stay in Europe, and finished my second year of medical studies at the University of Bern, Switzerland. Some spare time I spent in Paris. I returned to Boston in August, 1915, and was re-admitted to my class in the Medical School.

FREDERICK WILLIAM BRANCH

I attended the Harvard Law School, graduating in 1912. Since that time, I have been located at Manchester, N. H., engaged in the practice of law as a member of the firm of Branch and Branch. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Cygnet Boat Club, Calumet Club, Intervale Country Club.

EDWARD BRAYTON

On leaving college I entered the employment of the Union Cotton Manufacturing Company, of Fall River, as a clerk and remained there until the spring of 1912, when I went to Europe and spent a year in Switzerland, studying at Zurich most of the time. In May, 1913, I returned to America and entered the employment of Marwick, Mitchell and Company as an accountant. I was in their Boston office almost a year, but decided I was not adapted to be an accountant; so I resigned and entered the employment of E. A. Shaw and

I remained in this position until January 1, 1916, when I resigned, and, with two other men, formed the company of Towne, Brayton and Osborn, Inc., for the purpose of buying and selling cotton. At present I am the treasurer of the above company. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Club of Fall River, Quequechan Club of Fall River.

CLARENCE DEWEY BRITTEN

From October, 1909, until August, 1911, while you were enjoying senior leisure and scratching for a purchase on the hard world, I was teaching English at the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas for the improvement of my health and purse, learning the fine points of the national game, and acquiring a nice taste in fire-water. Of a single attempt at broncho-busting, the less said the better. In fact, the sole memorable achievement of this period was the location of the Buck-Horn Saloon in San Anton', a remote cousin of the Bird-In-Hand Tavern. August and September, 1911, were devoted to "Jib" Herron, '09, Arthur Wilson, '15, and myself to a random voyage up the Mississippi, varied by a "nigger-excursion" between Vicksburg and Memphis. We went broke in New Orleans, Memphis, St. Louis, and Detroit; but New Orleans is famous for her charity; in Memphis we found an alleged hotel run by a Tech.

man; Herron had a classmate in St. Louis, who introduced us to "southern comfort", a nectar brewed by a namesake of Herron who stubbornly drops one of his r's; and there were those in Detroit who were relieved to set us on our way to Cambridge. Herron had deserted at Cincinnati. Wilson and I separated in Detroit. A genuine achievement of this period was my re-discovery of him in Buffalo after he had been locked up for vagrancy. I spent a fourth year, 1911-1912, in Cambridge and received a degree. In July, 1912, I began to chase back and forth across Canada for the Canada Law Book Company, of Toronto. I wearied of this before the company did, but they said so first. On my first trip out I dodged the Regina tornado only to run into a typhoid epidemic in Calgary, where I beat the local victims to the hospital and for some weeks enjoyed seeing them turned away. One evening I was visited by a man with a game foot and "debater's elbow". He was rather surprised at the warmth of my welcome before I discovered that he was not the long lost Chuck Raymond, '10, but Chapin Hoskins, '12, and a very good sort for a 'Twelve man. He is now one of the prominent boosters of Moose Jaw, but says he only hopes that Raymond is called Hoskins as often as himself has been called "Chuck." On one or another of these trips I met Harvard men of every class except 1910. One day I spotted R. M. Middlemass, '09, in Medicine Hat. He was swinging around the Orpheum Circuit, and we went along together for several days. Out of his Canadian travels he spun a great yarn for his class life; but while we were together, nothing more exciting happened to us than the fine hospitality of McQuaid, Law School '08, in Edmonton. For the triennial I came all the way from Victoria. It proved a little too far; since, even by subsidizing a launch, I failed to discover the class dinner on Misery Island until the distance cup had been awarded to a pretender from no further away than Seattle or thereabouts. But the cook had saved a fowl for some purpose of her own, and somebody had overlooked a bottle, so that I did very nicely in the kitchen. A five-cent cigar retained Frank Sullivan for my claim, and doubtless he would have secured a verdict but for the iniquitous anti-speech rule, which denied him a hearing. My recollections of the rest of that perfect week are golden, if hazy, although some one was mean enough to step in front of me when the World photographer snapped the Broom Brigade at New London. After the triennial, the road seemed very tame. What were forest fires in the Porcupine, a gold strike at Swastika, or the ore-buckets of Cobalt to one who had witnessed the collapse of the 'Seven against the Stadium? What glamor in Athabaska or the Peace River after the glory that was Ibbett's Field? So in a few months I retired from work and cultivated the acquaintance of the lady manager of Toronto's best restaurants, Miss Gertrude Sanborn. A little later we were among the founders of the Canadian Journal of Music (monthly), of which I became editor and S. F. Strother, '07, business manager. When this promised a decent income, Miss Sanborn and I formed a matrimonial partnership for its better spending; but at the outbreak of the war all the expected capital went to the front, so that at Christmas I was ready to accept several paper souvenirs for a year invested and retire once more. For a war-baby the Journal continues surprisingly husky. During this year we enjoyed a visit from Ralph Bunker, who came to Toronto with the Omar Company. Since January 1, 1915, Mrs. Britten and I have been engaged in reorganizing the Woman's Exchange and Grill of Bloomington, Ill. Herbert Hines, '09, who used to warm the guide bench with me, is preaching not many miles away; and Bunker has also paid us a visit here. I have written: Paul Mariett (poetry in the Journal of Music), Renaissance of the Viola D'Amore. Gena Branscombe, Rubinstein and Weber, Choral Music in Canada, Musical Genius and Semi-Insanity, etc. (Canadian Journal of Music), The Life and Temperament of John Donne, A Rationale of Criticism, Literary Burlesque on the English Stage.

PERCY ANTHONY BRODERICK

As one of the members of the class of nineteen hundred ten I am pleased to submit a brief account of my life for the past six years. In general terms this period is divided into three main divisions as follows: Work, 2.5 years; sleep, 1.7 years; miscellaneous, 1.8 years; Total, 6 years. Not having anything of especial interest to tell under the second and third divisions, I shall merely state the kind of work in which I have been engaged since receiving my degree in June, 1910. For about two months in the summer of 1910 I worked in two temporary positions,—the first assisting an accountant, and the second in the operating end of a department store. In November, 1910, I went to work for Harvard University in the assistant comptroller's department. My duties in this department at first consisted in carrying on a set of cost accounts. All the methods for doing this work, however, had not been established at that time, and up to about the first part of the year 1913, I was engaged in devising methods for co-ordinating the different departmental records, so that there might be a uniform system for ascertaining costs which ultimately could be operated automatically. The final possible results of this work, however, were never achieved, owing to the discontinuance of the system in the early part of the year 1913. For the next year I worked in the same department on the general accounts, and on the annual report. On January 8, 1914, I entered the service of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, with the Industrial Accident Board, as an inspector. This work in general has to do with the investigation of all questions which arise under the compensation act, in connection with the claims of injured employees, and the prevention of industrial accidents. In April, 1915, I was placed in charge of the inspection department, and, from the beginning of my work with the board, have had general supervision of the statistical department, which includes, also, the study and analysis of the statistics compiled. In connection with the statistical work, I am a member of the committee on uniform statistics of the International Association of Industrial Accident Boards and Commissions. This committee, as the name implies, is interested in making comparison of the accident experience of the different states, and the combination of the experience, so that the results will be dependable for rate-making purposes in connection with compensation insurance. This, in brief, describes what I have been doing for the past six years. So far my work has been interesting, and especially so with the Industrial Accident Board whose activities are closely related to many interests of persons in different stations of life throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. In connection with my present work, I do a considerable amount of writing on the subject of workmen's compensation, but this material is published only in annual reports or bulletins, and is part of the day's work. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

LAURENCE LINDSEY BROWN

My first year after graduation was spent in the Harvard Graduate School; I got an A.M., in English, in June, 1911. During the summer of 1911, I travelled in England and Scotland. In the fall of that year I began the practice of my profession in the high school in Derby, Conn. I had intended to teach English, but as the school program worked out, I was finally given four periods a day of history and only one of English. Because of a false idea about obtaining desirable secondary school positions, owing to the ease with which I had gotten my first place, I resigned from the Derby position in May, 1912, intending, of course, to get a better position for my second year. As a matter of fact I did not get another position until March, 1913, and then only for the remainder of that school year. This was a substitute position to teach English in the Technical High School in Newtonville, Mass. During the summer after I quit Derby, I studied at the Summer School of Middlebury (Vt.) College; and from September to March I was a student in the education department of Brown University. In September, 1913, I took the history position in the high school at Brattleboro, Vt., that I still hold. In the summer of 1914 I was in the Cornell Summer School, and last summer I was in the Dartmouth Summer School. As the salary that a man earns in his first years out of college is a matter of considerable interest, I am going to give a few figures about my own earnings. In my five years of teaching I have earned an average of $806 a year. This average, of course, would have been at least $100 higher had I not foolishly resigned from one position after one year of teaching, before I had obtained another position. In conclusion let my say just a word about the attitude toward Harvard men that I found at Middlebury, Cornell, and Dartmouth. At these three summer schools I met graduates not only from these colleges but from a great many other colleges. And from none of these men was it possible to get a very good word for Harvard. They all accused us of conceit and snobbishness, etc. Perhaps because in all three places I made a great effort not to appear like a Harvard man, several persons told me, when the truth about my college associations leaked out, that they had never suspected I was from Harvard—as if it was very unusual for a Harvard graduate to behave like ordinary folks. I have yet, six years after graduation, to hear Harvard College pleasantly spoken of by graduates (especially recent graduates) of other men's colleges. SAMUEL HORTON BROWN, JR.

The first year out of college was spent studying naval architecture at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The rest of the time I have been working under the leading yacht designers around Boston, having been connected with Crowinshield; Lawley; Swasey, Raymond and Page, Inc., and John G. Alden, with whom I am now working. In addition to this I am carrying on a plant for building small boats in partnership with my brother. Member: Corinthian Yacht Club, Marblehead, Mass.

THOMAS JEFFERSON BROWN

Since graduation until December, 1915, I was engaged in insurance business in Boston, specializing in the fire insurance end. In December, 1915, I resigned and am at present with Henry A. Piper, public accountant and auditor, in the Old South Building, Boston, engaged in work which I have been studying for the past three years. Member: Towanda Club of Woburn, Harvard Club of Boston, Mt. Horeb Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and Woburn Royal Arch Chapter.

GILBERT GOODWIN BROWNE

I spent the first year out of college in railroad work of various kinds, the first eight months in the employ of the Carolina, Clinchfield and Ohio Railway Company on construction work in the Cumberland Mountains, the balance of the time chiefly in the operating department of the Boston & Albany, as night freight clerk in the Beacon Park Yards at Allston, Massachusetts. About this time the railroads entered into a period of retrenchment and I found myself out of a job, with no prospects of another one, at least in railroad work. My luck finally turned, however, and gave me an introduction to the banking firm of White, Weld and Company, in New York, where I landed a job as messenger. After six months in that office I was sent to their Boston office, where I have been ever since. Although I have had to spend most of the time trying to earn enough money to pay my bills, I have been able to get away enough in the fall afternoons to help for two or three seasons in coaching the ends of the Harvard football team, and in the evenings to learning a little about soldiering, by joining Troop B, First Squadron Cavalry, M. V. M. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Varsity Club, Longwood Cricket Club.

HENRY STONE BRYANT

At the outset, let me state that in the words of the old song, "I am a bachelor." Regrettable as this seems, for I am fully aware that matrimony is the only existence worth while, I still live in the hope that one fine day ere long, some young lady will overlook the fact that I am losing my hair by leaps and bounds, and will tell me that she loves me despite this fact. I digress from the subject, however. Directly had the coveted sheepskin, for which I toiled so arduously for four years, come into my possession, I grabbed the lares and penates, and took up my abode in ancient Duxbury, where I endeavored to obtain a much-needed rest. There I spent a quiet bucolic summer, and by the time autumn came around, I was in fine fettle to go to work for the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, of Boston, with which organization I have been connected ever since. Notwithstanding the fact that the majority of my very intimate friends married shortly after graduation, there are several old cronies left with whom I chum around; i.e., with whom I go to the theatre, the movies, play Kelly pool, take drink (if properly approached) or what not. As the reader will suspect, therefore, I am a man of simple tastes. There is little more to say except that I am anticipating another much needed rest along the latter part of next June. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, National Electric Light Association.

WALTER BALLOU BRYANT

From the close of college until July, 1911, I was special apprentice in the works of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company, Wilmerding, Pa. Since that time I have been located in the district office of the same firm at Chicago. At present I have charge of the installation of industrial compressors.

GEORGE RALPH BUNKER

From 1910 to 1913, I acted as instructor in public speaking and the interpretation of dramatic literature in Harvard University; also taking graduate work with Professor Baker in the history of the drama. During this period I did considerable writing of short plays and monologues. In 1913 I made my professional stage debut in Boston, playing the leading role in "The Blindness of Virtue". From this I was engaged to play the juvenile role in a New York production, "Omar The Tentmaker", with Guy Bates Post. After touring to the Pacific coast with this, I returned to New York to begin rehearsals for the operetta "The Girl Who Smiles", in which I played the eccentric comedy role. After a season of 25 weeks with this, I closed my engagement to complete "Mary of Magdala", a wordless play in five acts. I have written: The Scar, a one-act comedy, The Sling-shot, a one-act drama, Can You Beat It? a one-act farce, Mary of Magdala, a pantomime in five acts. Member: Harvard Club of New York.

ROBERT BURLINGHAM

I was college physician and surgeon at Columbia University from 1910 to 1914; interne surgeon at Ancon Hospital, Ancon, Canal Zone, from June to September, 1913; interne physician at the Roosevelt Hospital, New York City, from July, 1914, to July, 1916. Member: Harvard Club of New York.

ARTHUR STANTON BURNHAM

I spent most of the summer of 1910 on the water,—not "wagon", but "salt",—cruising "Down East" to Maine and Nova Scotia. When the first of October rolled around, I found myself in Manchester, N. H., starting in life as a mill hand (or apprentice, as styled by some) in a cotton mill. I spent two years at the mill, spending some time in each of the departments. I learned much concerning the life of the workingman, also how to get to work at 6.30 A. M. In the fall of 1912, I migrated to the South, to the mountains of Kentucky, with another member of our illustrious class. I landed in Helier, Ky., October, 1912, and remained for practically two years. It was a rather wild country, composed principally of coal mines and "moonshiners." Modesty forces me to relate that my time was devoted (almost) entirely to the former industry, from an external rather than internal viewpoint. Most of the hours from 6 A. M. to 7 P. M., were spent in the office, trying to keep that end from getting too far behind in the perpetual race against time. My most potent recollection of life in Kentucky is fried chicken and fried ham. I came back to Boston in the fall of 1914 and spent most of the following winter in the office of a C. P. A., through whom the opportunity came for a job up here in Malone, N. Y., in a combination of mill and paint factory. I have been here since last spring, and enjoy being back in the mill life, especially since I do not have to get up with the chickens (regular "egg-layers"). Member: Elks Club, Malone, N. Y.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

GEORGE LINDSLEY BURR

My first mistake was to complete the work for my bachelor's degree in three years. In the fall of 1909 I entered the Engineering School of Columbia University; and in June, 1912, emerged in the guise of a civil engineer. That month I entered the employ of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company of New York as a draughtsman, in which capacity I spaced approximately five million rivets a month until October. I then determined to undertake a little more strenuous recreation and went to Keokuk, Iowa, as an electrician's helper in the Stone and Webster Engineering Corporation. The electricians apparently did not need my assistance after the latter part of April, 1913, and I returned to New York. By that time I was convinced that I was wholly incapable of taking care of myself, and fortunately I was not alone in that belief. We were married in May, 1913, and immediately left for Houston, Texas, where I was "Man Friday" to the manager of the Houston Electric Company and the Galveston-Houston Electric Railway Company. These organizations survived my services until the first of January, 1914. I was then sent to Dallas, Texas, as secretary to the assistant district manager in charge of the Stone and Webster Texas properties. After four months of illness I was forced to give up all work on July 2, 1914. Within six weeks I landed in Saranac Lake, New York, and started out on the road back to health. During the past year I have lived in White Plains and have been busily engaged taking on a large supply of life and energy; and by October first I hope to be ready for work once more. I have written "Why I Advocate Preparedness." Member: Harvard Club of New York, American Society of Civil Engineers (Junior), Harvard Club of Connecticut.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

IRVING BURROWS

I spent the first two years out of college as structural steel designer and in construction work around Boston. I then took three months' leave of absence for an educational tour through Europe and Africa, making a study of reinforced concrete construction. I returned in 1912 and spent two years in Boston with the Aberthaw Construction Company, on concrete work. I am at present employed in the sales department of the Blaw Steel Construction Company, with headquarters at New York. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

WARREN HATHAWAY BUTLER

I went to the Law School and was graduated, with honors, in 1913. I practised law two years with Lyon Weyburn, at 53 State Street, Boston. Family interests, in connection with a large department store in Montreal, took me there for several months in the winter of 1914-1915; after studying this business from a legal point of view, I became interested in it from a merchant's viewpoint. I have now become associated with the old firm of Almy, Bigelow and Washburn, in Salem, established by my grandfather fifty-eight years ago.

In the following year I joined the teaching force at St. Mark's. April, 1915, initiated me into the steel business with the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, where I am at present. Member: Harvard Club of Youngstown, Ohio, National Reserve Corps.

OTIS WALDO CALVIN

I left Cambridge in May, 1908, before the end of my second year. My wife and I went to the Philippines where I taught four years. During the last two years of service there, I was teacher of botany in the Philippine Normal School in Manila. We returned to America in 1912, visiting Egypt and Europe en route. I was a student at Indiana University one year, 1912-1913. Since then I have been teaching science in the Commissioned High School in Matthews, Ind.

WARD GRISWOLD CAMERON

The year after my graduation I spent in the Graduate School at Harvard, working in French and Italian, and took my master's degree in arts in June, 1911. In the fall of 1910, I entered the Law School of the University of Maryland, from which I was graduated in June, 1912, with the degree of LL.B. PHILIP WALKER CARTER

After returning from my honeymoon in Europe in the summer of 1910, I went to work at The Carter's Ink Company, Cambridge, and took up my residence at 308 Commonwealth Ave., Boston. After spending three years with the ink company, dividing my time between the sales department and the advertising department, I temporarily severed my connection, because of a very keen desire to engage in some form of social service or civic work. An excellent opportunity presented itself almost immediately as I was offered a position as executive secretary of the Alumni Social Service Bureau, a voluntary association of college graduates organized for the purpose of acting as a clearing house for social service work. The bureau studies the demand for volunteer workers created by settlement houses, boys' clubs, civic organizations and the like, and then strives to enlist the services of as many young college graduates as possible. The bureau has met with considerable success since its inception and is slowly but surely increasing its influence in the community. This is not merely my opinion, but the opinion of my board of directors and of editorial writers of several Boston papers. Although I am supposed to have been giving all my time to the above work, I have nevertheless been able to give considerable attention to outside activities. When the Progressive movement was at its height, I took a flier in politics, ran for the state legislature from the City of Newton in the fall of 1913, served on the Progressive state committee for two years, supervised the financial end of the state-wide $50,000 campaign conducted by the party in June, 1914, and served on half a dozen other political committees. It would seem as though I had stuck by the guns a little longer than most of my fellow-Progressives, as I did not return to the Republican fold until August, 1915. Since that time I have been comparatively inactive in politics. I have served three terms on the membership committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and have not only found it possible to be of some slight service to this organization, but have been very much stimulated by the contact with so many of Boston's brainiest business men. I should like to take this opportunity to urge every 1910 man who can possibly afford $25.00 a year, to join the Chamber. Although I firmly believe that a man should join as a matter of civic pride, I am convinced that anyone who does any real work in the Chamber will get a splendid return on his investment. My association with the Boston Rotary Club and the Pilgrim Publicity Association has also been of great benefit to me and I have endeavored through service on several committees in each organization to repay in some measure my obligation. The Rotary Club, which includes one representative from nearly two hundred different trades and professions, each one of whom must be an official in his concern, has an unusually broadening influence. I have also given considerable time the past few years to the work of my national fraternity, Theta Delta Chi, and have for over a year been president of the New England Graduate Association. Much of my time has also been given to church work, my affiliations being with the Church of the New Jerusalem (Swedenborgian Church) in Newtonville, Mass. To mention all my jobs would be bore-some, so I will merely say that I have been clerk of the society for six years and of late have had numerous treasurers' jobs given to me. Although I did nothing in the line of amateur theatricals in college, I had been quite active along these lines at Milton Academy and when I removed from Boston to West Newton in the fall of 1912, I found numerous outlets for my energy. Besides taking part in church plays, I have acted from time to time with The Players, the oldest and best-known dramatic organization in the city, and the Newton Amateur Opera Association. Some of my most interesting experiences have resulted from connections formed as a result of my present vocation. As a director of the Newton Welfare Bureau, which does for Newton what the Alumni Social Service Bureau aims to do for Boston, I have had an opportunity to study the various charitable and civic movements in my home city. It has also given me additional opportunity to see how the other half lives, though I can assure my friends that my work with the Alumni Bureau is a sufficient eye-opener. It has also been my privilege to serve as president of the board of directors of the Lynn Neighborhood House Association, which is a fair sample of the institutions which the Alumni Bureau endeavors to help. The Central Council of Civic Organizations, of which I am also president, is another intensely interesting proposition, attempting as it does to weld together and to correlate all the diverse civic organizations in Boston. In summing up, may I merely say that I have spent six very busy and extremely happy years since graduating with the good old class of 1910. I sincerely hope that all my classmates can look back on this same period with the same feeling of satisfaction and pleasure that I do. Member: Boston City Club, Chamber of Commerce, Economic Club, Harvard Club of Boston, Monday Evening Club, Pilgrim Publicity Association, Republican Club of Massachusetts, Rotary Club, all in Boston; Albemarle Golf Club, Men's Club of Newton, Newton Amateur Opera Association, Newton Club, Neighborhood Club, The Players (associate member), Dramateurs, all in Newton.

JAY ELMER CATES

The year 1910-11 was spent in the real estate business in Portland, Oregon. But the call of the East became so loud that I decided to return to New York City. The summer of 1911 I spent on a wheat ranch of six thousand acres in Gilliam County, Oregon. I drove a four-horse team a couple of months, and they ran away only once. I had let my whiskers run riot and beat out the frouziest looking prof. on record. Doubtless the leaders saw through their blinders my whiskers whiskering in the wind, and the great race was on. However, I am alive to tell the tale and I hope the horses are. The wagon, I know, nearly died on the spot; but I hope it may still be in service. I came to New York City and soon took a teaching position in a Jewish institution where I taught grammar and high-school subjects. This gave an opportunity for my enemies to spread the report that I was a converted Jew. That greatness can never be thrust upon me. I don't think I even look the part. I entered Union Theological Seminary across the way from Columbia University in 1912. Bishop Wilson ordained me a deacon in the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1913 and two years later an elder. He appointed me to St. Paul's Church here in Tarrytown, where I am entering my fourth year of service. I am within a stone's throw of Sleepy Hollow, but am not Rip Van Winkle's grandson. I blew into fleeting fame in June, 1914, when the I. W. W.'s sent an elite delegation from New York to inform the people of Tarrytown just how culpable Mr. Rockefeller was in causing the Colorado strike. This altruistic purpose, alas! was rudely, if not wickedly, received by the police, who reduced what promised to be the nucleus of a world-wide crusade against plutocratic wealth into a common street brawl, almost in the twinkling of an eye. No matter how scurvy certain of the bunch may have been, they threatened to put us into a hole on the issue of free speech. Then I stepped forward, as a son of Harvard should do, and offered to debate the question with them on my church lawn. The town nearly exploded at me, but I received hundreds of letters commending my position, as did the New York papers. The whole episode culminated abruptly on the Fourth of July when the side of a Lexington Avenue apartment was blown out and certain of these agitating gentlemen were agitated for all time into another world. If any of you journey up the Hudson, don't forget to stop in and see me. I have a large house and could even start a class boarding-house. I am not married. I thought for a while I would be, but am not. If you know of an available lass, let me know.

He is purchasing agent for the Atlas Tack Co. at Fairhaven, and resides at 27 Green St., Fairhaven. He married, on April 26, 1916, Sallie La Pierre, at Cambridge.

FRANK STANTON CAWLEY

I taught languages in 1910-1911 at St. Andrew's School, Concord, Mass. In September, 1911, I sailed from New York for Trieste, going to Munich by way of Vienna. About October 20, I was matriculated at the University of Munich as a student of German literature and philology; I spent two semesters there. In the spring of 1912 I received an appointment as Austin Teaching Fellow in German at Harvard, and returned home in the fall of that year after a trip through Germany, France, and England. For the past three years I have been an instructor in German on half time, studying to prepare myself for the doctor's degree, which I expect to take, facultate volante, in this year of 1916. My thesis is entitled: "George Eliot and Germany." Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

CARL CHADWICK

In September, 1910, I began my career as a teacher of French at Middlesex School. During my four years in college, I had unfortunately neglected to specialize, so that after my graduation, I found that no profession, other than the one into which I drifted, lay open to me. For three years I learnt much and taught little. At the end of five years, I had come to the conclusion that as far as teaching anything worth while to boys was concerned, I should never be a howling success; moreover, I found that I myself was learning less and less as years passed. I decided in 1915 that the sooner I started afresh, the better. In the meantime, I had married in 1911, and acquired a daughter in 1914. Apart from these two events, my life had been uneventful. Even they might be considered quite normal. Thus, in September, 1915, we decided to risk the perils of submarines, and emigrate. It so happened that the danger we least dreaded almost got us in London: Zeppelins. We could see them as clearly as you can see the spire of Memorial Hall from the Yard. However, their aim was poor and they missed us by three quarters of a mile. At last we reached Paris, where I left my family and spent the winter of 1915-1916 chauffeuring for the Franco-American hospital at St. Valery en Caux. In March, 1916, I came back to Paris to be present at the birth of our second child which turned out to be a boy. At present, my intentions are to make my home in France, and journalism my profession. Member: St. Botolph Club, Boston, Mass.

THEOPHILUS PARSONS CHANDLER, 2D

I went to work in the fall of 1910 in a shoe manufacturer's office, where I am still located. I spend all my spare time and most of my vacations on the militia battery that I joined while in college. Married on April 18, 1914, and moved to Dedham, Mass. I am a graduate of The Training School, M. V. M. Member: Dedham Country and Polo Club, Dedham, Mass.

EDWARD REDCLIFFE CHAPIN

Only by contrast with the exploits of venturesome classmates can an account of my life-history since graduation be of interest. I have been in Boston and in Cambridge since 1910, where I have been able to hear the delighted shouts of the multitudes every time Yale has suffered defeat. The noise arising from this cause, by the way, has been so incessant that the slumbers of sober-minded individuals have been much interfered with. Since July, 1911, I have been in the employ of Little, Brown and Company, publishers and booksellers, of Boston. Before the great wave of enthusiasm for preparedness swept the country, I joined the militia and have now served two years and a half with the First Corps of Cadets. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

JOHN REVERE CHAPIN

[Mr. Chapin has nothing to add to his last report.]

STUART CHASE

Since graduating from college, I have been largely engaged in mastering the profession of expert accounting. This work has taken me into many different types of business, and over a considerable area of geographical territory. I have recently passed the state examinations for the degree of certified public accountant. As an avocation I have been doing some sociological investigating and writing. Mrs. Chase and I, on our honeymoon, went to the city of Rochester, N. Y., passed ourselves off as a jobless, homeless couple, and acquired a great deal of first-hand information in regard to unemployment, wages and condition of women in industry, the white slave problem, etc.,—information, unfortunately, that never finds its way into college. Mrs.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Chase and I have also been up in northern Ontario—almost to Hudson's Bay on a 300-mile, guideless canoe trip that we found very interesting. Houghton Mifflin are now publishing a book that Mrs. Chase and I wrote called A Honeymoon Experiment. Member: Boston Chamber of Commerce, Fabian Club of Boston.

AUSTIN WALTER CHEEVER

I entered the Harvard Medical School in September, 1910. Besides the regular school work, I spent summers in the out-patient clinics of some of the Boston hospitals, and served a term as house officer at the Babies' Hospital in Jamaica Plain. I was elected to the Innominate Club and Boylston Medical Society. After graduating in June, 1914, I passed the Massachusetts State Board examinations, and in October accepted the appointment of surgical house officer at the Massachusetts General Hospital. After completing half the service I obtained an honorable discharge on account of ill-health following an accidental infection. I now hold the appointment of graduate assistant in the skin department of the Massachusetts General Hospital, and am practising medicine at present in Mattapan, intending to open an office in Boston after some further study in dermatology in Boston and elsewhere. Member: Massachusetts Medical Society, Boston Medical Library, New England Botanical Club, Boston, Boston Malacological Club, Harvard Medical Alumni Association.

FANG SHIH CHIEN

After graduation in 1910, I entered the Graduate School of Business Administration in the fall, where I stayed for two years. In August, 1912, I left Boston for China, by making a trip through England, Germany, and Russia via Siberia. Soon after I returned to China, and I was given a position in the Central Bank of China (the Government Central Bank) to help in the work of reorganization. In June, 1913, I was appointed sub-manager of the Hankow branch of the Bank of China; but I was soon removed on account of political changes. In November of the same year, I joined the Salt Revenue Department occupying the position of Assistant English Secretary. In 1914, the next year, I was sent to Yunnan as the district inspector of the Yunnan District Inspectorate of Salt Revenues, and I was posted there for one year. In August 1915, I was transferred to the present position,—the Chinese secretary of the Chief Inspectorate of Chinese Government Salt Revenues.

DAVID BRADLEE CHILDS

The first two years after I left college I spent in insurance offices, learning the business. The next two years I was manager of a Safe Deposit Vaults, and the last two years I have been in the insurance business for myself as a broker. During this time I have been actively interested in the Harvard Club of Kansas City, the principal object of which is to get young men in this vicinity to go to Harvard. I have been treasurer of this club for three terms, vice-president once, and now am a member of the executive committee. I have also been vice-president and am now president of the Kansas City Delta Upsilon Club.

JAMES FREEMAN CLARKE

[Mr. Clarke has nothing to add to his last report.]

HENRY W. CLEARY

Until June, 1912, I studied at the Harvard Law School and served as an assistant in Government I. In September, 1912, I became associated in business with the Wheatena Company, located at Rahway, N. J. At present I am with that company, and am living in Rahway. An interest in municipal government, developed during college years, has led me into politics, and I am at present a member of the city council and am active in the work of the local Board of Trade. Member: Harvard Club of New Jersey, Harvard Club of New York.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

STANLEY COBB

In the autumn of 1910, I entered the Harvard Medical School. During the next four years the study of medicine naturally took up most of my time; but I served a three-year enlistment in Troop B, First Squadron Cavalry, M. V. M., and in February, 1912, went to Lawrence, Mass., with this organization for a two weeks' tour of strike duty. During the summer of 1912 and 1913, I served as pathological interne on the Boston Floating Hospital, under Dr. Councilman of the Harvard Medical School. My fourth year in the school was spent at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, studying pathology and surgery. On July 1, 1914, I went on service at this hospital as a surgical house officer under Dr. Cushing. On July 10, 1915, I was married to Elizabeth Mason Almy at Cotuit, Mass. In the autumn of 1915 we removed to Baltimore, where I am now working at the Johns Hopkins Medical School, under Dr. W. H. Howell and Dr. Adolph Meyer. I have written: Nesting of a Golden-crowned Kinglet in Massachusetts, A Little Black Rail in Massachusetts, Studies of Inheritance in Rabbits (with Dr. W. E. Castle), Notes from Eastern Alberta (with W. S. Brooks, '09.), A Clinical and Pathological Study of One Hundred Infants (with Dr. R. M. Smith), Haemangioma of the Spinal Cord. Member: Aesculapian Club, Boston, Harvard Club, Baltimore, St. Botolph Club, Boston, Boston Society of Natural History.

RAYMOND WILLARD COBURN

After graduation from college in 1910, my first position was as superintendent of the swimming pool for the Weston Athletic Association. This position I held during the summer. In September, 1910, I went to work for the Massachusetts Highway Commission as a transitman, and for about a year I worked with them and with the Middlesex County Engineer's office, doing survey and construction work. In the fall of 1911, I had a serious accident while playing football on Thanksgiving Day, and came out of the game with a double fracture of my jaw and spent a month at the Newton Hospital. In the winter of 1912, I went down to Columbia University at New York and did a half year's work in the Graduate School, for a master's degree in highway engineering. I came back to Massachusetts in the spring and went to work for the Town of Nahant as construction engineer on special highway work. In October, 1912, I went back to work for the Massachusetts Highway Commission as construction engineer in charge of the Merrimac River Boulevard, which was built under a special act of the Massachusetts Legislature. This work was between the cities of Lowell and Lawrence and while on it I lived in the City of Lowell for about fifteen months. In the spring of 1914, I went to Swampscott as resident engineer on the Humphrey Street widening and paving. This work was done by the Massachusetts Highway Commission under a special act of the Legislature of 1913. I lived in Swampscott till the winter of 1915. During the summer of 1915, I worked in the towns of Manchester, Salem and Swampscott, acting as highway engineer for the town of Manchester and as resident engineer on state road construction in Salem and Swampscott. This year, 1916, I have been doing engineering work in connection with state highway construction at Gloucester during the winter and have recently come to Manchester, where I am now living. My work here is as resident engineer for the town, on special highway work, and I hope to be here in June when 1910 is celebrating her sexennial. Member: Boston Society of Civil Engineers, Massachusetts Highway Association.

CHARLES HOWARD COFFIN

After graduating in 1910, I went to New York City in July, entering the employ of the Columbia Shade Cloth Company, where I worked as clerk and foreman of a small factory until October, 1911. This work did not prove congenial, and I was glad to leave. Shortly afterward, I entered the employ of R. Hoe and Company, printing-press manufacturers on the east side; where I remained until October, 1912, in various capacities. These two years in New York City were very pleasant ones, owing to the fact that I had numerous good and kind friends in the city. I returned to Cambridge for the class day festivities in 1911, but have missed all the class reunions since that time. My first vacation was divided between Cambridge and Nonquitt, Mass., and the next one was spent at Boothbay Harbor, Maine, and Edgartown, Mass. In October, 1912, I received a fine offer from the Sullivan Machinery Company, of Chicago, at a higher salary than I was then receiving, and with far better chances of advancement. I left at once for Chicago, spending ten days in the shops and office there. I was then transferred to Huntington, West Virginia, where I have since had charge of a warehouse and office under the supervision of a travelling manager. This concern manufactures mining and quarrying machinery. The work has been very congenial, though I should hardly care to spend my life here. I spent one vacation at my home in Winnetka, Illinois, where I assisted at my sister's wedding. In August, 1914, I went east to New York, Boston, Nonquitt, Mass., and Syracuse for my vacation. Last year, I varied the trip a little by taking the boat from Norfolk, Va., to Providence, thence to Nonquitt, Mass., and Boothbay Harbor, and returned via Boston and New York. In November, 1913, I was present at the organization of the Harvard Club of West Virginia, which occurred at Charleston, W. Va., on the day of the Yale game. There was much rejoicing at the result of the game (Harvard, 15; Yale, 5). There were eleven Harvard men and one Yale man present. The latter took the defeat handsomely, and treated the crowd. I regret to say, that, so far as I am aware, the club has never had another meeting, due partly, no doubt, to the fact that the majority of the Harvard men in the state are in the extreme northern part, two hundred miles from Huntington and Charleston. I might also add that I was one of the organizers of the Unitarian Church of Huntington, which started a year ago. I have acted as secretary since that time.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

HENRY AUGUSTUS COIT

After graduation Mr. Coit was employed in the West for a time; and then was with the Long Island Railroad Company and Good Roads Machinery Company in New York State and Pennsylvania. In December, 1915, he joined the British Army in Canada, the Princess Patricia's Regiment, and is at present in England.

FELIX COLE

From 1910 to 1911, I was at the College of France, Paris; 1911 to 1912, on editorial staff of the Boston Herald; 1912 to 1916, at Petrograd, Russia; 1912, January to July, with M. S. Friede, American importer; 1912 to 1914, on staff and director and liquidator of The Argus Company (the first illustrated magazine in Russia); 1914, with Associated Press (American); 1915 to 1916, on staff of the American consulate; 1916, American Vice-Consul.. I have written one book entitled: Sorell (G.) Reflections sur Violence.

JOHN COLEMAN

I worked as a mechanical engineer for the American Brake Company, 1934 North Broadway, St. Louis, Mo., from July, 1910, to May, 1911. On account of poor health I went to California and sought out-door work. May 15, 1911, I went to work cutting timber for Butte County Lumber Company, Blinzig, Cal. After working there one year, I was employed by the government as a forest patrolman during the summer months. When the season was over, I went prospecting for gold in the Plumas Forest Reservation. On February 6, 1913, I purchased 70 acres of old wheat land, which I am now developing into a citrus and an almaceate orchard. Member: The Orange Cove Chamber of Commerce, The Orange Cove Community Club, The Orosi Men's Club.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

HAROLD ERNEST COLSON

I taught in the Waban School in Newton, Mass., during the first year after graduation; but since September, 1911, I have been at The Mercersburg Academy in Mercersburg, Pa. At this private boarding school of 390 boys I began to teach three subjects, which have at present dwindled to a few classes in German only, for I am now the head disciplinarian of this school, and this position ranks me next to the headmaster in all matters relating to the disciplinary side of the school life. I travelled through the West and Canada in the summer of 1912. I spent the summer of 1913 in the British Isles and on the Continent, having letters of introduction which granted me special opportunities for a study of English, German and Dutch schools and universities. I was also in Europe in the summer of 1914, travelling through much of the war zone on the western front and remaining in Germany for several weeks after war was declared.

HENRY DOUGLAS COLTON

Immediately after graduation I became director of the Arlington playground. In September, 1910, I became principal of the Walpole (Mass.) High School. At that time the school had one hundred and fifty pupils and seven teachers. Besides teaching chemistry, geometry, physiology and botany, I coached the athletic teams and introduced compulsory public speaking. I joined the Walpole Grange, Men's Club and Board of Trade. The next summer, 1911, I was camp counsellor at "Homewood Camp" in New Hampshire. I returned to Walpole in the fall. The school now had eight teachers and one hundred and sixty pupils. This year I introduced physical training and was principal of the Walpole Evening High School. In the spring I conducted the graduating class to Washington. I joined the Masonic and Odd Fellows lodges. In the summer of 1912 I built a small cottage at Brant Rock, Mass. I returned to Walpole in the fall and found an increase of fifteen pupils at the school. In January, 1913, I took the Boston examinations in high school teaching.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

In June, 1913, I was elected junior master in Mechanic Arts High School. In August, 1913, I took a 100-mile tramping trip through the White Mountains. In September, 1913, I began my first year at Mechanic Arts, and taught: elementary science, physics and algebra, and was appointed teacher-coach, having charge of all athletics. June 25, 1914, I married Mabel H. Stevens, of Melrose, Mass. September, 1914, second year at Mechanics, I taught elementary science, and coached football. May 2, 1915, our little daughter, Priscilla, was born. I spent the summer of 1915 in Kansas (Beloit), on a wheat farm; later I took an extensive trip through the Northern states and Canada. September, 1915, I began my third year at Mechanics; also I am teaching English at East Boston Evening High School. Member: Masonic, Orient Lodge, Norwood, Mass., Odd Fellows, Reliance Lodge, Walpole, Mass., Grange, Walpole, Mass., High School Masters' Club, Boston.

CLIFTON JONES COMEY

Immediately following graduation, until August 1, 1910, I completed putting in a card index catalogue system, begun in spare time during my senior year, for the C. H. Tenney Company, of Boston, Mass. On the above date, I entered the employ of the Standard Crayon Manufacturing Company, of Danvers, Mass., as a shipper and apprentice. In order to familiarize myself with all parts of the business, I took turns at moulding wax and hydraulic pressed crayons; then making pastel crayons and white and colored dustless chalk for blackboards, and the common school chalk crayons, textile, carpenters' chalk, tailors' and metal workers', etc; thence to the printing room, feeding presses, cutting, scoring, etc; then to the box room, rolling and packing rooms, and at length permanently into the office. All this time, too, I was doing road work spring and fall, making all cities of importance from Maine through Pennsylvania; and West through Michigan and Illinois. I now do no road work, and am indoors all the time, being assistant treasurer and assistant manager. One of the pleasantest parts of my work has been the meeting of some classmates at the factory, and running across many of them in my travels. Member: Mosaic Lodge of Masons of Danvers, Mass., Masonic Club of Danvers, Mass. •

JOHN OWEN CONNOLLY

I went to work for the Lackawanna Steel Company, Buffalo, N. Y., about the first of July, 1910. Five members of the 1910 class started at this plant about the same time. Each of us was put to work inspecting finished steel products in the various rolling mills. The work was hard, the hours long and the compensation, at times, due to shut-downs in the mills, poor. The night work every other week, of thirteen and a half hours' duration, was indeed a hardship. One of our small crew lasted about two weeks, a second member departed in three months' time, and a third had enough at the end of four months. After five weeks of inspecting, I was promoted to the Bessemer Steel Mill as assistant foreman. I worked along in this position until April, 1911, when I departed, leaving one tenacious member of the class of 1910 behind. The tenacious one lasted about six or seven months after my departure. Did he quit? No, not exactly; but then, that's his story. I went to Pittsburgh from Buffalo to look for a position; but all I got was interviews—said interviews always ending thusly: "I am very sorry, but—" I did enjoy my month's stay in the steel city, met some very kind people, and one Yale man was kind enough at the end of the month to loan me ten dollars to reach Boston. The summer of 1911 I stayed in Boston, and in the fall I returned to college to do research work in metallography under Professor Sauveur. January 1, 1912, I took a position as assistant metallurgist with the American Steel and Wire Company here in Worcester and I am still doing my little part to improve the products and metallurgical methods of the above-named company. Member: Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, Woburn Lodge, No. 908, Lakeside Boat Club, Worcester, Mass., American Society of Testing Materials.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

HENRY JOSEPH CONROY

The year following graduation I spent in the Graduate School at Cambridge, and in June, 1911, I secured a degree of master of arts in chemistry. In the following July, I received a position as chemist with the Bay State Insulated Wire and Cable Company, of Hyde Park, Mass., where I remained for about two years. During this period I married, and took up a residence in Milton, close to Hyde Park. During the spring and summer of 1913, I left this position and set up a laboratory for the practice of analytical and consulting chemistry. In the fall, however, I entered into a contract with my former employer to act as his superintendent and I am still in that position. Member: American Chemical Society, Catholic Alumni Sodality of Boston.

FOREST HARWOOD COOKE

Since 1912, I have been teaching at the Thacher School, Ojai Valley, Ventura County, Cal. Led by accident to this place and into this profession, I find them both wonderful,—boundless.

JOSEPH RANDOLPH COOLIDGE, 3D

After leaving college I entered the Harvard Forestry School and received the degree of M.F. in 1912. In connection with my training I got a position in the United States Forest Service and spent the summer of 1911 in the Cascade Mountains, working on an original survey and "timber estimate." In December, 1911, with P. P. Brooks, Dartmouth, '10, and J. S. Rogers, I formed the partnership of Coolidge, Brooks and Rogers, consulting foresters. My partner, Rogers, who was a special student in the Forest School, gave up his course at that time and took charge of our earliest work. After graduating, we opened offices at 89 State St., Boston, and have been there ever since. Our business has developed rapidly and we have made a specialty of operating portable saw-mills for the manufacture of lumber. In April, 1913, I became engaged to Anna Cabot of

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Boston and was married the following July. My daughter Julia was born in March, 1914, and my son J. Randolph Coolidge, 4th, on February 17, 1916. As my father and grandfather are both alive, my son is the fourth oldest son of an oldest son all of the same name and all living at the same time. Member: Longwood Cricket Club, Boston City Club, Interchange Club, Boston, Mass., New Hampshire Society for Preservation of Forests, Director Colonial Lumber Company.

JOSEPH ARTHUR COOLIDGE

I attended the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences at Harvard University during 1911 and 1912, specializing in mathematics. In October, 1912, I was appointed teacher in the Boston Y. M. C. A. Coöperative Engineering School, where I have been teaching for the last four years. My subjects are, physics, trigonometry, and calculus.

WILLIAM ANGUS CORLEY

I left college at the end of sophomore year to enter the Naval Academy as a member of the class of 1912. After a year of Annapolis—known to the initiated as “crabtown”—I made my first summer cruise, along the coast of New England. This cruise was in the old “Hartford”, and I, as well as the rest of my class aboard her, became highly skilled in the science of polishing bright-work before the cruise was over. The two summers following were also spent in cruising—the first on the “Indiana,” and the second in the “Massachusetts”—both to European ports. I graduated in the summer of 1912, and joined the “Georgia” as an ensign. The first notable occurrence on her was in February, 1913; we were lying in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, at the time, and had just finished coaling ship when the orders came to proceed to Vera Cruz at once. We took aboard stores and extra ammunition, and reported ourselves ready three hours later, only to be delayed three or four more hours before getting final orders to proceed. We entered Vera Cruz harbor on

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

February 15, 1913,—just to remind us that the circumstances under which the "Maine" had been blown up fifteen years to a day before were not dissimilar. This was the first of four "Vera Cruises" I had on this vessel; we saw no active service, however, for we left Mexican waters shortly before the taking of the city, and arrived there too late to share in the fighting. We also did duty of the same sort in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, in the summer and fall of 1914; but, though prepared to land at any time, such proceeding never became necessary. During this period I was, of course, also engaged in the routine duties of an officer aboard ship, and the "Georgia" carried out the usual target practices. In the competition year of 1914-1915, in fact, she won the gunnery trophy. Early in January, 1916, she was found unfit for further sea service until extensive repairs had been made. I am now under orders to the "Nevada" as soon as she is put in commission. Late in September, 1915, I received my commission as a lieutenant (junior grade), to date from June 8, 1915. A month later I married Miss Anita Carmody at Brooklyn, N. Y. Member: Army and Navy Club, Washington, D. C.

SAMUEL BERNARD CORR

At the termination of my sophomore year (June, 1908,) I went into the business of reproducing mirrors of the Colonial period, with three partners. As a result of so many partners, business failed. Just before Christmas of the same year I entered the employ of one of Boston's large department stores as salesman in the shoe department. In March, 1909, I was promoted to the position of buyer of this department. In April, 1910, I left this position to go into the real-estate business in Baltimore, Maryland. This proving unsuccessful, I entered the employ, the summer of the same year, of one of the large department stores of Baltimore. I left in November, 1910, to become New England representative of a Baltimore shirt-waist manufacturer, relocating in Boston as headquarters. In the summer of

During the winter 1911-12 I was advertising manager for the Beacon Department Store, Cambridge; and in the spring of 1912 re-entered the employ of the Sight-Seeing Auto Company, in the same capacity as before: office manager. In January, 1913, I secured a position as director of publicity for the Buzzards Bay Electric Company, making my headquarters at Sandwich, Mass. During the fall of 1913, I became secretary of the Cape Cod Board of Trade, to which office I 1911 I became office manager of the Sight-Seeing Auto have been re-elected every year since. In the fall of 1914 I left the employ of the Buzzards Bay Electric Company to start, in association with Edwin M. Robinson of the class of 1912, the Corr-Robinson Press, doing a job-printing business, at Sandwich, Mass. In the spring of 1915 this co-partnership was merged with the Cape Cod Syndicate, publishing a list of weekly newspapers on Cape Cod, under the name of the Shawme Press, Inc. In June of the same year I associated myself with L. C. Hall of Wareham in the publication of the Cape Cod Magazine, under the firm name of the Cape Cod Publishing Company. I have written various small articles and editorials, but nothing of any importance. Member: De Witt Clinton Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Sandwich, Mass., Pilgrim Publicity Association, Boston, Mass.

HARRY CLIFFORD CRIDLAND

Previous to four years ago I was employed by the Joyce, Cridland Company, manufacturers of hoisting jacks, as steel-foundry superintendent and chemist. For the past four years I have devoted my life to building up the Sunday schools of this, Montgomery County, as the general secretary of the Montgomery County Sunday School Association, which, of course, is the local representative of the International Sunday School Association, with office in Chicago. Our activities are varied, from giving personal advice in our office, to the conduct of conferences, conventions, parades and training institutes for Sunday school workers. There are 189 schools in our county and they afford a good-sized man's job. Member: Church of the United Brethren in Christ, Dayton, Ohio. Organized Men's Bible Class, same church.

CLARENCE PETER CRIMMINS

[Mr. Crimmins has nothing to add to his last report.]

DOUGLAS CROCKER

I completed the work necessary for an A.B. degree in June, 1909. After travelling in Europe for two months, I started working in the paper mills of Crocker, Burbank and Company in Fitchburg, Mass. So thorough was my Harvard education deemed that I was entrusted at the very start with important and responsible jobs, such as sweeping the floors, shining brass, oiling, etc. My services were rewarded by a salary of nine dollars per week. In June, 1911, I was made a general superintendent, and shortly afterward a director of the company. Since then I have been busy holding down my job. Besides my work, I have done very little except indulge in such vacations as I have been able to take. Notable among these was the 1910 triennial celebration, at which I was present from start to finish. For the last two years, I have been a member of the school committee of Fitchburg. I am not married. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Union Club of Boston, Tennis and Racquet Club, Boston, Harvard Club of New York.

GEORGE HARTLEY CROSBIE

I was married on Christmas Day in my senior year. As I had worked my way through college, I was heavily in debt; so I went into the insurance business, with the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company. About 1911, I began writing accident and health insurance for the Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York, besides my life insurance. At that time, I began devoting all my time to the medical profession, and today know practically all the physicians and surgeons in and around Boston. In the month of June, 1914, the Fidelity and Casualty Company offered prizes for the largest amount of paid-for business in the one month. I stood in the second class in the United States, for which I received a gold medal and $40 in cash. For the year 1914, I received a prize of $125, which represented the second largest amount of business produced in New England. At the end of the year 1915, I still stood as second high man in the amount of gross business on the books of the Fidelity and Casualty and received a prize of $150. I also stood as high man for the year 1915 in the amount of life insurance, written and paid for in the Northwestern for the one year. I have got to the point where I believe a man will do better and more work in nine months than he will in twelve. Therefore, I only work about that time in every year. In February, 1915, I had the honor of owning one of those things commonly called a "Tin Lizzie;" but as Mr. Ford is the latest Ford joke, I decided that I did not want to deprive him of any honor, so I sold it and bought an Oldsmobile. As I have done nothing in the past six years for myself, country, and class, I believe there is nothing more to be said, and I will leave it to one member of the class to tell how each family can produce the most mice to each square foot of pantry shelf.

I was at the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, department of education, 1912 to 1914. I was superintendent of schools, Franklin and Wrentham, Mass., 1914 to present. Member: Orient Lodge, A. CHESTER WILLIAM YERXA CURRIE

Ever since my marriage I have been in newspaper or magazine work. I was city editor of the Boston Traveler, associate editor, for a year, of Munsey's Magazine, day city editor of the New York Press, and have been with other New York newspapers, including the New York Evening World and the New York American, in various capacities.

DANIEL THOMAS CURTIN

At the opening of the school-year in September, 1910, I started in as instructor in German and mathematics at the Newman School, Hackensack, New Jersey, and in the spring of 1911 I took charge of the baseball squad and remained in the capacity of coach until the end of the school-term. In the summer of 1911 I took a trip to Europe which was confined mostly to France, Switzerland and Germany. The fall of 1911 found me back again at Newman School, and at the end of this school-year I took a party of six boys from the school on a trip through Europe. This trip was through France, the Rhine country and the British Isles, and in the fall of 1912 I was once more back at Newman School. The summer of 1913 was spent in the Adirondacks, and in the fall of 1913 I started teaching in Boston at the West Roxbury High School, from which school I graduated. In June, 1914, I started on a trip to Europe with Transylvania as my object as I was to write an article on that country for "Travel Magazine." I was in Budapest the day Austria declared war on Servia, and I had the opportunity of seeing the first shots of the war fired, the attack being centred upon Belgrade. I continued on my trip, however, to Transylvania and there gathered the material which I later used in "Travel Magazine." While in a country town not far from Kronstadt, I was arrested as a Servian spy, a full account of which is related in an article written by me entitled "In Warring Hungary" which appeared in the March, 1915, issue of "Travel Magazine." Upon my arrival in Amsterdam, I made connections with a New York newspaper syndicate, and shortly afterward took a trip through East Prussia where I spent three weeks with Von Hindenburg's army. One of the most thrilling experiences of my career occurred in this part of the world, for while with the official court photographer of the Imperial Government, when the troops were retreating under fire of the Russian guns, a soldier who was across the street from the machine in which I was riding had his head blown off and both the photographer and myself swear that we saw the man take three steps without any head. In October of 1914 I was in Holland and saw the flight of the Belgian refugees from their country into Holland at the time Antwerp was being bombarded. In November, 1914, on the day of the Harvard and Yale game when Harvard so impressively dedicated the Yale bowl, I was in Zurich, Switzerland, and I was wondering how the game was going in far-off New Haven. It was a good many weeks when I found out. In June, 1915, I was in Roumania and with a fellow-correspondent, Robert Dunn, crossed from the Austrian lines in the Bukowina to the Russian army. Our trip across the River Pruth was on a pontoon bridge which was burning in places. I shortly afterward returned to Roumania and was in Servia at the time the typhus plague was raging, about which an article appeared, amongst other papers, in the New York Evening Post and the Boston Globe. This trip took me through Greece to Athens, to Malta and back to Marseilles, and I proceeded through France to London and later made a trip to Neuve Chapelle at which place I saw the crack Lincolns, 1,200 strong, go into battle and about one-half dozen come out. Four of these were badly gassed. On August 27th I sailed for home and arrived in New York the day before Labor Day. After two months' stay, I sailed from New York on the steamship "Rotterdam" and I am now back again in the place where they are making history every day. I have written: In Warring Hungary (Travel Magazine, March, 1915,), Sweden's Role in the War (World's Work Magazine, December, 1915).

JOHN ARNOLD CURTIS

Shortly after graduation, I sailed for Europe, visiting England, Holland, Belgium, Germany and Switzerland. After a three months' tour, I returned to this country and started working for Rice and Hutchins in their Curtis Factory, Marlboro, making shoes. On November 29, 1910, I was married in Newton, returning to Marlboro to live. After working in the various departments of the shoe factory and having become thoroughly familiar with the factory detail, I was made second assistant superintendent and became responsible for the quality of the product. In 1912, I served one year in the city government as councilman. The following year I was defeated for the office of alderman. The same year I was elected vice-president of the Board of Trade of this city and member of the executive committee of that same body. I also became a trustee of the Marlboro Savings Bank at this time. In 1915 my third son was born and I found the apartment where I had lived up to this time quite too small for my family requirements. In June the cellar of my nine-room house of Dutch colonial type was started and six months later I moved into my new home. In December I ran again for alderman and was elected by a large majority. This same month I became first assistant superintendent of the factory upon the resignation of the person who had previously held that position. In addition to my factory work, of late I have taken frequent trips to the Middle West, visiting the larger class of customers in that section who deal directly with the factory. Member: Union Club, Marlboro. Harvard Club of Boston, Interchange Club, Boston.

BRONSON MURRAY CUTTING

I spent the winter of 1909-1910 in southern California, came to New Mexico in July of the same year, and have lived here ever since. I have been interested in political affairs; was a delegate to the first Republican state convention in Las Vegas, September, 1911; about the same time was one of the founders and on the executive committee of the New Mexico Progressive Republican League; joined the Progressive Party in 1912, and was treasurer of the state central committee of said party till 1914, and chairman since that time. I have been active in a movement to retain the local (Santa Fe) variety of Spanish architectural style in buildings erected here, was chairman of a committee appointed in 1913 with that object in view, and have been on the City Planning Board since 1911. In 1912 was appointed Colonel and A. D. C. in the New Mexico National Guard. In the same year I bought controlling interest in the New Mexico Printing Company; and since that time have been president of same, and publisher of the "Santa Fe New Mexican" (daily), "New Mexican Review" (weekly), and "El Nuevo Mexicano" (Spanish weekly). Have been chairman of the publicity committee of the Santa Fe Chamber of Commerce since 1913; and in 1915 was elected a governor of the Southwestern Anthropological Association and a director of the New Mexico Taxpayers' League. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Union Club, New York, Santa Fe Club, Santa Fe.

MARCUS HELE DALL

I find this great adventure highly interesting. The abundance of beautiful things in Europe where I toured after graduation inspired me with a zeal to improve the looks of America. With this in view, upon returning to Boston, I took up work with Frederic Law Olmsted, in Brookline, where I lived at the home of my married sister. The three years of training at Olmsted's enabled me to take my master's degree in the landscape department of Harvard in the spring of 1914, after a year and a half of work in Robinson and the Arboretum. It was good to be back in Cambridge, the haunt of gay undergraduates. For vacation, during this period, I taught at Camp Marienfeld in New Hampshire, where a friendship with Hanford Henderson, the author and educator, gave me a realization of values which led me to join him in developing an out-door school for boys in North Carolina. Here landscape problems abounded, and mingled with duties of group master to balance a life of activity in the sunshine of the pine forests. The success of the first year led to spending a second winter at the school, where an ever increasing love for the founder made life joyous. During the summer recess I went West to the exposition and camped with a Boston boy I was tutoring in the Alpine Peaks of the Sierras. We travelled North to Vancouver and came East by the Canadian Rockies to find Lake Louise a spectacle devoid of the beauty of Lake Tahoe in California; but the peaks themselves are far finer than I ever imagined. Soldiers appeared on all sides as we journeyed to Montreal; so that when we got back to Tohanto, I aided with added zest in war relief work for England. Thus six weeks rushed by before going South for the winter. Cambridge in June and Plattsburg are now in anticipation. So much for my experience in this jolly, alluring existence. If fate casts me on a desert isle to be devoured by cannibals, I hope as they munch the bones they'll exclaim, "He was a man of taste."

JOHN DANO

I attended the Harvard Law School in the year 1910-1911. In July, 1912, I was examined for admission to the bar in Pennsylvania, being admitted to practise law on October 7, 1912. I have practised law since the latter date at Scranton, Pa.

FRANCIS WRIGHT DAVIS

I started with the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company, July 5th, 1910. I was given a very lowly position in the inspection department, and sort of held "on probation" for two months. The head of the experimental department then came around and asked me if I was working for my health or for my living; I assured him in earnest terms of the necessity of keeping body and soul together and that I was just barely succeeding. From that time on as they say progress was slow but perceptible. I was hurried through the factory, then into the experimental department, and later the truck sales department, in May, 1911. From that time until June, 1915, I remained in the sales department. The Pierce-Arrow Company shipped a quantity of trucks to the Allied Governments in the latter part of 1914 and early 1915, and in June, 1915, I was sent to England to look after these government shipments. During ten months abroad I dodged Zeppelins in London, drank coffee in the Cafe de la Paix in Paris; and spent a week at the British general headquarters in France. This was quite the most interesting week in the total of six years. I returned to America in April, 1916. I am now in the truck engineering department as assistant chief engineer. I am not married, nor discouraged, and see plenty of work ahead. I have written various technical articles for magazines. Member: Wanakah Country Club, Wanakah, N. Y., Harvard Club of Buffalo, Royal Automobile Club, London, Eng., Society of Automobile Engineers, New York.

ISAAC DAVIS

I went to the Johns Hopkins Medical School for the next four years after graduating from Harvard. I was graduated with the degree of M.D., in June, 1914. From June, 1914, to June, 1915, I was an interne in the St. Francis Hospital of Pittsburgh. Since then I have been practising medicine. Member: Harvard Club of Western Pennsylvania, Montefiore Hospital Association.

NATHAN SMITH DAVIS, 3D

As I finished college in three years, I had completed one year's work in the Rush Medical School when I received my degree in June, 1910. I spent the summer of 1910 at the Marine Biological Laboratories at Woods Hole, Mass., doing work in physiology. The next three years were spent in the Medical School. The summer of 1911 was spent travelling in Europe; the summer of 1912, I remained in the Medical School. As a result of this, I was able to begin my internship at the Presbyterian Hospital in Chicago in March, 1913, though I did not receive my degree until June, 1913. I remained at the hospital for two years, spending one as a surgical and one as a medical interne. In February, 1914, I had a vacation, during which I went to Jamaica, Panama, Costa Rica and Cuba. In the fall of 1912 I went to Cambridge for the Harvard-Princeton game, in 1913 I went to the triennial, and in the fall of 1915, I went to the Harvard-Yale game. Since completing my hospital work I have been practising medicine, assisting my father, and instructing in physical diagnosis and in medicine in the Rush Medical School. In the spring of 1915, I joined Battery C, F. F. A., Ill. N. G., an organization similar to Battery A, of Boston. I have written: Diverticula of the Duodenum (Trans. Chicago Pathological Society, 1913), The articles on Diseases of the Thyroid Gland and of the Kidneys in the "Handbook of Therapy" (published by the American Medical Association in 1915). Member: University Club, Chicago, Ill., Chicago Medical Society, Illinois State Medical Society, American Medical Association, Nu Sigma Nu Medical Fraternity.

PAUL DAVIS

Since leaving Cambridge in 1909 I have been engaged in, though not wedded to, newspaper work. Chiefly I have been beating the drum of publicity for theatrical managers—quite a procession of them. At present I am with Henry W. Savage, class of 1880. Like most habitues of Broadway and Forty-second Street, my hope and expectation is some day to get "back to the farm." Painted scenery palls in time. Still, though I don't sit up until morning singing "this is the life;" I feel cautious about getting back, at least too far back to the farm. So only agents with farms not more than 55 minutes from Broadway need apply. In 1914 I went to Mexico as correspondent for several newspapers, saw Huerta totter to his fall, and was chucked into one of Mexico's suburban bastiles. After languishing in the prescribed fashion for several weeks, I was released and live to tell the tale at every opportunity.

WILLIAM ERNEST DAVIS

On July 14, I was employed by the Lackawanna Steel Company, at Buffalo, N. Y. I commenced work as an inspector in the structural, plate and merchant mills. In 1911, I held the position of mixer foreman in the Bessemer department, leaving this position in April, 1912, when I was employed by Robert W. Hunt and Company, engineers, of Chicago, Ill. In June, I was sent to the Maryland Steel Company, at Baltimore, Md., where I remained until April, 1913. I was then transferred to the Alynna Steel Company, Limited, at Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario. On November 25, 1916, I was again transferred to the Illinois Steel Company, at Gary, Indiana, where I am at present.

WILLIAM HENRY DAVIS, JR.

Upon graduating I went with the F. O. Clark Engraving Company, Boston, in charge of the art department. In February, 1911, I went with the American Bank Note Company, New York, as salesman in the typographical department. In this capacity I became acquainted with many advertising men in the automobile business, and, about a year later, accepted a position with the United States Motor Company, as advertising manager of the Stoddard-Dayton division. Upon the reorganization of that company, early in 1913, I went with the Locomobile Company, at Bridgeport, Conn., to handle the advertising for the Locomobile Truck. It was a good truck; but upon the eight months I spent in Bridgeport I prefer to draw the veil. It was a comedy so rich in humor that even after three years I am just beginning to appreciate its choicest bits. This refers to business only. While here I became engaged to Miss Paul, of New York. Upon my resignation from the

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

Locomobile Company I went with the Lehigh Valley Railroad as a member of the advertising department, in September, 1913. I was married in November of the same year. Two pleasant years were spent with the Lehigh Valley; but the sleepy atmosphere of a good soft railroad job began to get on my nerves. In November, 1915, I joined the Mahin Advertising Company, of Chicago, located in Akron, in charge of advertising for Diamond Tires. Outside of my four years in college, the four months here have proved the most enjoyable and profitable I have experienced. I am inclined to think Horace Greeley was right. There are over 30 Harvard men in Akron, and a thriving University Club. Member: University Club, Akron, Ohio, Masons.

JOHN FREEMAN DAY

I completed the requirements for the college degree in three years and entered the Harvard Law School in the fall of 1909, graduating in 1912. During the summer of 1911 I was engaged in tutoring work. In July, 1912, I entered the office of Breed, Abbott and Morgan, attorneys in New York. In October, I became associated with the law firm of Hawkins, Delafield and Longfellow, in New York. I was there engaged to a great extent in examining the legality of bond issues of numerous municipalities and counties in New York and New Jersey and other states, and in Canada. In this work I examined proceedings relating to many millions of dollars worth of municipal bonds of all kinds, and prepared and directed the proceedings to be taken by municipal bodies and officials in many cities, such as Jersey City, Passaic, Paterson, Hoboken and Trenton, as well as in countless smaller municipalities. Through this work I became greatly interested in questions of municipal government and municipal finance, and acquired an intimate knowledge of city charters of varied types, as well as of state laws and constitutional provisions affecting city government and finance. In some instances work of this kind for municipal corporations and county governments involved drafting remedial statutes or amendments to existing laws for passage by state legislatures.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

I was a member of the speakers' bureau of the Woodrow Wilson College Men's League in New York during the presidential campaign of 1912, and was also actively engaged in work for the Honest Ballot Association at that time as well as in the municipal campaign a year later. During the latter campaign I was a worker in my district for the Fusion (Anti-Tammany) candidates for office in New York. In February, 1913, I enlisted in the 7th Infantry, New York National Guard, Company K, in which I served as long as I was in New York. I was also a member of the New York Harvard Club during that time. I was admitted to the New York bar in February, 1914. On November 19, 1914, I was appointed an assistant attorney in the department of justice at Washington, by the attorney general of the United States. My work in Washington has had to do with federal prosecutions under the so-called "neutrality laws," the bankruptcy law, the national banking law, the customs laws, and with cases relating to Indians, and other matters. I have assisted in the preparation of arguments and briefs in a number of important cases before the Supreme Court of the United States. Among these I may mention the following: Brolan v. United States, in which the federal law prohibiting the importation and sale of opium was held constitutional; Rabinowich v. United States, involving an important question in connection with prosecutions for bankruptcy frauds; Cerecedo v. United States, involving important questions of constitutional law and of the applicability of certain provisions of the constitution to Porto Rico; Weber v. Freed, holding constitutional the federal statute prohibiting the importation of pictures of prize-fights,—in this case motion picture films of the Willard-Johnson fight in Cuba. In all these cases the government was successful.

WINDSOR BOYDEN DAY

Immediately after graduating, I went to Phoenix, Ariz., and during the course of that summer and fall engaged in ranching, in partnership with Morris Carpenter, with the ultimate purpose of establishing an orange business. The partnership engaged in raising alfalfa and hogs and in dairying. The winter of 1911 marked the termination of the partnership, and I conducted ranching alone. I maintained this ranch until the spring of 1913, when I moved back to Massachusetts and entered the employ of the Springfield National Bank. Here I was given the opportunity to install and manage the savings department, of which I am now in charge. On April 14, 1912, and while I was in Arizona, I was married to Sara Elizabeth McHugh of Rock Island, Ill. We were married at Margarita Ranch, which is three miles north of Phoenix, and which we used as a home ranch while we lived in Arizona. Member: Harvard Club, Nayasset Club, Country Club, South Branch Fishing Club, all of Springfield, Mass.

FRANCIS EDWIN DEADY

I have been in the Civil Service for the past four years.

GEORGE WARREN DELANO

I was obliged to leave college at the end of my freshman year, in order to help my father, who was seriously ill. Upon his death in October, 1907, my brother and I assumed his business of carpentering and building, which was established in 1847 by my grandfather, Oliver Baker Delano, and I am at present continuing to run the business under the firm name of O. B. Delano's Sons. We also do whatever draughting is necessary for the work of remodelling or proposed changes or additions. In March, 1913, I was elected one of the town auditors, and have held that office since. Member: B. P. O. Elks, No. 886, Brookline, Brookline Board of Trade, Brookline Gymnastic Athletic Association.

GUY SPALDING DEMING

The summer following graduation, I taught at the Harvard Engineering Camp, returning in the fall to the Graduate School of Applied Science to study for civil engineering.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Scarlet fever in the spring of 1911 made me lose the entire spring term, but did not prevent my teaching during the summer at the Harvard Engineering Camp. A second year at the Graduate School was completed in 1912, and I went immediately to Lowell, Mass., to enter the employ of Arthur T. Safford, consulting hydraulic engineer, with whom I have remained ever since. During the last four years, I have been engaged in many hydraulic problems and investigations, have assisted Mr. Safford in conducting a course on water power engineering at Harvard for three years and am at the date of writing finishing the construction of a slow sand water-filtration plant for the Gardiner Water District, Gardiner, Me. Member: Literary Club, Lowell, Mass., Vesper Country Club, Lowell, Mass., Harvard Club of Lowell, Boston Society of Civil Engineers.

EDWIN LEWIS DERBY, JR.

I have acted in the capacity of mining engineer for the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company since July, 1911.

ARTHUR TYLER DERRY

In the September following graduation I became connected with the Lackawanna Steel Company, where I worked in the mills as inspector until the following January. At that time I accepted an offer from the Titan Steel Casting Company in Newark, New Jersey, where I had charge of the metallurgical and research laboratory for a year and a half until the company went out of business. After a temporary government appointment, I became connected with the metallurgical laboratory of the American Steel and Wire Company in Worcester, Mass., where I was located for almost a year. I then accepted an offer to become assistant metallurgist of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, of Youngstown, Ohio. I was located here for about two years. In September, 1915, I became assistant metallurgist for the Taylor-Wharton Iron and Steel

WILLIAM EDWARD DICKINSON

Uneventful. Studying law evenings.

EDWIN MERRICK DODD, JR.

After leaving college I went to the Harvard Law School where my principal occupations outside of the ordinary routine were acting as one of the editors of the Harvard Law Review and carrying on a Kentucky feud with one of the professors, which was finally settled in an amicable if unheroic fashion. Neither of these activities tended strongly to produce a humble frame of mind, and having thought myself, as an editor of the Law Review, to be an arbiter of the law, it was a decided shock to find, on graduation, that I was only its humble slave. This lesson, however, I have duly learned with the assistance of Messrs. Brandeis, Dunbar and Nutter, and Fish, Richardson, Herriek and Neave in whose offices I have earned my daily bread since graduating from the Law School. I am at present connected with the latter office.

CHESTER WINFIELD DOE

From 1910 to 1912, I was studying in New York City. In 1913 I was graduated from Auburn Theological Seminary, Auburn, N. Y., with the degree of B.D. September, 1913, to June, 1915, I was pastor of the Free Baptist Church, Dexter, Me. September, 1915, to present, pastor of the Free Baptist Church, Alton, N. H.

WILLIAM FRANCIS DOLAN

I continued going to school and got through in 1913 with an M.D. The summer from May to November, 1913, I was resident physician at the McLean Hospital, Waverley. Since

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

November, 1913, I have lived at the Boston City Hospital. My first twenty months there I was a surgical house officer, and on the completion of that appointment I was given a place as resident surgeon. I also have an office in Somerville. As for my work, I have never regretted my choice of medicine as the line to follow, although it takes a longer time to get ahead than one might require in other lines of business. I am still single. Member: Harvard Club of Somerville, Massachusetts Medical Society.

RICHARD EMERSON DOLE

After leaving college in June, 1909, I did tutoring work until January, 1910, when I started working for J. P. Morgan and Company, where I have been employed since then. In my six years there I have worked in the mail department, coupon department, bond-transfer department, and am at present in the security department. During my six years in New York, I have lived in the city in various boarding houses, generally with at least one other Harvard man and have used the Harvard Club as my place of eating, reading and writing. The only organized form of athletics I kept up after college was playing hockey three years with the St. Nicholas Club. I joined the 1st Regiment of Field Artillery, N. Y. N. G. in March, 1916. I was mustered into Federal service on June 29, 1916, and am now in McAllen, Texas, where the regiment was ordered to go on July 3rd. I find the life of a guardsman on the Mexican border a very strenuous one and very trying at times due to the lack of water for drinking and washing, with 75 per cent. of one's time spent at manual labor and the balance at drill. Member: St. Nicholas Skating Club.

GODFREY KERN DOWNER

From 1910 to 1913, I studied architecture in the Harvard Graduate School of Applied Science. From 1913 to 1914, I worked in the office of Ralph Adams Cram, architect. In 1914, I studied architecture in Europe and England. In 1915 and 1916 I continued the practice of architecture in Boston.

EDWARD DRAKE

Since leaving college I have been in business with my father, Albert B. Drake, civil engineer, here in New Bedford. The business includes all the kinds of engineering which occur in this immediate locality. We do land surveying, structural engineering, and landscape work, and also act as consulting engineers on questions of water-supply. I have been rod-man, instrument-man, and chief of party successively and have for the last two years devoted myself mainly to land title work, of which we do a great deal. Outside of business, my main avocation is automobiling. My travelling has been mainly in the form of auto trips. The first few years after leaving college I drove a Stanley steamer and since then a big Mercedes, covering from 12,000 to 15,000 miles a year. I also collect fire-arms, ancient and modern, of which I have quite a fine collection, and I have been an ardent stamp collector since boyhood. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Massachusetts Highway Association, New England Water Works Association, Association of Harvard Engineers, Harvard Union, New Bedford Country Club.

HARLAN FRANCIS DROWN

After graduation in 1910, my first position was that of an insurance solicitor for John H. Madden, in Lynn, Mass., including all lines of fire, plate glass, and liability insurance. This work constituted my occupation for a year and a half, when I started to work for The Brockway Smith Corporation, Boston, Mass., a large door, sash, and blind jobbing house,—first as an assistant in the shipping department at the warehouses at Charlestown and Lynn; then as an outside salesman in eastern Massachusetts, selling to contractors and builders on a wholesale basis. I spent nearly three years in the door, sash, and blind line, then accepted an opportunity to take a trip to the Pacific Coast, travelling through the various western states and the Rocky Mountains, and visiting the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego, Cal., and also the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, the whole trip aggregating about 12,000 miles by rail and automobile, a most wonderful and instructive complement to an academic course at college. I am now associated with four moving picture theatres in Greater Boston, in the advertising and purchasing of supplies for the same, which gives a good opportunity for one to use his ideas and individuality with a free hand.

ARTHUR HENRY DUHIG

While the last six years have been very interesting to myself, they seem barren of events of interest to the class. Starting in October, after graduation, I have been covering thirty-eight states in the course of my business, being fortunate in getting back to the triennial reunion and the last game with Yale.

CARROLL DUNHAM, 3D.

I went into the Business School my senior year and graduated there in 1911. I spent that summer in Europe and started work for Lee, Higginson and Company, living in Boston. In November, 1913, they sent me to Savannah in connection with a lumber company they were interested in, where I have been ever since, with only an occasional trip north for a few days. Member: Golf Club and Oglethorpe Club of Savannah, Ga., Harvard Club of Boston.

WILLIAM BULLARD DURANT

From the summer of 1910 till the summer of 1911 I drove stakes and labored intellectually in other ways for the New Haven Railroad. Since then I have been in Turners Falls on hydro-electric development. They say we're putting the river to work; but I have my doubts as to which works the harder. We manage to keep our office about forty per cent. Harvard men and like to boast about it. I have taken a trip to the West Indies and written enough town-boosting literature to change our altitude several hundred feet. I was married, in October, 1915, to Barbara Loughton, of Cambridge, Mass.

JOHN WORTHEN DURGIN

I was on leave of absence our senior year. During that time and for the next four years I was engaged in railroad engineering work with the Boston and Maine Railroad on both construction and maintenance of way. For three years of this time I was located in the office of the division engineer at Saint Johnsbury, Vt. In October, 1914, I left the employ of the Boston and Maine to come to Portsmouth, where I still live. I am now engaged in private practice as a civil engineer and handling the work of the city. I joined the organization of The Edison Electric Illuminating Company, of Boston, two months after graduation, and have remained with them ever since. My first work with them was with the testing and standardizing department. Later I joined the office force of the general superintendent, doing special work of various kinds. I am at present in charge of a special department of the statistical bureau, doing the special statistical work that is needed from time to time. I have written: One Phase of Merchandizing, Modern Merchandizing, Electricity for Everybody. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Algonquin Club, Country Club, Engineers' Club, Woodland Golf Club, Vesper Country Club, American Institute of Electrical Engineers, National Electric Light Association, Electric Vehicle Association of America.

I have been working for the Lion Knitting Mills Company. I put in the first six months in the factory, and am now on the road selling knit goods which we manufacture,— sweaters, toques, scarfs, etc. Between seasons I help write the ads., help out in the factory, and keep in touch with the manufacturing end generally. I have been doing this since the spring of 1913. The first three years after graduating, I spent at the Harvard Law School. I took an LL.B. in the spring of 1913, and passed the bar examinations in Ohio a few weeks later; but have never taken up practice. Member: The Elks Club, Cleveland.

EMORY PERCIVAL ELDREDGE

I was with the class only during freshman year, leaving my college career for the naval profession. Entered the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis in June, 1908, and was graduated and commissioned ensign in June, 1912. Since that time I have been serving on the U. S. S. Nebraska. I was commissioned lieutenant (junior grade) June 8, 1915. The naval career still holds all my interest, and I expect to remain in it all my life. I have seen life from an unusual angle, and it still appeals to me strongly from that angle. Many of the Class of 1910 have no doubt forgotten me; but I hope to meet them all at various times and places, and I wish they would call on me on board my ship, at any time, and meet my shipmates.

THOMAS STEARNS ELIOT

During 1910-1911 I was studying in Paris. In the autumn of 1911 I returned to Harvard, and spent the next three years in the Graduate School in the department of philosophy. During 1913-1914 I was an assistant in the department. In 1914 I secured an appointment as Sheldon travelling fellow. During the following summer I was in Germany, and the year of 1914-1915 I spent at Merton College, Oxford. Since then I have been teaching, first at High Wycombe, Bucks, and now at Highgate School, London. I have also been engaged in literary work. I have been a contributor to the Catholic Anthology (Elkin Matthews, London, 1915,); have written several reviews in the "International Journal of Ethics;" have been a contributor to "Blast" (London, 1915), to "Others" (New York), and to "Poetry" (Chicago). Member: The Aristotelian Society, London.

THEODORE WATERBURY ELLIS

Since Law School, I have been practising law in Springfield, Mass. I am now a member of the firm of Ellis, Brewster and Ellis, specializing in real estate, probate and corporation law. I am also interested in a company which examines and certifies real estate titles and draws deeds, mortgages, etc. I get to Boston and New York occasionally and always try to attend all the football games, class dinners, etc., that I can. Haven't travelled, explored or engaged in matrimony or other extra hazardous occupations, and am the only American author extant who hasn't written a book on his experience in the trenches. Each and every member of the class is hereby cordially invited to call me up when in Springfield, and I will do my best to procure him the freedom of the city, and such entertainment as it affords. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Club of New York, City Club, New York, Colony Club, Country Club, Winthrop Club, all of Springfield, Mass.

ALCOTT FARRAR ELWELL

Each summer since 1905, except 1908, when I was with the U. S. G. S. in Wyoming, I have spent at The Mowglis, a special camp for young boys, directed by Mrs. Oscar Holt, of which I am at present assistant director. During the fall and winter of 1910-1911 I went to the City of Mexico and vicinity, going by boat down the Mississippi and across the Gulf to Vera Cruz. In Mexico I had an opportunity to see signs of impending trouble which culminated in the escape of President Diaz two weeks after I sailed for the United States. Cuenavaca and Cuastla were both damaged within a few months of my visit, although at the time I was out among the Aztec ruins in the hills around Cuenavaca with perfect safety. During the winter of 1912 I was in business in Boston. In 1913, the camp work carried me as far as Philadelphia, Washington and Pittsburgh, and in 1914 out to Chicago. In 1915, I had a small private school in Cleveland, Ohio, for young boys. This year I am doing work in Harvard College.

STANLEY BRUCE ELWELL

My course in Harvard was so broken up by sickness, and my acquaintance in the class so limited that I hardly feel I have the right to consider myself a member of 1910. However, I am glad to feel that I am to be associated with the class, and hope in years to come, if not just at present when I am not in the position to do all I should like, to be able to know many of the class better. In the fall of 1910, I went to Ithaca, where I entered the architectural department of Cornell University. There I spent the next four years, graduating with the degree of B.S. Arch. The first two summers I spent as counsellor at Camp Mowglis, a specialty camp for young boys in New Hampshire. The last two summers I was abroad. In 1913, I was travelling, studying, and sketching in Italy, France, Austria and England. In 1914, I spent the summer studying in Spain; and had intended to take up work in Paris for the winter, but was prevented from doing so by the war. My plans for graduate work in architecture at the University of Pennsylvania were also shattered by the news that Professor Cret and the other Frenchmen had gone to France to serve their country. My friend Louis Grandgent, Harvard, 1909, had opened architectural offices in Salem and Boston, and I associated myself with him in charge of the Salem office. In August, 1915, we formed a partnership, with our office at 44 Bromfield Street, Boston, where we are now doing business. In comparison with many of the class, I have accomplished little since 1910; but my hopes are still bright that in as many years more I shall have something to show which will be worth while.

RAYMOND EMERSON

Having taken a year away from college between my sophomore and junior years I was not graduated until June, 1911. In September, 1911, I went to Houston, Texas, where I worked on street railroad construction for the Stone and Webster Engineering Corporation until March, 1912. I then was sent up to North Texas and worked in the construction of the Fort Worth-Cleburne interurban until its completion in November, 1912. From here I was sent to Forney, Texas, where I worked on location survey until February, 1913. I came East on the completion of this job and was married in April. In May I started to work for Stone and Webster Engineering Corporation on the construction of a hydro-electric plant at Falls Village, Conn. Upon the completion of this work I came back to Massachusetts and bought a farm in Concord, where I am now living. From October, 1914, to March, 1915, I worked as treasurer of the Bedford Coal and Grain Company, and in April, I went to work for the Eustis Mining Company, 131 State Street, Boston. Since August, I have been working at the company's mine at Eustis, Province of Quebec, on the reconstruction of our concentrating mills which were destroyed by fire during the summer of 1915.

CLAYTON HOLT ERNST

The year after graduation I spent in studying English at the Graduate School. In September, 1911, I began work on the editorial staff of the Youths' Companion, and "there I have been ever since", as the old men say. I have read a good many thousand manuscripts and scribbled a little—mostly on other people's stuff. I've taken no startling trips; in fact I've stuck pretty close to "the provincial little town of Boston". My longest journey was a canoe trip in the country a couple of hundred miles north of Lake Ontario. If this were not a practical world, I'd go adventuring. I've done a little work (perhaps I should call it play) with the Boy Scout organization and have got a great deal of enjoyment out of it. That about finishes the record of a commonplace but happy six years.

LEMIST ESLER

I have compiled a "Chronological History of Europe Since 1453 A. D."

[Mr. Estabrook has nothing to add to his last report.]

JOSEPH BENEDICT ESTABROOK

I left Harvard College in June, 1910, and by August of that year was working on construction for the Dan Patch Electric Traction Company in various capacities. When the work was completed there, I returned to Cambridge to take work in the Graduate School in Engineering. In March, 1913, I went west to take a position on the construction of the Coon Rapids Dam, near Minneapolis. At the completion of that I was given work in Florida on the construction of a highway and sea-wall on the west coast. While there I received an appointment as junior engineer in the U. S. Reclamation Service in Montana and Idaho. In December, 1915, I resigned from that and set up an office in St. Paul to

RICHARD MATHER EVERETT

In October, 1910, I started work in my father's business, Lawrence and Company, Boston, who are selling agents for various cotton mills. I have since been active on the so-called manufacturing end of the selling house. This work I am now continuing in connection with the Pacific Mills account. Member: Tennis and Racquet Club, Boston, Mass., Country Club, Brookline, Mass., Exchange Club, Boston, Mass., Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Club of New York.

ALBERT PAINE EVERTS

Since graduation, my principal efforts have been exerted in the office of Paine, Webber and Company, mainly in the bond department, which was established shortly after my association with this house. It was my pleasure(?) for a couple of years to walk the streets of Boston and vicinity and learn for myself that in almost any given community in Massachusetts, the number of bond-salesmen and bond-buyers is very nearly equal. For the last three years I have held the position of sales-manager. Following a case of typhoid fever in the early part of 1914, I took a trip to Panama and was fortunate in seeing the canal in one of its most interesting stages of development. In April, 1915, I was married to Fannie Foster Tower, Mt. Holyoke, 1912, of Pepperell, Mass., and have since that time lived in West Roxbury. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

FRANCIS ISADORE FALLON

I was at the Harvard Law School until June, 1912. Since that date I have been gradually reforming my idea that the law was the most lucrative profession possible. The scene of my disillusionment has been Boston itself. It merely happens that the office chosen for my awakening is the office of Walter I. Badger, 53 State Street, Boston. There I may be found by clients or creditors from nine until five daily. Member: Harvard Club of Boston; Knights of Columbus, Jamaica Plain Council; Catholic Alumni Sodality of Boston.

JOHN PRESCOTT FARNSWORTH, JR.

After leaving college in 1907 I joined the class of 1910 at Brown University, where I received the degree of bachelor of philosophy. Since that time, I have been connected with the Providence Dyeing, Bleaching and Calendering Company, of which I have been assistant treasurer since July 1, 1915. Member: University Club, Providence, Delta Phi Club of Rhode Island.

ARTHUR FAY FELKER

The first year after graduation I spent in the Graduate School at Harvard and took my A.M. in 1911, specializing in government. I intended to go immediately into newspaper work. There was no place open for an unknown quantity (as I must have been classified) which paid more than $15 a week. I could have grappled with that condition, I suppose, but there was a "position" offered me which paid $100 a month, and the only thing against it, as I thought then, was that it was in the teaching profession. I "accepted." For four years I taught English, economics, civics, some Latin, or whatever else I was "handy at" and could teach in an emergency. I organized and developed an orchestra and coached three championship debating teams. All this occurred in the high school at Burlington, Iowa. One year I resigned my teaching job, in the hope that I had finally got my start in the newspaper world. I had secured a place as an assistant editor on a small-town Texas newspaper. I started at my work in July and quit in September and came back to teaching. That experience killed all remaining ambition I had in that line. Last year I resigned as a teacher. I bought out controlling interest in a title and trust business and my brother, who was graduated from the Law School, is now in the same offices with me. Member: Burlington Golf Club, and Commercial Club, both of Burlington, Iowa.

FRANKLIN POMEROY FERGUSON

I entered Columbia Law School in the fall of 1910, not because I preferred it to the Harvard Law School, though I regard them as on a par, but because I had been away from home for seven years at preparatory school and college and I wanted to make my connections again. In my first year I won one-half the Beck prize offered for the best examination in real property. At the beginning of my second year I was elected to the Columbia Law Review and was later elected treasurer of that publication. The paper was in very bad financial straits at that time; but with the assistance of others I was able to reorganize its finances, so that it is now making instead of losing considerable money. This kept me very busy; but I was nevertheless able, by hard work to preserve my class standing and graduated with a record of all A's, with the exception of two B's. I also found time to play on the Columbia baseball team, though this can hardly be regarded as a very serious piece of effort. After graduation I entered the law offices of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, 62 Cedar Street, New York City, and I am still with that firm. I am not married or engaged and I seem to be so busy that there is little prospect of my entering into any entangling alliance for some time. The early part of a lawyer's life is not very eventful, so there is nothing more to report for the present, except to say that I have hopes. I have written a great many things for the Columbia Law Review, but no extended article that I can call attention to. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Heights Casino, Brooklyn, N. Y.

LUTHER MITCHELL FERGUSON

The death of Luther Mitchell Ferguson occurred under peculiarly pathetic circumstances. On Saturday, May 20, he graduated from the Army Medical College, Washington, D. C., and received his commission as first lieutenant of the United States Medical Corps. He was also informed on this occasion that the Walter Reed Hospital, the general hospital of the U. S. Army, had requested that he should be appointed to its staff and that he was expected to report to the hospital within a few days on his receipt of written orders. On Monday, May 22, 1916, he went to the hospital for an informal conference with his superior officers concerning his future duties. After the conversation he and a classmate prepared to take a horseback ride through the park, using army horses. Just after his mounting, the horse became fretful and before he had left the immediate vicinity of the stable-door the animal reared up on his hind legs and fell over backwards, throwing Dr. Ferguson with a violent shock on the hard ground. He struck the back of his skull and received such injuries that he never recovered consciousness. Having met with the accident in the yard of the hospital he was hurried into the operating room and attended to immediately, but, in spite of all that could be done, he passed away about two hours later. Lieutenant Ferguson had received an unusually good training. Born in China, of American parents, he was educated during his early years by private tutors and at twelve years of age was sent to Lausanne, Switzerland, where he attended the College Cantonal for two years. Returning to America, he entered Phillips Academy, Andover, from which he was graduated in 1906 and at once entered Harvard College. He finished his course in three years but took his degree with his class in 1910. He had already spent one year in Harvard Medical School where he completed his studies in 1913 and entered the Massachusetts General Hospital. After two years in hospital, he graduated from the Medical School in the class of 1915. In July, 1915, he took the examinations for admission to the Medical Corps of the U. S. Army and passed successfully. This necessitated his removal to Washington, D. C., where he was appointed to the Army Medical School, from which he was graduated with high honors. While in college he was a member of Theta Delta Chi and in the Medical School of all the leading societies. He was a member of the Harvard Club, Boston, and of the Army and Navy Club, Washington. On August 4, 1915, he was married to Miss Edith Gray (Smith 1912), the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Gray, 195 St. Paul St., Brookline. Since Dr. Ferguson's death a little daughter, Jean, has been born to his widow, Dr. Ferguson's funeral at Newton Cemetery was very impressive. A company of soldiers with a military band was sent from Fort Warren to act as military escort and to fire a salute over his grave. He was a young man of rare qualities and fine promise. Modest and reserved, he was respected and beloved by all who knew him. His high sense of duty led him to consecrate his life to the service of his country and in the uniform of an officer he passed to his reward on high. He left behind him a noble record.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

HAMILTON FISH, JR.

Hamilton Fish, Jr., the only Progressive in the State Legislature, represents Putnam County for the third time, in the New York Assembly. Immediately after graduation in 1910 he was appointed assistant instructor in government at Harvard, but went instead to Washington where he acted as private secretary to his father, Hamilton Fish, who was representative in Congress. Mr. Fish is now one of the managers of John C. Paige and Company, Inc., who have general insurance offices at 111 Broadway, New York.

BOYD ARCHER FISHER

Like the office boy who said that his first position was "several places," I have developed considerable momentum since leaving college, the mass being unimportant, but the velocity tremendous. I am a living demonstration of the nebular hypothesis. Out of her own fullness, Harvard spun me off into the atmosphere, and by friction alone I have become fairly luminous. Under the head of occupation I have set down the term "local economics" because Professor Jones of Michigan says that I am the only man on the job of developing the field of economics between the management of an industry and the government of the state. The Executives' Club of Detroit, which I have been conducting for two years, is an organization of the thirty-four principal factories and industries of the city, which are pooling their experience for the generalization of common principles of industry. It is really seven organizations in one, each function of management being represented in bi-monthly meetings. It is mighty interesting work, and it keeps a staff of eight busy. Back of this solid work, however, lies a record of four dizzy years—"sturm und drang."—of change and trouble. Finishing my course in three years, I elected to stay out the fourth year but take my degree in 1910 with my class. Thereby hangs a tale, almost too personal, but too unusual to keep back. In the year intervening I did special newspaper writing in Kansas City for two papers. Towards spring I devoted myself wholly to putting on a vaudeville sketch which I had written, and "busted" myself completely. Commencement came on, and I hadn't a sou. Never a hand at borrowing, I kept mum to my friends, but determined to get back to Boston. A watch and one or two other personal trifles,—ahem!—yes, gentlemen, I hocked them. The sum realized got me to New York with a nickel surplus, and Commencement only a few days away. A nickel is really nothing at all, you might say, in New York. So I tried "palming" the ivories in a movie house or two,—oh, several, in rapid succession. Beethoven never really wrote any good cowboy music, so that my stuff didn't get across. The situation become so acute that—(I trust I am among friends) on the fine June day when my classmates were crowding into Sanders Theatre, I was still in New York, serving ham and eggs in a lunch wagon! As the lady in the play says—you know—the lady with the past—"there were several other episodes, and then I secured a position, etc." The position was market reporter on a paint and drug trade paper. During six months there were only two price fluctuations to report, and as I had to write columns weekly, I felt about as fluent as the weather observer at the North Pole. I soon quite used up my vocabulary. Through Professor Baker I next became entertainment director at the Educational Alliance, a Jewish social welfare institution on the East Side. Although I was the only Gentile in authority there, I found my work tremendously interesting and pleasant. Some special study of the educational value of motion pictures there secured me, after seven months at the Alliance, the management of the People's Recreation Company, a semi-philanthropic corporation, conducting educational picture theatres and dance halls in settlement houses. Currently with this work for a year I did volunteer work and lecturing for the social centre movement. Good business judgment then dictating that I either discharge my most capable theatre manager and take over his work myself, or turn the company over to him, I decided to take other work. Immediately there came a chance to manage the Public Forum of the Church of the Ascension under Dr. Percy S. Grant. Shortly after, I was allowed to do part time work as assistant secretary of the newly-organized Efficiency Society. Not to be discouraged by this combination of responsibility I undertook also, during the summer of 1912, the secretaryship of the Social Service Bureau of the Wilson and Marshall campaign. The summer of 1913 I spent in New Hampshire writing a play which is only now threatened with production. I came back to New York in the fall as executive manager of the Efficiency Society, still giving some time to the Greenwich Village Social Centre, which I had organized early in the year. After seven months more with the Efficiency Society I came to Detroit and lived happily ever afterward. Member: Harvard Club of New York.

ERNEST WITHINGTON FISHER

The two years following my graduation I was with Professor George F. Swain, of Harvard College, engaged in railroad valuation and other engineering work. The first year I was located in Boston and the second in various cities of New York State and New York City. In September, 1912, feeling that an additional year at Harvard would be of material assistance to me in my work, I returned to college and, by repeating some of my senior work and taking up some new work, I received the M.C.E. degree in June, 1913. The next five months I spent in Pittsburgh, Pa., and I am glad that it was only five months. Since then, except for four months when I was in Providence, R. I., I have been located in Boston with Stone and Webster Engineering Corporation. As for my personal life I have been enjoying it as every single man does and in fact expect to for some time to come, for as a friend of mine expresses it "I was born single and I like it." Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

JOHN ALDEN FISHER

I left school in March, 1911, and found an opening at the Plimpton Press, Norwood, Mass. They are engaged in "perfect bookmaking in its entirety." Here under some of the most successful men in the profession I had the good fortune to obtain a solid grounding in the principles and practice of scientific management in most of its branches. On the first of September, 1912, I was sent for three months to the Lewis Manufacturing Company of Walpole to install a planning department and some other features of management. On the first of December of that year, having brought my work to a point where it could be completed without further outside aid, I accepted an offer from Bird and Son of East Walpole to carry on similar work for them. I stayed with them about three years, doing development work of all sorts. In November, 1915, I was able again to better myself and went with the Winchester Repeating Arms Company, at New Haven. Here I am assistant to the assistant general superintendent in charge of the installation of scientific management. Incidentally it has been said that this is the largest plant in which the Taylor system of scientific management has as yet been introduced. It is large enough to allow us to make use of all the details which in smaller installations are of only theoretical value. Outside of the above story of my work I have done nothing worthy of note except one thing. On the 29th of June, 1915, I was married to Miss Florence Saben Field, of Hinsdale, N. H. I had lived in Norwood since leaving Cambridge and we continued to make our home there until we started one at New Haven on the first of this year.

MAX CECIL FISHER

After five years on the stage, during which time I played in musical comedy, melodrama, and the "Movies", together with a season of Shakespeare with Miss Anglin's company, I have returned to Vermont, owing to the unsatisfactory condition of the theatrical business, and am at present studying law in the office of S. Hollister Jackson in Barre, Vt. Member: B. P. O. E., Montpelier, No. 924.

ARCHIBALD FALCONER CUSHMAN FISKE

Owing to my absence in college the greater part of my senior year I did not finish my college requirements until February, 1911. Then, for several months I reviewed books for the Boston Transcript, making my residence at Cambridge. In May, 1911, I became an agent for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, at Dorchester, Mass. In September of that year I was married. In October I entered the law office of Woodward, Bovee and Butcher (now Butcher, Foster and Tanner) at 1 Madison Avenue, New York City. In September, 1912, I was appointed general deputy superintendent in the ordinary department for New England and moved my residence from New York to Cambridge. In August, 1913, I was made acting superintendent of the Dover, N. H., district and two months later I was appointed superintendent of the Fall River, Mass., district. In August, 1914, I was sent to Cincinnati, Ohio, as superintendent of the Clifton district, and lived in Cincinnati for upwards of a year. In November, 1915, I was transferred to the superintendency of the Providence, R. I., district where I am at present occupied. From March, 1910, to November, 1911, I was employed by the Boston Elevated Railway Company, as transit-man in the construction of the East Cambridge viaduct. From November, 1911, to April, 1912, I was in the employ of the Massachusetts State Board of Health as transit-man on the Neponset River Improvement Survey. From April, 1912, to July, 1912, I was assistant engineer on special surveys and computations for the Water Board of the City of Cambridge. From July, 1912, to September, 1913, I was transit-man on Boston and Providence electrification survey for the

GALEN WALDRON FLANDERS

I left college at the end of the school year 1907, to teach in the town of Middleboro, Mass. Here I stayed during the school year ending June, 1908. It was my good fortune, during the summer of 1908, to secure the principalship in an East Weymouth School in Massachusetts. In February of the year 1909 I was invited to go to New Britain, Conn., as a supervising principal. June of 1910 brought an appointment as a supervising principal in the schools of Medford, Mass., where I have remained since that latter date. The year 1914-1915 found me back at Harvard with the privilege of enjoying a course in education under the inspiring personality of Professor Ernest K. Moore. So helpful did I find this man that this school year 1915-1916 finds me again a student in his class. Member: St. Paul's Lodge, A. F. and A. M., South Boston.

In the summer after graduation, I was instructor in English in the Harvard Summer School. In the fall I registered at Harvard as a graduate student in English. Instead of completing an A.M. year, I went, in February, 1911, to the University of Wisconsin, as instructor in English, immediately after my marriage in Cambridge to Dorothy Haskell, of Boston. I remained at Wisconsin three and a half years. I took the A.M. degree there in 1912. In 1914 I accepted an associate professorship of English in the University of North Carolina, at Chapel Hill, where I am now living. him win friends easily and a multitude of fast friendships. Though he was tall and slight, he was muscular and ardently athletic. While of a mechanical and business turn of mind, he was a lover of good music, sought it and was thrilled by it. He never stopped to balance considerations of right and wrong in determining his actions; his ideals were innate, not cultivated, and his adherence to them was intuitive, not premeditated. So much did he deserve, and so much might he have returned in solid accomplishment, with his ability and his equipment, his enthusiasm in action and his energy; and yet, his years of preparation ended and his life-work just begun, misfortune overtook him and seemed persistently to accompany him until his death in November, 1914, at the age of twenty-eight. His final illness, brought on by a fall in a characteristic but tragic outburst of merriment, was a lingering torture from which unconsciousness sometimes freed him and which he at other times suffered with patient courage. Toward the end, he remarked that he had no fear of the hereafter, for it could not be more terrible than his latter days. For us—we feel that the terrors of the hereafter were not meant for him, and we only wonder why so upright a fellow, a potential force for good, should have had to endure such trials. We can believe that in those long days during his eighteen months' illness, when his thoughts were all too few and the conception of death was ever-present, he could find consolation in the devotion and sympathy of his family and friends, and in the thought that there was no wilful act in his life that he could wish undone.

CARL HERNFRID FORNELL

I entered Harvard Medical School in the fall of the year after leaving the college, and, after four years of interesting study, received the M.D. degree in 1914. Since graduation from the Medical School I have been occupied with hospital work. At present I am finishing a two-year appointment as interne on one of the surgical services at Bellevue Hospital, New York City. The life of the interne at this hospital is very pleasant, especially since we moved into the magnificent new buildings a few weeks ago. My month's duty on the ambulance as ambulance surgeon was especially attractive, for it enabled me to see the conditions of the East Side and also afforded many thrilling experiences. When through with hospital work I intend to settle in New York City. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Harvard Medical Society of New York.

FRANCIS LEON FOSTER

Since my graduation I have been engaged in the cotton business,—for three years in the Boston office of E. A. Shaw and Company, and for the last three years in the Providence office of the same concern. For the past six years I have led a simple, godly, righteous life and thus far have succeeded in keeping out of jail. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, University Club of Providence, R. I., Harvard Club of Rhode Island.

HENRY POPE FOWLER

I began the practice of law September 8, 1913, at 60 State Street, Boston, Mass., and was admitted to the bar the following February. On May 13, 1915, I came to Washington, D. C., as assistant chief, Research Division, Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and am still occupying that position.

GEORGE WILLIAM FRENCH, JR.

The first five years after graduation I spent in the mechanical department of the Pacific Mills. The first two years I spent in the cotton department, and the other three in the installation of new machinery for the new print-works department. Last September I began teaching mathematics in the Newton Vocational School.

September 1, 1909, I became superintendent of the Schwab Clothing Company, St. Louis, Mo. January 1, 1914, to the following September I was superintendent of the Kahn Tailoring Company, Indianapolis, Ind. December 1, 1914, to date, secretary of the National Wholesale Tailors' Association, 237 South 5th Ave., Chicago, Ill.

EDMUND BAILEY FRYE, JR.

Two brief weeks after graduation I entered the employ of Estabrook and Company, Boston, and in their behalf have been on the jump ever since. First as a clerk within the confines of lock and bar, and later with more freedom as a salesman, from Eastport to Nantucket. For a year I was in Portland, Me., and for the last two years I have directed my efforts mainly in and about Boston. Member: Union Boat Club, Boston, Harvard Club of Boston, Country Club, Portland.

ROBERT PRESTON FRYE

I have been manufacturing shoes since the fall of 1910 as a member of the firm,—John A. Frye Shoe Company. I have spent my summer vacations at the Hotel Rockmere, Marblehead. In the fall of 1913 after a trip to Missoula, Montana, I was married on October 16 and went to the Pacific Coast and returned by Canadian Pacific before returning to Marlboro. I was elected to the Marlboro School Committee in 1913 and served for three years. Since the spring of 1915 I have been building a new house which will be ready for occupancy in a very short time. I have enjoyed many summer trips around New England and through the Berkshires in a Stutz, which I drove for two years and which I have recently traded for a Chummy Roadster of the Apperson make, my family having increased and necessitated more room.

LIVINGSTON FRYER

Since graduation I have spent two years in the Harvard Law School. In the succeeding winters I have worked in the Manufacturers and Traders National Bank of Buffalo. In the summers I have travelled abroad, to Russia, Sweden, Denmark, England, France, Italy, Austria, and Germany. At the outbreak of the war, I was in Paris; but I have not returned to Europe since, though I expect to this summer.

HAROLD CLEAVES FULLER

Harold Cleaves Fuller was born November 27, 1884. His parents were Edmund B. Fuller and Mary M. Treat. He prepared for college at Phillips Exeter Academy. He is, by occupation, a salesman with J. R. Poole Co., 12 South Market St., Boston, and resides at 23 Highland Ave., Haverhill.

WILLARD PERRIN FULLER

I came back to college for a half year of extra work in English and a course in the Business School, preparatory to the printing and publishing work I had decided to go into. After mid-years, January, 1911, I went abroad for seven months as a private tutor. Under very pleasant circumstances I saw the tourists' Italy and France, followed by a summer at Dinard, on the Breton coast. On finishing the tutoring, I spent two months in England and Scotland, most of the time walking in the Lake Country and in the centre and north of Scotland. In October, 1911, began my apprenticeship with the Plimpton Press at Norwood, Mass., in complete book manufacturing. Besides receiving a good course of sprouts in printing, I had the opportunity of working as a unit in the Taylor System of Scientific Management, and to study closely its application and development. In April, 1912, I took a position with the newly-organized Harvard University Press at Cambridge, where my work was both in the book-making end, and in the sales extension of the publishing department. A continued period of ill health forced me to leave this work after a year. It fortunately turned me to an outdoor farming life, however, and by the spring of 1915 I was very happily settled at Sycamore Farm, South Walpole, raising chickens and capons, and running a private family trade in eggs and poultry, delivering by automobile in Boston and Cambridge. On May 24, 1915, I was married at Cambridge to Elizabeth Channing, a daughter of Professor Channing. We immediately came to the old farm-house we were rebuilding at South Walpole, and are now comfortably settled among our full line of domesticated animals. During the summer of 1915, I picked up sales problems again, and was asked to take over the publicity and trade extension work for four manufacturing concerns—the Plimpton Press, Lewis Manufacturing Company, Holliston Mills, and the Slatersville Finishing Company of Rhode Island, in the last of which I am now a director. The work, both administrative and publicity, is proving a happy combination for two-thirds of my time, but I still pursue that elusive title of practical farmer.

STEPHEN GALATTI

I graduated at mid-years and took a trip abroad with Paul Chapin, '11, returning to America the next fall. After coaching the St. Mark's football team and later going South with Hamilton Fish's Law School team, I started trying to earn a living. I entered the firm of Ralli Brothers, working for them in New York, London and India and resigned in December, 1914. The start of the war found me in London, where I worked in the American Embassy for three months, before returning home again. I am at present in the field service of the American Ambulance in France and was for five months in a section in Alsace with Lovering Hill and Henry Suckley of our class. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Harvard Club of Boston.

CHARLES JACOB GALE

As I have retained my connection with Harvard ever since graduation, my experiences fall naturally into two periods per year: the regular college year and the summer vacation. Newly hatched, I secured some odd jobs during July, and in August went with the Harvard-Boston Aviation Meet. That winter, 1910-1911, I spent as stock ledger clerk at Memorial Hall, and in the spring received a corporation appointment as auditor of the University Dining Halls, a position I am still holding. The summer of 1911 I spent in cost accounting work, saved my nickels during the winter, and spent the summer of 1912 in England and on the Continent. During the summers of 1913 and 1914 I handled public accounting jobs, and in September, 1914, I married, and established a household where any 1910 man who can read my address in the Boston telephone book will be most welcome. Last summer I broke into the munition and general export game, and since then I have placed considerable foreign government work. If any 1910 man wishes export business, I should like to meet him, and we'll chip in part of our profits for the class fund. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Colonial Club, Cambridge, Union Lodge, Masons, Dorchester, Mass.

JOHN FRANCIS GALLAGHER

Ever since I have been out of college I have been employed in the time-table department of the Bay State Street Railway Company, in Boston. My work has consisted of standardizing time-tables both for the employees and the public; in laying out the hours of labor for motormen and conductors; preparing statistical information for legislative hearings, city councils, boards of arbitration, etc.; special investigations as to cost of service, traffic conditions, reroutings, six-cent fare, etc.; in fact various studies of almost every phase of the street-railway situation. My life outside of business hours has been extremely simple. I like to spend my time in the company of genial friends who have the same tastes in common with myself. We commute together on the train, and spend the evenings in playing cards, enjoying discussions of various current topics, books, plays, etc.; and attending the theatre just frequently enough to get away from the stern reality of life. I thorough-

FREDERIC MERRICK GARDINER

October, 1911, to February, 1912, I was doing post graduate work at Harvard in architecture and engineering. March, 1912, to June, 1913, I was night timekeeper on the Filene Building, Boston, for Wells Brothers Company, contractors. In June and July, 1912, I was assistant night superintendent on the same work. From July to November, 1912, I was assistant superintendent on construction of Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, Boston, for the same firm. GEORGE PEABODY GARDNER, JR.

In July after graduation I took a trip to the Orient with E. C. Bacon and W. F. Morgan, Jr., both 1910 men. I saw something of Russia, Manchuria, China, Korea, Japan, Philippine Islands, Java, Burma, India and Egypt; also Athens, Constantinople, Buda Pest, Vienna, London and Paris. I returned in June, 1911, and went immediately into my father's office, an institution peculiar to Boston, a trustee's office. In the autumn of 1911, I started at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration but remained scarcely a month, as I became secretary to the Harvard Corporation and private secretary to President Lowell in place of C. C. Little, '10, who had resigned. On January 28, 1913, I married Miss Rose Phinney Grosvenor, of Providence, and am now the proud father of two daughters. I resigned the position of secretary in October, 1914, to devote my entire time to business. At present I am a director in the Merchants National Bank, Boston, the Nantasket Steamboat Company, the Shawmut Steamship Company, and the Package Confectionery Company, of which I am also treasurer. I have written: Chiefly the Orient (privately published, 1912.). Member: Harvard Club of New York, Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Travellers Club, Somerset Club, Tavern Club, Tennis and Racquet Club, Longwood Cricket Club, all of Boston, Longwood Covered Courts, Chestnut Hill, Mass., The Country Club, Brookline, Mass.

WILLIAM WALLACE GARDNER

Following graduation I entered the employ of William Filene's Sons Co. of Boston, Mass., where during the summer and fall I filled various positions during the vacations of permanent members of the force. I had expected to train for a buyer's position or other executive office. Not finding retail business to my liking, I left in the fall of that year. After some temporary employment in a collection agency, I left on February 8, 1911, from New York City on a trip to

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Louisiana and Texas. Literature from Houston, Texas, had reached me. It promised that the Satsuma Oranges experimented with in that locality would rival the success of the groves of California with equal rise in value of real estate. A hard Texas Norther froze the oranges severely the night of my arrival. It drove from my mind all idea of purchasing and developing an orange grove in Texas. I weighed 278 pounds when I left the East. I determined to reduce my weight by out-of-door work in the South. The Caddo oil field north of Shreveport, La., was being developed at that time. I secured work there as driller's helper and later became timekeeper for the Standard Oil Co. in their pipeline department. The heat, the work, and the epsom salts found in the drinking water took off over forty pounds in a few months. Four months with the refinery department at Baton Rouge, La., took off thirty more. In the fall of 1911 I came to Los Angeles, California. I secured work as salesman for Kempster and Company, a small manufacturer of electric-lighting fixtures. With them I stayed until April, 1914. During that time I had become salesmanager, and had later taken a part interest in the firm. The slump in building operations in Los Angeles made both the investment and the future of that business unsatisfactory. I sold my interest to the head of the firm who later died and the firm went into bankruptcy so that the small investment proved unsatisfactory except for the business training received. This I considered worth what it cost. After leaving the electric-fixture business I went to Imperial Valley and into real estate. In this business in one form or another, I have been ever since. I entered the office of Pier and Prendergast of El Centro, handling city property in that growing county seat. Later I started an office of my own, handling ranches as well as city property. A successful campaign of colonizing Milford Valley, Utah, was being made in Imperial Valley by the Western Securities Co. Becoming interested I joined their forces taking farmers from Imperial Valley into Utah. In the fall of 1915, the field being worked out, I moved to Turlock in the San Joaquin Valley of California, where I stayed for eight months, until our force had completed the sale of their irrigated lands at Milford, Utah. In May, 1915, I became engaged to Helen Requa Bassett, a graduate of the University of Southern California in 1913. We were married on July 20, 1916, at Los Angeles, Cal. Following a short wedding trip, we took an apartment in Santa Ana, a suburb of Los Angeles. At present I am engaged in organizing a syndicate to purchase from the Western Securities Company a tract of land near Delta, Utah, which that company has reclaimed from the desert. This tract will be subdivided among farmers who desire to grow sugar beets and alfalfa seed. Member: University Club, Los Angeles, Cal., Sierra Club.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

HAROLD BERRY GARLAND

I chose teaching as my profession, with the following results thus far: During the first year after graduation I served on the faculty of Phillips Andover Academy, substituting for a teacher who was abroad that year. In September, 1911, I entered public school work, and served in the Milton High School until June, 1914. Just before going to Milton I was married, and I have found the life of a public school teacher to be preferred to that of a private school teacher, from the standpoint of a man with a family. In September, 1914, I was appointed a junior master in the Boston High School of Commerce, and since that date I have been serving in the mathematics department of this school. Member: New England Association of Teachers of Mathematics.

CLAIBORNE MAURO GARRETT

In the fall of 1910 I went to St. Louis where my family lived at that time. I lived in St. Louis from September, 1910, until March, 1913, when I came up to Chicago, where I have since lived. In St. Louis my business connections were Delafield and Snow (fire insurance) and I was for several years with the United States Steel Corporation. In Chicago, I have spent nearly all my time in the advertising game which I am now following and intend to follow permanently. I was a member of the Harvard Club and University Club in St. Louis and am a member of the Harvard Club in Chicago. It has been a great pleasure to me to meet old friends and make new ones in these three organizations. Walter Bryant and I represent the Class of 1910 in Battery D, First Field Artillery, Illinois National Guard.

IVAN EDISON GARVER

I left college at the end of my freshman year, and have since been with the Roaring Spring Blank Book Company, manufacturers of blank books, tablets and school goods, of which corporation I am now secretary. I have also become interested in the banking business, and am at present vice-president of the Roaring Spring Bank. My work in these two directions has taken up my time without interruption since leaving college, and I have travelled very little, spending most of my time in Roaring Spring.

JAMES ALBERT GARY, JR.

Immediately after graduating I became associated with the Gary Manufacturing Company of Maryland, manufacturers of Alberton cotton duck and similar lines. Later I became a stockholder and treasurer of the company; also a member of the firm of James S. Gary and Son, which controls and manages the property of the aforementioned company, which positions I still hold. In February, 1912, I was appointed to represent the state of Maryland as a member of the board of managers of the Maryland School for Boys, which is the non-sectarian boys' reform school of the state. Later I was put on the executive committee and made secretary of the board and chairman of the executive committee. This school is classed among the foremost of its kind in the country. I served for four months, beginning last May, as a member of the grand jury of Maryland at Baltimore City. Last fall I was president and treasurer of the Young Men's Weller League, a state-wide organization, formed to interest the young men of Maryland in Republican politics and to aid in the campaign of O. E. Weller, Republican candidate for governor of the state. This organization went out of existence after the election. I recently helped to organize a new division of the Naval Militia of Maryland. This new fourth division is made up largely of college men. On March 31st, 1916, I was commissioned ensign in this organization. Member: Baltimore Club, Merchants Club of Baltimore, Catonsville Country Club, Baltimore Press Club, Baltimore Yacht Club, Harvard Club of New York, Harvard Club of Maryland, Bachelors' Cotillon of Baltimore.

GEOFFREY JAMES GILES

I left Harvard in 1908 and went to work with the firm of Alfred Giles Company, architects, of San Antonio, Texas. I bought a truck farm at Laredo, Texas, in 1912, and raised truck for three years, at the same time keeping my connection with the office. Our firm was engaged mostly in Mexican business, and the revolution there completely put a stop to all building operations. In the summer of 1915 I sold out my entire interests in Laredo and removed to Comfort, Texas, where I am now located as manager of Hillingdon Ranch. I have a hundred and fifty head of high-grade Aberdeen Angus cows, a herd of thirty registered cows, also about forty mares and three thousand head of Angora goats. I have a good proposition here and intend to remain until the building business is resumed in Mexico. Member: San Antonio Country Club, Casino Club, Elks Club, all of San Antonio, Texas.

ERASTUS BENJAMIN GILLETTE

After leaving Harvard in 1908, I entered the Toledo Medical College, from which I was graduated in 1912. In the summers of 1909 and 1910, I went to Marburg, Germany, entered the University, and took special laboratory work in medicine. While at the University of Marburg, I became very intimate with the "Burschenschaft Armenia," or in other words, one of the German student societies. The members of this society fought duels, with swords, with the members of another society every Saturday. I probably witnessed in the neighborhood of two hundred duels during my two semesters at Marburg. They seemed bloody and ghastly at first, but after a few Saturdays, I began to enjoy them, and to pick out the weak points in each duellist myself. In the spring of 1910, I enlisted as a private in the First Ambulance Company, Ohio National Guard, which is stationed in Toledo, Ohio. At the end of my enlistment, I was commissioned 1st lieutenant, Medical Corps, O. N. G., and in February, 1916, was commissioned captain, Medical Corps, O. N. G. I have taken post graduate courses in medicine in both Boston and Chicago. After graduation I served as interne at Robinwood Hospital, Toledo, Ohio, for two years. At the end of my internship, I opened an office in the Nicholas Building, Toledo. I am doing a general practice, but am inclining towards surgery, to which I hope to limit my practice. One year ago, I was ap-

JOHN STERETT GITTINGS, JR.

I studied international law and political science at Columbia University, 1909-1910; was private secretary to Hon. Edwin Morgan (Harvard, 1890) then Minister to Uruguay and Paraguay, at Montevideo, 1910-1911; travelled during that time through both these countries, and also southern Brazil and a part of Argentina. Was private secretary to the same Mr. Morgan, minister to Portugal, 1911-1912; travelled in Portugal and Spain. I returned to Columbia University for law work, 1912. I studied law at the University of Maryland, Baltimore, 1912-1913. I was admitted to the bar of Maryland, June, 1913. I went as secretary to the American arbitrator (Judge A. L. Miller, of Georgia), in Guayaquil and Quito railway arbitration, to Ecuador, in 1913. I continued south to Peru and Chile (1914); studied law in Santiago de Chile, at both Catholic and state universities, and worked in a lawyer's office. I worked in lawyers' offices in Buenos Aires, Argentina. I was assistant secretary general to first Pan-American financial conference, at Washington in the spring of 1915, and edited the proceedings. I was commercial representative of the National City Bank of New York in Sao Paulo (Brazil) and later in Rio de Janeiro (Brazil)—1915-1916. I have made many translations (legal and otherwise), from Spanish and Portuguese, of diplomatic and legal matters, and have written two or three short articles (published by government and quasi-government publications) on Ibero-American matters. Member: Maryland Club and Baltimore Athletic Club.

HOMER LEHR GODDARD

Since graduating, I have stuck pretty closely to the teaching profession. For two years, I taught English and mathematics in Hartford, Conn. Then I moved west to California and tried to get a foothold in the high schools of that state. I found, however, that I had to do about a half year of graduate work before I could get a regular certificate to teach; so I took and passed an examination for a special certificate in physical training. The first year I was out here, I spent as general coach and athletic director at Redlands High School. Then I came to Los Angeles High School in the same capacity and I am still here. At present I am hard at work on the track team for the coming spring. As a track coach I have been able to turn out better sprinters and distance men than shot-putters! In the summer of 1913. I did some graduate work at University of Southern California, and qualified as a regular teacher, since which time I have tried to get into a berth as an English teacher—unsuccessfully. I still have my hopes and indeed will be out of the coaching business next fall if my plans carry. The most memorable experience I have had was a land entanglement with the former Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. I filed on some land to which her title had lapsed; but shortly after that, she filed a contest which proved successful, and since then I have been getting back to where I was before it all happened financially. The best thing that has happened to me was the arrival of my little children. I have settled down into a peaceable old home body, whose main ambition is to accumulate enough to buy a little California farm and retire to farming.

ARTHUR NATHANIEL GODING

I am one of about thirty solicitors employed on the advertising staff of the Class Journal Company, 239 West 39th Street, New York, publishers of class and trade media circulating in the motor field. WILLIAM CASPAR GRAUSTEIN

I finished my college course in three years and spent two years more in the graduate school studying mathematics. In the fall of 1911 I went abroad as a Travelling Fellow to complete my work for a doctor's degree at the University of Bonn. I returned in the fall of 1913 and was an instructor in mathematics at college for a year. My wanderings then began again and brought me this time to Texas, where I am now teaching at the Rice Institute, in Houston. I have written a couple of mathematical articles. Member: The American Mathematical Society, Cercolo matematico di Palenno.

MONTGOMERY GREGORY

The life of a member of my prosy profession has but little interest for the more active workers outside of the academic cloisters. Perhaps my greatest compensation has been in doing unto others as was done unto me by the wise young instructors in English A. Much to my own surprise after graduation I found myself an instructor in English in the college department of Howard University. Since my father was the first graduate from the college in 1872 and since my early childhood was passed on its campus, it was with pleasure that I entered upon my work here. The presence of a number of other Harvard men upon the faculty has added to that pleasure. I am now an associate professor of English with particular charge of the courses in public speaking and debating. In every way I am attempting to introduce the Harvard spirit and methods in this magnificent field of opportunity. Since we are so centrally located in the national capital I hope as many of my classmates as come to Washington will pay us a visit. I have written: Articles: In "The Citizen" Magazine, "The Fine Arts and Race Ascendancy", "Race in Art"; in "The Crisis" Magazine, "Investigations of the Jim Crow Car System"; story: In "The Crisis", "What Was It." Member: Sigma Pi Phi, Washington, D. C., C. H. A. Y., Washington, D. C., The National Association of Academic Teachers of Public Speaking.

JOHN MILLIGAN GROVER

Since my graduation from Harvard, in 1910, I have been employed as a reporter for Bradstreet's Commercial Agency. ROBERT LENOX GROVES

For nearly two years after graduation I was in business in Los Angeles, Cal.; then returned to Harvard Law School, graduating in June, 1915, since when I have been private secretary to Myron T. Herrick, of Cleveland, Ohio.

HORACE GUILD

During the summer of 1910 I was employed by the Boston and Maine Railroad as a trainman in the passenger service. In September of that year I entered the Harvard Law School, and continued my studies there until I received the degree of LL.B. at commencement in June, 1913. My record in the Law School was not brilliant nor yet to be ashamed of,—just average. I took an active part in the Law Club work, and during the last two years I was a proctor in one of the college dormitories. During the summer of 1911, I was in the law office of F. H. Kidder, in Boston, where I got my first taste of the game I am now in. In the summer of 1912, I did a few odd jobs in the same line on my own account. In July of 1913, I took the Massachusetts bar examinations, and the day after I departed for a short trip in the British Isles with our classmate, Peirce Long. Upon my return, I entered the law offices of Anderson, Sweetser and Wiles, where I have been engaged in the practice of my profession ever since. I have found my work extremely interesting, because of its variety, its reality, and because of the element of competition which enters into every matter that comes up. My interest has been almost entirely centred in these matters; but for various reasons I shall not here detail what any of those matters have been. The first case I tried was a criminal one, and I lost it, as I well deserved to, not only because of my then only slight capabilities, but because of the guilt of the man I represented. Since that inauspicious start, I have had my fair share of winnings. I was married on June 29, 1915, at Sherborn, Mass., to Emily D. Merriam, a daughter of John M. Merriam, '86. Since that time I have been living at my present address.

GAVIN HADDEN

With leave of absence for my senior year I left the university in June, 1909, and entered the second-year class of the Columbia School of Civil Engineering, New York City, whence I graduated in June, 1912, with the degree of C.E. In July of the same year, I entered the employ of Barclay, Parsons and Klapp, consulting engineers, 60 Wall Street, New York, and have been with this firm ever since. During this period I have been engaged in engineering work of various kinds, in various parts of the country, including, among the more important undertakings, harbor protection work in Brunswick, Ga., in 1912; a hydro-electric development near Altmar, N. Y., in 1913; a traffic survey and subway design for the city of Detroit, Mich., in 1914; and work in connection with the construction of the Cape Cod Canal. In February, 1914, I married Miss Rebecca S. Lloyd, in New York City, and we have one son, Gavin, Jr., born June 26, 1915. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Church Club of New York, Harvard Engineering Society of New York.

DWIGHT WALTER HADLEY

After graduating in 1910 I taught for a year at the Hoosac School, Hoosac, N. Y., and I also did tutoring at New London, Conn. In the autumn of 1911 I entered the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, to prepare for the ministry of the Episcopal Church. While in the theological school I had charge of the summer church at Allerton, Mass. I also temporarily took charge of a mission at Saugus and also Christ Church, East Somerville, a work supported by the St. Paul's Society of Harvard and its graduate members. I was graduated from the Episcopal Theological School in June, 1914, and was ordered deacon by Bishop Lawrence in St. Paul's Cathedral, Boston, on June 7, 1914. In July I became a member of the staff of workers at St. Stephen's Church, Boston. I was ordained to the priesthood on May 9, 1915, at Trinity Church, Boston, by Bishop Lawrence.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

On April 30, 1916, I became rector of Grace Church, Medford, Mass. That will after that date be my address. Member: Westminster Club, Clerical Association.

CLARENCE EARLE HALE

The summer following graduation, I continued resting with intermittent trips to Wall Street. Persistent calls, and a fairly large balance (not in the family) which might have been diverted elsewhere, united in persuading the officials of the American Exchange National Bank that I should be added to their staff. Having served for six weeks as general bag totter and adding machine operator (at $6 per week), I advanced my position in life by accepting a position (at $5 a week) as office boy and messenger for P. W. Brooks and Company, an investment bond house. I spent a year in their New York office and the Harvard Club, and was then sent to Albany, N. Y., as bond salesman. For the past six years I have travelled the highways and by-ways of the eastern part of New York state from Schenectady to Schaghticoke, and Schoharie to Muitzeskill. Recently I became a partner in the firm of P. W. Brooks and Company, Inc., of 115 Broadway, New York City, but continue my work as before "up state." In 1914, I was married to Miss Ruth A. Powers of Wallingford, Conn., and we have a son, who, I hope, will some day be sufficiently educated to get into, and not too lazy to get out of, Harvard.

RICHARD WALWORTH HALL

The academic year, 1910-1911, I was in my second year at the Harvard Law School. From October, 1911, to July, 1912, I worked in a hat factory in Boston. From September, 1912, to June, 1913, I was at the Boston University Law School, getting my degree in June, taking and passing my bar examinations in July, 1913. I was sworn in to the Massachusetts bar in September, 1913. From then until the following June (1914) I was in the office of Mr. John Lowell of Boston. Leaving there I went to work for the firm of Roberts, Roberts and Cushman, patent attorneys of Boston, with whom I stayed until the summer of 1915. In September, 1915, I opened an office for the practice of law at 53 State Street, Boston. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

STANLEY PERKINS HALL

I have been practising law in Taunton, Mass., since June, 1912. Member: Winthrop Club, Bristol Club, both of Taunton, Mass.

GERALD WETHERALD HALLOWELL

I entered business in the fall of 1910 with the Crowell Publishing Company of New York City in the circulation department. I remained with them three months. In January, 1911, I entered the employ of Lamont, Corliss and Company, Hudson Street, New York City, as special representative of the O'Sullivan Rubber Heel account, under Mr. Wm. P. Tuttle, Jr., advertising manager. I remained with them until November, 1913, when I accepted a position as manager of salesmen with Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Orange, N. J. September, 1915, I accepted a position with the Moore Drop Forging Company, Springfield, Mass., where I am at the present writing. Member: Harvard Club of New York.

ROBERT CANBY HALLOWELL

I was with the Century Magazine from 1910 to 1913; with the Crowell Publishing Company from 1913 to 1914. I have been treasurer of the New Republic since its establishment in 1914. Illustrations for a child's book, and a few decorations and illustrations for the Century Magazine are about the only things I can claim as literary efforts.

GARDNER LUDWIG HARDING

I left for England within a week of graduation to be an assistant editor in the Wiener International News Agency, London. The work consisted chiefly of writing articles and news stories on current English life for a chain of American Sunday newspapers, and I found it extremely interesting for about 16 months, including in it interviews with W. T. Stead, Shaw, Belloc, G. K. Chesterton, Keir Hardie and other interesting persons, articles on Oxford, the coöperative movement, industrial conditions in the North, Women's Suffrage, and the parliamentary elections of the fall of 1910, which we wrote up very carefully from week to week. I found time to speak in the suffrage, socialist and home-rule movements and became an active member in the Independent Labor Party. In the summer of 1911 I went on the Tory London Standard and in the spring of 1912 I joined the staff of the London Daily Herald on the day that paper was first issued. The Herald was the first labor daily to be published in England and the Titanic story two days after its foundation nearly upset our plant, which consisted at the start of two chairs, a deal table and a broken telephone. We had a press and some money and we developed within six weeks to something over 100,000 circulation. With the assistance of the trade union leaders sympathetic with us I got the first story of the returning Titanic crew, at 5 A. M., off the Port of Plymouth, when they came in on the Lapland. Other adventures with this newspaper included a trip to France, interviews with the French socialists and trade union leaders, the day by day account of the French shipping strike of 1912 at Dunkerque, Calais and Boulogne, report of the English socialist conference at Merthyr Tydvil, an investigation of housing conditions in South Wales, and finally an experience of nine months in the gallery of the House of Commons as parliamentary correspondent. I contributed articles and news meanwhile to the Manchester Guardian, the Standard, the Morning Post, Daily News, and a number of papers in South Africa and Australia. In the spring of 1913, a group of republican members of European parliaments was invited to China to make a tour of the country and encourage sympathy in Europe for the Chinese Republic. As representing the Daily Herald in London, The Coming Nation in America, and a number of women's societies in England, who were interested in getting information about the Chinese woman's movement, I was to accompany the party as a journalist; but the threatening outlook of the second revolution caused it to be postponed and finally abandoned; so in May. of 1912, I went alone by way of Germany, Russia, Siberia and Manchuria. I stayed in China about seven months, corresponding regularly with my papers, until, by an unfortunate coincidence, the Coming Nation failed, and the Daily Herald had to curtail its finances to such an extent that it could not continue my articles. I took a chance and stayed in China, however, with capital barely exceeding my fare home. After six weeks in Peking, attending the sessions of the Chinese parliament, visiting the revolutionary clubs and meeting the leaders, men and women, studying educational and social reforms, and travelling about for nine-tenths of the time in Chinese company and under Chinese conditions, I went south to Tsing-Tao and Shanghai. In Shanghai I met Sun Yat Sen on the evening before the second revolution, and, through sending a story about it to the Daily Telegraph (London) at Peking, I became their correspondent for two months of that unsuccessful rebellion. I was the only foreign journalist at the siege and sack of Nanking, being in the field with Chinese armies on both sides for three weeks. I was the last man to shake hands with Sun Yat Sen on board the ship on which he left China for exile in Japan and was for two months a correspondent and editorial writer on the China Daily Republican, a Chinese newspaper in Shanghai, written in English and French. I also lived for three weeks in a Chinese revolutionary club, and, during my last month, studied conditions in the Shanghai cotton mills. On the way back to America I visited mills and factories in Japan and lived in Tokio for a week with the leader of the Japanese socialist party, getting the only interview there with Sun Yat Sen granted to a foreign journalist since his expulsion from China. I arrived in Vancouver, Thanksgiving Day, 1913, and on the way back to New York spoke at Seattle, San Francisco, Fresno, Los Angeles, San Diego, and six other cities en route via Chicago and Milwaukee. I have lived a comparatively uneventful life since arriving in America; have contributed articles to the New York Press and Tribune, the Boston Transcript, Harper's Weekly, Everybody's Magazine, and the Century; have written a book for the Century Company, called Present Day China, to be brought out by them in July of this year. I am an active journalist just now, serving this winter and spring in Washington as "watchful" correspondent for the preparedness issue for Everybody's Magazine, with hopes of getting a European assignment this summer from anybody that'll risk one. I have written: Present Day China (The Century Company, July, 1916). Member: Executive Committee of the Forum of the Church of the Ascension, New York, New Bohemians. London.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

JOHN SEARS HARROLD

Leaving Cambridge in June, 1910, I lived abroad for six months, returning to America in 1911. I entered the banking business the same year, using the "bottom up" method. I found that an education costing about five thousand could be easily discounted for five per week—i.e. on the installment plan. I soon developed a happy proficiency in pedal proclivities and discovered that bankers usually have money or marry it. After fifteen months of banking exercise, every street in Boston was thoroughly familiar. Especially cheering was the news that with ten years close devotion to work one might possibly become a partner in the firm. In a moment of absentmindedness, I walked to New York before noticing that I had passed the train at the south station. From there I continued on, but bought a ticket to avoid the appearance of skinning a railroad. Since then I have managed a plantation in Virginia. Member: Westmoreland Club. Richmond, Va., Harvard Club of New York, Tennis and Racquet Club, Boston, Eastern Yacht Club, Marblehead. Mass.

RICHARD SEYMOUR HART

Since leaving college in the spring of 1907, I spent two years in the manufacturing business, and seven in the life insurance business. From 1907 to April, 1909, I was connected with Hart and Crouse Company, manufacturers of all kinds of heating apparatus, and in 1909 I severed my connection with that company to enter the service of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company. In September, 1910, I was made a district agent for the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, and on January 1, 1916, I started in as a district manager for the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company. Member: Utica Life Underwriters Association (president), Rotary Club of Utica (president), Automobile Club of Utica, Associated Charities of Utica, Council, Boy Scouts of America, Fort Schuyler Club, Utica, Yahnundasis Golf Club, Utica, Y. M. C. A.

HERBERT EDWARD HARWOOD

For about two months after class day I remained at home in Littleton, Mass., and worked on the farm on which I had always lived. During that time I made persistent attempts to "land the job", which I particularly wanted. I finally succeeded and on August 15, 1910, entered the employ of E. A. Shaw and Company, Boston, dealers in raw cotton. I have been with that firm ever since, holding various positions, ranging from the most menial to that of salesman. I have made two business trips to the South, travelling in most of the cotton states. On June 15, 1914, I was married to Miss Marjory Blanchard at Concord, Mass. Those who knew Miss Blanchard or have since known Mrs. Harwood can well imagine how wonderfully happy I am. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Concord Country Club, Concord, Mass.

AAGE GUDMUND HATT

In June, 1911, I passed my final examination (Skoleembedseksamen) at the University of Copenhagen, where I had been studying natural history and geography four years.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

After this I devoted most of my time to my main interest—ethnology. Together with my wife, who is herself an ethnologist, I took up a comparative study of the cultures in the arctic area,—material we found in the museums of Copenhagen, Petrograd, Helsingfors, Kristiana, New York, Washington, Philadelphia, Chicago, Ottawa and Harvard. (We visited Petrograd and Helsingfors in 1912 and the different American museums 1914-1915). During the summer months of 1912, 1913, 1914 and 1915 we have been doing ethnographical field work among the Scandinavian Lapps. In 1914 I took the degree of Dr. Phil. at the University of Copenhagen; my thesis was “Arktriske Skinddrayter i Eurasien oz Amerika,” a comparative study of the types of clothing used in the Arctic. In the same year a fellowship was given to me by the American Scandinavian Foundation, which gave me the opportunity of visiting the Columbia University of New York and several American museums. Since 1913 I have been employed by the Danish encyclopedia “Sahnsens Leksikon,” where I have written a great number of geographical articles. In 1916 I gave lectures at the University of Copenhagen, as “privatdocent.” I have written: Om Bruget af Garrenudler hos Naturfolkene (Geografisk Tidsskrift Copenhagen 1911), Om den kunstige Formtry at Barnehovedet hos de skandinaviske Lappe (Geografisk Tidsskrift, 1913), Lappiske Slodiforme (Geografisk Tidsskrift, 1913), Mokkasine (Geografisk Tidsskrift, 1914), Arktiske Skinddrage (Copenhagen, 1914), Doctor's Thesis, The Artificial Moulding of the Infants Head among the Scandinavian Lapps (American Anthropologist, 1915), Om Agervandingen i Gudbrandsdalen (Geografisk Tidsskrift, 1915). GEORGE MALCOLM HAWES

I was appointed head of the commercial department in the Melrose High School just before commencement. In February, 1912, I was appointed junior master in the West Roxbury High School, Boston, where I still am. In 1911, and again in 1914, I visited Europe, travelling mainly in the British Isles and France. I just avoided getting tangled up at the outbreak of the war. Member: Boston School Men's Club, Boston High School Masters' Club.

ROBERT HAYDOCK

After leaving Cambridge my natural spirit of independence soon led me to Boston where I obtained a job with Stone and Webster, where I have since been learning something about the organization and management of public utility corporations. I joined the regiment of "rookies" at Plattsburg last summer and I hope I learned enough about preparedness to be in shape for the celebration this June.

WINTHROP PERRIN HAYNES

I have been connected with the teaching staff at Harvard ever since graduation. Until June, 1914, I assisted in the department of geology for half of my time and did work in the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences for the other half. I took the degree of A.M. in June, 1912, and Ph.D. in June, 1914. In the summers of 1911, 1912 and 1913, I was doing geological work in southwestern Montana,—the region about the head-waters of the Missouri River,—which I embodied in my thesis for the degree of Ph.D. In 1913, I was instructor in the Harvard Summer School and conducted a party of six students on a 500-mile camping, geological excursion through the mountainous region northwest of the Yellowstone National Park. In all of these trips to Montana I returned by different routes, so that I had an opportunity to see the Canadian Rocky Mountains and California, the Grand Canyon, Colorado, etc. In September, 1912, I joined the transcontinental excursion of the American Geographical Society, in Montana, and went nearly to Spokane with them. The party was largely composed of delegates from the various foreign geographical societies, and included representatives of about twelve European countries. At that time I was employed by the Northern Pacific Railway as land examiner to write a report upon the "Grand Coulee" in Central Washington (published in part in American Forestry, May 1914). In the summer of 1914 I was again instructor in the Harvard Summer School and this time took eight students on a geological excursion into New Brunswick and the Gaspé peninsula. After the five weeks' course was over, I went into the interior of the peninsula and had a fine camping and fishing trip with two of the fellows. From September, 1914, to date I have been instructor in geology at Wellesley College and find the place and work very agreeable. I still keep my connection at Harvard with geology 4, but that is the only work I have done there in the past year. This summer I expect to be joint instructor with Professor W. W. Atwood in conducting a Harvard Summer School course in the mountains of southwestern Colorado. This promises to be a fine camping trip of eight weeks with plenty of horseback riding and mountain climbing, as well as the usual geological and geographical surveying. In this kind of work I am thus able to combine business and pleasure to a very considerable degree. I have written articles as follows:—Discovery of Bivalve Crustacea in the Coal Measures near Pawtucket, R. I. (Sci. N. S., Vol. 37, pp. 191-192, 1913), The Fauna of the Upper Devonian in Southwestern Montana (Annals, Carnegie Museum, 1916), The Lombard Overthrust and Associated Geologic Features (Jour. Geol., March, 1916). Member: Boston Society of Natural History, Paleontological Society of America.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

ARTHUR KLUM HENDERSON

In September, 1910, I entered the employ of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, in the bond and mortgage department. I am doing a general brokerage insurance business on the outside. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

ROBERT GRAHAM HENDERSON

After graduation, I spent one year in the Graduate School of Business Administration. In the fall of 1911, I went into the general superintendent's office, Boston and Albany Railroad, as a clerk, and, after some experience in several of the offices and a little outside work, was appointed, in the spring of 1915, chief clerk to the general superintendent, which is my present job. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Union Boat Club, Boston, New England Railroad Club, Boston.

MYRON HELLER

I was superintendent of a factory for three years and practised accounting for the same number of years.

CYRIL ALLYN HERRICK

In October, 1910, I began work as instructor in English at the Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio. Here for the first time I met, and in May, 1911, married, Emily Devereaux, a distant cousin. As instructor and then assistant professor I continued to teach English at Ohio Wesleyan University until the year 1914-1915, when I went to the University of Wisconsin. This year, 1916-1917, I am trying to drill the principles of rhetoric into these Scandinavians of the Northwest,—some job. And there are too many Yale men here at the University of Minnesota. I have written scattered articles in weeklies and reviews.

EDWARD VICTOR HICKEY

August, 1910, I entered the employ of the Henry Siegel Company, of Boston, as efficiency man and statistician, equipped with a general knowledge of economics, a fairly extensive acquaintance with French literature of the 16th century, inside information from Professor Neilshon regarding Milton's hour of rising, and a slight understanding (or misunderstanding,—depending on whether one were friend or foe, absent or present), of harmony,—and incidentally, a friendship of some years' standing with the secretary of the corporation. In 1911, the Henry Siegel Company began to display symptoms of nervous indigestion (the employees' deposits had been bolted too hurriedly). In 1912, the Henry Siegel Company very ill. In 1913, the Henry Siegel Company died. Before the death-bed scene, an offer from R. H. White to become manager of two of his sick departments was accepted. He cured the two departments, and proceeded to make a study of the labor problem in Hartford, Conn., for the Hartford Chamber of Commerce. August, 1913, I was appointed statistician and official cartographer of the Massachusetts State Bureau of Statistics, and later appointed state examiner of accounts of towns. In August, 1914, I was deputed to prepare the statistical exhibit of the commonwealth for the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Along about October, requiring assistance in this work,—as well as for other reasons,—I married Mary Rock, Simmons 1910, whose only flaw is to be found in the taste she exhibited when making her choice of husbands. August 10, 1915, E. V. H., Jr., appeared,—trained according to modern methods, but vigorous and always well, despite it. 1916, I am still examiner of accounts. If your town has not the uniform system of accounts, adopted by 16 cities and 65 towns of the commonwealth, it has not the best. Demand that it be installed! (Adv.).

SAMUEL TRAFFORD HICKS

Samuel Trafford Hicks was born April 3, 1888. His parents were Samuel Frederick Hicks and Edith Chapman. He prepared for college at the Arlington High School, and is employed at manufacturing at 17 Bowker St., Boston. He married, June 28, 1913, at Arlington, Jessie Ruth Conner, and has one son, Samuel T. Hicks, Jr., born April 13, 1914.

BARCLAY MAYNARD HIGGINSON

For the first two years after graduating I worked for a plaster manufacturing company in Newburgh, N. Y., and after that went in for general construction work, particularly hydro-electric developments. The line which I have followed has been cost engineering and estimating, which I think is the most satisfactory method of learning the practical end of this type of work. I worked on the Cedar Rapids Development of the St. Lawrence River in Quebec for four months, and then went to Shawinigan Falls, Quebec, to work for the Shawinigan Water and Power Company as the inducements were greater. I was with them for two years until the war caused them to stop their construction work, which was then sufficiently advanced for operation. I was unable to get anything until the next spring, but in the meantime I managed to enjoy some very good shooting and fishing. Then I got a job as chief inspector for the Columbia Mills, who were having a power-plant built by contract on the Oswego River at Minetto, N. Y. It was not the kind of work I wanted to do, and it was not a very large plant, being only 12,000 horse-power, whereas the other two plants which I mentioned were well over 100,000, but work was very dull at this time and I was very glad to get it. I have just finished up at Minetto and am not doing anything at the present time, but do not expect to have any difficulty in getting work this season, as business conditions are very favorable for this kind of work. I have done quite a little trapshooting in the last six years, and was fortunate enough to win the amateur championship of America in 1912. However, the traps and the kind of work I am doing are not very closely allied, and although I sometimes do fairly well when I have had a chance to practise, I lose most of what I have gained when I go to some place where I don't see a target for a year or more.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

HORACE LEWIS HILL, JR.

From November, 1910, to January, 1912, I was with Laidlaw and Company, bankers and brokers, of 26 Broadway, New York. From April to November, 1912, I was in the editorial department of the Frank A. Munsey Company, New York. From 1913 to date I have been farming at Los Altos, Santa Clara County, Cal., raising fruit and breeding pure bred Holstein-Friesian cattle and Berkshire swine. Member: New York: Harvard, Lambs; San Francisco: University, Pacific Union, Burlingame Country Club, Cercle de L'Union; Philadelphia: Merion Cricket Club.

LEWIS WEBB HILL

I entered the Harvard Medical School after leaving college. After four years of hard work there I began my hospital work, which lasted two years and a half. First I took a three months' service on the Boston Floating Hospital; then three months' research work in infant nutrition; then a 16 months' service on the medical side at the Massachusetts General Hospital. After leaving the Massachusetts General, I entered the Children's Hospital as an interne, and remained there nine months. I opened an office in Boston, in January, 1916, and am devoting my practice exclusively to children. I have an appointment now as graduate assistant in the clinic of the Children's Hospital. I am particularly interested in the chemistry of various diseases, especially as applied to infant feeding, and I have a chemical laboratory in which I spend considerable of my time. I have written articles: Report on Leucocytic Inclusion bodies (Boston Medical and Surgical Journal), Influence of Lactose on Metabolism of an Infant (American Journal of Diseases of Children), Report on Allen Treatment of Diabetes (Boston Medical and Surgical Journal), Resistance of Red Blood Cells to Hypotonic Salt Solution (Archives of Internal Medicine), Fermentative Diarrhoea in Infants (Boston Medical and Surgical Journal), and a book: The Starvation Treatment of Diabetes. Member Aesculapian Club, Boston.

LOVERING HILL

I spent two years at the Harvard Law School; two years practising law in New York; and two years with the Red Cross in France.

EN-MING HO

After graduation I remained at Harvard to take up the advance course in political science. After a year, that is in 1911, I went to the Chicago Law School and studied there for half a year. In 1912 I came back to China and was appointed chief secretary to the Bureau of Foreign Affairs at Nanking. After three months I was appointed magistrate of the District of Sun On and after eight months I was promoted to fill the magistracy of the District of Kuen Shan. I worked for six months in the last place. In August, 1913, I resigned my post because I was an active member of the Republican party and undertook to overthrow Yuan Shih Kai as he began to usurp powers, and prepare to declare himself emperor. As a magistrate I was energetic in suppressing opium, forbidding gambling, rooting up the robbers, opening schools, organizing police, encouraging industries, and introducing local self government. As to party activities, I was chairman of the counsellors of the Republican party for the local district above mentioned. After my resignation I went to Java with Mrs. Ho and in the Dutch colony Semarang, I established an English school and was principal of that school in 1914, 1915 and 1916. I also helped the Chinese merchants in that colony to establish a Chinese English School with a preparatory fund of one hundred thousand guilders, and I was elected chief secretary of that school. In June, 1916, I came back to China again with the purpose of re-entering government service, because the president, Yuan Shih Kai, was dead. Member: Republican Party (Kwok Ming Tong).

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

BENJAMIN DELAND HODGES

I spent the college year 1910-1911 in working off the courses which were still necessary for my A.B. degree on account of my absence from college, because of ill health, during the greater part of my sophomore year. In my spare time I looked up witnesses for the law firm of Choate, Hall, and Stewart, then of 60 State St., Boston. In September, 1911, entered the Harvard Law School and graduated in June, 1914. From September, 1914, to March, 1915, I worked in the law office of Weyburn and Bottomly, 53 State St., Boston. I then went to Sumter, South Carolina, where I have since been engaged in the practice of law.

HENRY PHIPPS HOFFSTOT

I left Cambridge in June, 1909, having in three years completed my course for the A.B. degree with the exception of one half point which was made up the following month at Squam Lake. In September, 1909, I entered the employ of the Canada Car Company, which concern was a few weeks later absorbed by the Canadian Car and Foundry Company. I was located in Montreal at the Turcot and Dominion plants until the following spring, when I was sent to their Amherst, Nova Scotia, plant. Returning to Cambridge for commencement exercises in June, 1910, a week or two later I succeeded, while sneezing, in dislocating my right shoulder which had for the first time been dislocated in the sophomore-senior football game in 1907 that finally ended with the remarkable score of 2-2, and which, when played off a day or two later, resulted in the first class football championship for 1910. This accident gave me an excuse for a brief trip to Europe, and, after my return, I entered the employ of the Pressed Steel Car Company in Pittsburgh, and later became assistant to the general manager in charge of miscellaneous products. This position I held until December 1st, 1915, when I was appointed assistant manager of sales in charge of the central district with headquarters in Pittsburgh, but spending a considerable portion of my time on trains, my territory extending 400 to 700 miles in all directions. My only regret is that my field does not include New England, for I often wish that I could occasionally drop off in Cambridge and see some of the many improvements which have been made there within the last six years. I still have some hope of being there for the sexennial but must confess that my chances of being present are not bright. On July 1st, 1911, I met at a house party Miss Marguerite Martin, daughter of Dr. Truman J. Martin of Buffalo, N. Y., and without wasting much time we became engaged and were married January 17th, 1912. Member: Sons of American Revolution, Pittsburgh Athletic Association, Oakmont Country Club, Traffic Club of Pittsburgh, Railway Club of Pittsburgh, Harvard Club of Western Pennsylvania.

JOHN KNAPP HOLLINS

For over a year after graduation I was interested in coal properties in Ohio. I then became associated with the brokerage firm of Huhn, Edey and Company, 74 Broadway, New York, where I became a member in January, 1913. The partnership was dissolved in February, 1915, and I became a partner in Fred Edey and Company, 612 Broadway, in March of the same year. Member: Harvard Club, Knickerbocker Club, both of New York.

EDWIN PRATT HOLMES

Upon finishing my courses at college in February, 1910, I became a member of the firm of Parker, Holmes and Company, of Boston, Mass. The line of work which I took up in that concern was that of general management, I having familiarized myself with the business previous to my graduation. Since then my time has been very much occupied with those business affairs which it is my duty to look after, and with the exception of an occasional vacation, I have devoted the greater part of my time to that work. During the summer of 1912 I was most fortunate in having an opportunity to spend my vacation in Europe. I was asked to join a party of six who were to make a three months' trip touring the Continent, and inasmuch as my fiancée was to be one of the party, I of course did not feel it was safe to pass the invitation by. The trip was extremely interesting, and covered a very large section of the country which is now being fought over and has, therefore, been the source of a great deal of added interest in following the present titanic struggle. The next important event was my marriage on October 16, 1913, to Miss Edith Noble Besse, of Springfield, Mass, sister of Arthur L. Besse, a member of our class. On September 8, 1914, Elizabeth Pratt Holmes was born, which constituted one more very happy and important event in my life. While in "prep" school I had learned the definition of arithmetical and geometrical progression, and I have found that of the two geometrical progression comes the nearer to expressing the high cost of living when one marries and starts to raise a family. As a result of the working of this law, during the past two or three years most of my time has been devoted to securing an income sufficient to take care of the overhead charges. But what's life without a family! Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Brae Burn Country Club, Lodge of St. Andrew.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

RICHARD STANTON HOLMES

After graduating in June, 1910, I went to Europe for the summer. Returning in the fall I entered the Harvard Law School and remained there for three years. Graduating in June, 1913. There is very little to tell about these years; life was more or less a continuation of college, only with much harder work and fewer outside interests. During the summer of 1911 and 1912 I worked in the law offices of Lewis and Carroll in Buffalo, New York, and in the summer of 1913 went to Europe. On my return in September, 1913, I came down here to New York and secured a position in the office of Joline, Larkin and Rathbone, attorneys, at No. 54 Wall Street, New York City. When I first arrived here I lived out at Englewood, New Jersey, while looking for a place to live in the city. In the course of this search I ran into Eustace Reynolds of the class who was on the same quest. We decided to join forces, and after a time secured a place at No. 14 St. Luke's Place, where we lived until Eus. went to Buffalo last summer. I remained with Joline, Larkin and Rathbone until the first of this year when I changed to my present position in the office of Edwards and Murphy at No. 26 Liberty Street, New York City. This is about all there is to tell of my experiences. Life in New York is not exactly eventful, and the history of a person who has no such exciting things as engagements, marriages and births to record, is of necessity somewhat uninteresting. Member: Harvard Club of New York.

MARCUS HORBLIT

After my graduation in June, 1910, I decided to devote myself to tutoring for the college entrance examinations. I have been engaged in tutoring since that time. I have written: Horblit's Key to College Entrance Examinations.

AARON HORVITZ

I left college in June of 1909 and until September, 1910, worked with the Bell Telephone Company, and as special agent for the Census Bureau of the Department of Commerce and Labor. I found the latter work to be very interesting, as it was concerned with the census of mines and manufactures of the Pittsburgh District, and gave me a considerable insight into the business conditions of my own state. In September, 1910, I returned to Cambridge, to enter the Law School, where I remained until graduation in June, 1913. To my regret, I was not able to remain in Cambridge for the triennial as I had to rush back to Pittsburgh to prepare for the state bar examinations at the end of the month. I have been practising law in partnership with my brother, a 1908 man, and have found the practice to be very interesting and as remunerative as a young lawyer could expect. Nothing eventful has happened in my life since I left college, except that recently my engagement to Gertrude J. Wayne, of this city, has been announced. I am looking forward, however, to an eventful trip to Cambridge for the sexennial and to renew friendships and acquaintances with all the fellows. Member: The Seekers, Pittsburgh, Pa., Pittsburgh Association Credit Men, Independent Order B'nai Brith, American Jewish Historical Society, University of Pittsburgh Menorah, Tyshereth Zion Society, Young Men's Hebrew Association, Harvard Club of Western Pennsylvania, Mothers' Pension League.

JAMES WILLIAM HORWITZ

I entered the firm of M. T. Silver and Company, and have busied myself in the manufacturing of ladies' cloaks and suits.

FRANCIS DEHART HOUSTON

I spent the year 1910-1911 at the Harvard Law School. During the fall of 1910 I joined Ham Fish's first "All Star" team and, in a practice game with Percy Haughton's proteges in the Stadium, attained the questionable distinction of receiving the worst injury which any member of Ham's all star teams has to my knowledge sustained. For the sake of the comfort of his future teams I hope I retain this distinction. Early in the fall of 1911 the little 21-ft. knock-about on which I had spent the summer cruising and sailing from Marblehead was put up for sale and I found myself pounding the pavements of Newark, N. J., and environs, seeking those who might be anxious to sign a contract calling for the installation of telephone service. I took up at this time what I considered would be an utterly miserable existence in a family hotel in East Orange, N. J. As a matter of fact even my "home life" in East Orange proved to be not entirely devoid of excitement as I found that one Howard Morris, '10, was living in the same hotel that I had picked and we both found the Harvard Club in New York to be within evening commuting distance. Telephone canvassing in its purest, most unadulterated form did not appeal to me and I was glad to turn to other phases of telephone commercial work and finally to accept a transfer to the advertising department at 15 Dey St., New York. At this writing I am still connected with the advertising department. With my change in work I changed my residence to New York City and tried the scheme that so many others have tried; namely, to find satisfactory rooms in the immediate vicinity of the Harvard Club. I had no luck in finding anything within my means and gravitated naturally to the "Heights" in Brooklyn where I was acquainted and had become very much interested in a certain girl. Since my marriage the question of where to live in New York City is settled for the immediate future and the latch-string is always out at 161 State Street, Brooklyn. Brooklyn viewed "tn toto" is a most dreary expanse of churches, saloons, tenements,—what you will;—but Brooklyn Heights is different. The "Heights" section is located on a high bluff overlooking the harbor and downtown New York and the neighborhood is as fine as Beacon Hill and not dissimilar in character. If you work down town in New York you can walk across the old Brooklyn

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

Bridge to work in half an hour, or if you prefer the Subway it takes six or seven minutes. I am well pleased with my environment and have not hesitated to picture it as I have observed a natural tendency to confuse Brooklyn "in toto" with the "Heights." Member: Harvard Club of New York.

STANLEY RAUSCH HOWARD

Although studying architecture at college I have been engaged in designing automatic machinery since graduation. I am now assistant chief draughtsman at the Pneumatic Scale Corporation, Norfolk Downs, Mass., which concern manufactures automatic carton handling and packing machinery. I find this work more profitable to a mind rather more mechanical than artistic, though I may have been mistaken in forsaking architecture. I have taken the Blue Lodge degrees in Masonry and am at present interested in Y. M. C. A. work, being a director at the Hyde Park Association. I have not kept in touch with college activities since graduation as much as I should like to, but hope to have more leisure for such things in the future. Member: Hyde Park Lodge, A.F. and A.M., Hyde Park, Mass., Norfolk Golf Club, Dedham, Mass.

RICHARD FARNSWORTH HOYT

On leaving college in February, 1910, I went to work for Hayden, Stone and Company, bankers and brokers, in their New York offices. On September 5, 1911, I married Miss Katharine Stone, and, after a short wedding trip, was transferred to Hayden, Stone and Company's Boston office where I am still employed. I have been much interested in small boat racing, mainly in Buzzard's Bay, and am secretary of the Beverly Yacht Club. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Club of New York, Beverly Yacht Club.

JOSEPH FAIRMAN HUDNUT

For about two years I worked in Detroit, Mich., being an architectural draughtsman by day and a teacher by night. Then I entered the University of Michigan, where I received the degree "Bachelor of Architecture." Then followed a few months in the University of Pennsylvania and some service as draughtsman in Philadelphia. Three years ago I was appointed acting professor in the State College at Auburn, Ala., and a year later I was appointed professor. Member: American Institute of Architects.

WILLIAM KISTLER HUFF

There is not much to tell. I went into teaching, and during 1910-1911 was assistant principal of the Sellersville, Pa., High School. In 1911-1912 I was instructor in English at the University of Maine and director of the Maine Masque, the university dramatic association. From the fall of 1912 to Thanksgiving, 1914, I was master in history and English at the Barnard School for Boys, Van Cortlandt Park, New York City, and the last year principal of its upper school. On the first of December, 1914, I became secretary of the American Society for Extension of University Teaching, 729-30 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia the oldest University Extension body in America, and, with its 4,000 members, the largest in the world. I am also editor of the University Extension Bulletin, our official Journal. I was married on June 16, 1914, to Miss Edna Elizabeth Jacoby, at Sellersville, Pa. Member: Harvard Club of Philadelphia.

JAMES HUMPHREY, JR.

From commencement to April, 1914, I was in the service of the New York Central Railroad engineering department in construction work. April, 1914, to April, 1915, I was in business for myself in Springfield as engineer and contractor. From April, 1915, to the present I have been principal assistant engineer in the department of streets and engineering at Springfield, Mass.

EDWARD THOMAS EYRE HUNT

War has scorched the lives of some of us with a curtain of fire. Smoke and ashes and noise hide the past. We think only in the present. We see only the present. Our yesterdays seem to belong to someone else, for we are still on the firing-line. So it seems to me that not I but some other person was, as the smooth phrase is, assistant in English at Harvard College, in 1910-1911, 1911-1912; secretary for student employment in the old appointments office at "U. 9", and member of the administrative and resident executive boards of Harvard College. It was not I but some other person who left Harvard in the fall of 1912 to join the staff of the American Magazine in New York City, and in August, 1914, sailed away from the editorial sanctum as European war correspondent. That same other person was captured at sea and spent five days a prisoner of war on the Holland-American liner Nieuw Amsterdam. He went from Holland to Berlin to find out what the war was about. Then he went to Belgium and was shelled in Antwerp for thirty-six hours. A 12.09 c.m. shell lit in the house where he was staying and blew out five good-sized rooms. It made much noise, but killed nobody. After that the Germans marched in. Ten days later that same person was in Holland with a Dutch friend who had a private yacht full of provisions and clothing to give to the Belgian refugees. On November 24 he went back into Belgium, and about a week later he was in Antwerp, this time in charge of relief work, appointed by Minister Brand Whitlock to be "délégué américain de la Commission for Relief in Belgium pour la Province d'Anvers et pour le pay de Waes." There were five or six Americans on his staff, and about twelve hundred splendid Belgian representatives belonging to the Comité National de Secours et d'Alimentation who served as members of the relief organization. There were 1,100,000 souls to feed in the Province of Antwerp and the Pay de Waes. There were several thousands to clothe; for about 30 per cent. were utterly destitute. There were tens of thousands of babies to be provided with milk; for breast-feeding has almost ceased. There were thousands of people to lodge; for 5 per cent. of all dwellings in the province had been destroyed, and refugees from other provinces were many. There was work to be provided; for practically the whole population was idle. There was some live-stock still to be protected. Seed had to be provided for planting. Laws had to be made and enforced, so that there should be no leakage of food or clothing or money. And night after night one heard the thunder of the guns along the Yser, and wondered if the work was to go on for years, or only days, or hours, or minutes. After a year of it, that other person came home with Herbert C. Hoover, the splendid founder and chairman of the whole Commission for Relief in Belgium, to try to get the American people to give a little more food and clothing to the Belgians.

LEONARD HUNTRESS, JR.

I have been connected with the following concerns: Aroostook Valley Railroad, Presque Isle, Maine; General Electric Company, Schenectady, N. Y. (1911); and present place, Didier March Company, manufacturers of fire-brick and refractory materials. I am now assistant superintendent in charge of production. I was married the 24th of April, 1916, to Edna Magdalene Lehlein, of Metuchen, N. J., and am living there.

JOHN COOLIDGE HURD

I was offered a chance to learn printing and publishing at the Riverside Press, Cambridge, late in my junior year, and as I had passed off enough courses to get my degree (I took an extra year in prep. school), I accepted, and started in in July, 1909. I stayed there almost until coming to New Haven, being two years in the printing, and the rest in the selling department. I joined Battery A, of Boston, in the fall of 1910, and as I got a great deal of fun out of it, I stayed in until coming to New Haven. Camp took up most of my vacations, allowing time for only short camping trips in the White Mountains. I became engaged in December, 1910, and was married in June, 1913, and celebrating a triennial and a marriage the same week was certainly strenuous. My wife and I took a house in Cambridge, in which we lived for over two years. The baby arrived on Thanksgiving Day, 1914. Last February I came to Eli town to take charge of the manufacturing department of the Yale University Press, and now (April 17) have just settled my family in their new home. All Harvard men, especially of 1910, visiting New Haven, are hereby notified to look me up. They serve good drinks here, and I shall grasp at every opportunity to prove it. Member: Cambridge Boat Club.

ALBERT HUSSEY

Since graduating I have been and am at present engaged in the cotton business in Boston.

ROBERT HARE HUTCHINSON

I taught from September, 1910, until June, 1912 (that is two years) in the Berkshire School, Sheffield, Mass. I returned to Harvard with the intention of taking an A.M., and spent the year of 1912-1913 studying there. I was married in June, 1912, and went with my wife to New Zealand, to study social conditions there. I travelled via Canada and San Francisco. I arrived in New Zealand, August, 1913, and remained until April, 1914. During that time I reported for a Socialist paper in Parliament and took part in elections. I travelled home via Australia, Java, Singapore, Burma, India, Egypt, and London. I arrived at New York in August, 1914. I taught with my wife in the Francisco Ferrer Modern School in New York until June, 1915. September, 1915, we opened our own school for children at Stony Ford, N. Y. I have written: The Socialism of New Zealand (New Review Publishing Association).

HAROLD BOSWORTH JELLESon

The year after my graduation in the class of 1910, I took a graduate course in the Harvard Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, receiving my A.M. degree in June, 1911, in Romance languages. During the entire school year of 1911-

1912 I was instructor in modern languages (French and German) at Lafayette College, Easton, Pa. In the summer of 1912 I travelled abroad, remaining from early summer until late in the fall, and visiting Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Holland, France, and England, and the principal cities and places in the above-mentioned countries of historical interest or of scenic beauty. From 1912 on I have been head of the modern language department in the University School, Baltimore, Md. I teach French, German, and Spanish.

HAROLD ABNER AUGUSTUS JEWETT

After studying at Harvard for two years, I left college, and, in 1909, started to work for The Bradstreet Company, as reporter, at Portland, Me. The following year (1910) I returned home to Lowell, Mass., to follow my father's business,—the manufacture of vinegars,—under the firm name of F. E. Jewett and Company. With the exception of a serious sickness which occasioned several operations and kept me from active participation in this work for practically two years, I have been with this firm ever since.

FRANK CAZENOVE JONES, JR.

I left college at the end of junior year to get married. The following autumn I went into business in New York City with Edgar A. Wilhelmi, Inc., exporters. I remained with them until shortly after the beginning of the war, as vice-president. I spent a year abroad representing the concern and remained in Europe for the first two months of the war. Shortly after my return to this country, a year ago last October, I formed a partnership under the firm name of Jones and Cammack, with Addison Cammack, also of the class of 1910, to handle some importing and exporting agencies I had closed while abroad. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Rockaway Hunting Club, Cedarhurst, Long Island.

WILLARD TECUMSEH SHERMAN JONES

I left Harvard in 1909 and spent the following year in Porto Rico, as secretary to the secretary of state of Porto Rico. In May, 1910, I came to New York City, where I worked for Mr. William Sloane, president of W. and J. Sloane, furniture and carpets. In November, 1912, I left New York for Canada, spending three months in Vancouver. In February, 1913, I was called home (Waverly, Ohio) by the death of my parents. I have since resided in Waverly, engaged in general farming.

EDWARD HENRY JOSE

After graduating I spent three years in the Law School receiving my degree in 1913. Since that time I have been practising in Cambridge, with my father for the first year, and, since his death in 1914, alone. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

JEN HAS JU

I entered the Graduate School, October, 1910; worked for the Boston and Albany Railroad, February, 1911. I left the United States in June, 1911, travelled in Europe for three months and returned to China, September, 1911. I passed the examination of the Board of Education and obtained the honorary degree of Master of Science, October, 1911. I joined the service of President Yuan as secretary-interpreter, November, 1911; and was appointed Officer of Ceremonies of President's Office, June, 1914.

LINCOLN THADDEUS JUDD

As I had leave of absence from Harvard the second semester of my senior year, I went abroad and entered the literary department of the Berlin University. I had always a very keen interest in grand opera and the annual visits of the Metropolitan Opera to Boston while I was still at Harvard were always to me a source of greatest joy and a cause for total bankruptcy on account of the high-priced seats. While at the University of Berlin I suddenly discovered that I had a dramatic tenor voice, and a royal musical director prevailed upon me to give up my previous course of work, and devote myself entirely to that alluring but tremendously difficult career. After many years of hard work of study as well in Italy (1913 and 1915) as New York (1916) and after countless discouragements I am about to accept my first engagement, and thus stand at the beginning of my career. Member: Harvard Club, Berlin, Germany, "Berlin Tennis Club" (athletic), Berlin Dramatic Society.

WILLIAM OLIVER KENNEY

Since graduation I have been associated with Kenney Bros. and Wolkins, in the manufacture and sale of equipment for schools and academies, such as desks and chairs, blackboards, paper, pencils, erasers, etc. If you know of anyone suffering for any of these articles, send him to me and I will sell him anything from a thumb-tack to a school-house all equipped. To this are added some pleasant vacations spent cruising and on the golf links, participation in the simple social activities of a small suburban town, and you have a fair idea of the application, as regards my case, of the title about which I am asked to write; namely, "Life Since Graduation." As I reflect on how little I have to tell that would interest my fellow-classmen, I envy the

ROBERT HARRINGTON KENT

I have been an assistant in physics at Harvard for the last six years. During this time I have been working on researches concerning the kinetic theory of gases. I hope shortly to publish some of the results of my investigations.

SILAS STANLEY KENT

I am a "Special Assistant" with the Massachusetts Harbor and Land Commission; am engaged in a water conservation investigation, covering the State of Massachusetts.

LAURENCE BASIL KILLIAN

After graduation, I settled my mind definitely, and, accordingly, on the first of October, 1910, I embarked on the steamship "Romanic" for the Azores, Gibraltar, and Naples. The trip was fair for that season of the year and I was fortunate in having as fellow-passengers Messrs. Maurice Feather, '07, and R. N. Burnham, '99. Both of these men and myself had a common destination,—Rome, although the objects of our visit differed. There was plenty of excitement at the various ports of call. The ship arrived at the Azores when the Portuguese Revolution was at its height and at Gibraltar we caught a glimpse of the ill-fated Manuel himself. Naples, where we disembarked, was cholera stricken at the time, making it incumbent upon us to leave town by the first train. I entered the North American College, at Rome, on October 14, 1910, and began the usual preparations for the Roman Catholic priesthood to which I was ordained October 28, 1915, by the Cardinal Vicar of Rome. During one's course, it is possible to see much of that wonderful city, which would be quite out of the question in a mere tour. Italy (and chiefly Rome) was my residence until the 24th of February just past; I did not return to America during the time. Summer vacations give one ample opportunity for European travel,—much more interesting and handy than a return trip home. While a student there I met several Harvard men. F. M. Judson, '10, I. Burrows, '10, and J. W. S. Brady, '10. The last-named man I met quite unexpectedly one Sunday morning in 1911 at mass when both his party and ours were snowed in in a small town in the Eastern Alps. While in Europe on leave of absence in 1911 Dean Hurlbut visited Rome and very kindly called on me. I returned to the United States on March 15, of this year, sailing from Bordeaux, France. This country (France) and its present condition in many points beggars description. The two salient features are the apparent absolute lack of young men, and the great numbers of women in mourning. On board ship (returning) we had plenty of excitement, especially while in the danger zone of submarines. More than ever after a long absence does a true American feel what a grand place this United States is; and how proud we should be of our nationality.

ARKLAY KING

At the end of my junior year, being then in good standing with the University, I left to take a position with Kidder, Peabody and Company, New York City, with whom I remained until 1916 when I joined the New York Stock Exchange.

FREDERICK CHARLES KING

Following my connection with the college, I went to Lockport, N. Y., as office manager of a large mail-order house. There I suffered a nervous breakdown, the effects of which have since prevented me from attaining any degree of business success. In the last five years I have practised law, sold high-grade investment bonds and typewriters. I have been local manager for Maine, northern New Hampshire and Vermont for the Royal Typewriter Company, but for the past nine months have been a plain salesman for the Underwood Typewriter Company, in suburban Portland territory. In these capacities I have been moderately successful, changes being due to temporary advantages. I have not been able to practise law for both financial and physical reasons. Member: Harvard Club of Maine, Cumberland County Bar Association, Maine.

FREDERIC WILLIAM KINGMAN

I have been superintendent of schools in Walpole, Mass., since June 1, 1905. During the college year, 1909-1910, I was on leave of absence. February 12, 1916, I was elected to the directorship of the Norfolk County Agricultural School. From March 1, 1916, to July 1, 1916, I shall divide my time equally between the Agricultural School and the public schools of Walpole. After July 1, 1916, all of my time will be devoted to the Norfolk County Agricultural School. Member: New England Association of Superintendents of Schools, Massachusetts Association of Superintendents of Schools, Massachusetts Schoolmasters' Club, Fraternal Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Hyannis, Reliance Lodge, I. O. O. F., No. 137, Walpole, Walpole Grange, No. 214, Norfolk Pomona Grange, No. 27, Honor Society, established by College Teachers of Education at Indianapolis, March, 1910.

HECTOR MACDONALD KINGSBURY

After graduation I entered the Graduate School of Applied Science at Harvard and received the degree of Mining Engineer from this institution in June, 1911. During the following three years I was engaged in engineering work for the Conrey Placer Mining Company at Ruby, Montana. Since June, 1914, I have been in charge of prospecting and geological work for the Tanalyk Corporation Limited, an English concern, operating copper, gold and silver mines in a large area in the South Ural Mountains, Orenburg Government, Russia.

FREDERIC RICHARDSON KIRKLAND

For six months after leaving college I sold bonds for Redmond and Company, when my father died and I went abroad. I came back to be married; whereupon I entered the Telephone Company, and have been there ever since, except when having children and going to football games. Member: Philadelphia Country Club, Bala, Pa., Racquet Club, New York (non-resident), Harvard Club of Philadelphia.

GEORGE CLIFFORD KISKADDON

After studying law in the University of Pittsburgh, I settled in Oklahoma City, where I became associated with George E. Black in the practice of law. The fascination of the oil business, Oklahoma's greatest industry, and the opportunities for a lucrative law practice in handling oil business litigation, induced me to move to Tulsa, Okla. With reasonable success to date, and excellent prospects for the future, life and work in this "man's town" is very enjoyable. It may be surprising to some members of the class to know that in Tulsa and in Oklahoma City, the younger groups of professional and business men are largely made up of eastern university graduates. Member: Harvard Club of Oklahoma, Masonic Orders, Blue Lodge, Oklahoma City, and Consistory, McAlester, Okla.

WALTER MAX KRAUS

After leaving Harvard (1909) I went to the Johns Hopkins Medical School, from which I received the degree of M.D. in 1913. During the summers of my last two years, I worked at chemistry at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York. After leaving Hopkins, I completed my work for the master's degree, which I received in 1914 from Columbia University. In January, 1914, I began my internship at Bellevue Hospital, N. Y. This work lasted until 1916. At present I am engaged in the practice of medicine. I am

This was founded last year. Of this I am president at the present writing. I have written: Vagotonia (translated from the German of Eppinger and Hess, by Walter Max Kraus, A.M., M.D., and Smith Ely Jelliffe, Ph.D., M.D.), Vegetative Neurology (translated from the German of Heinrich Higier, by Walter Max Kraus, A.M. WILLIAM HENRY KURTZ

After leaving college, I spent the next three years of my life in the Harvard Law School. It was not until then that I fully appreciated the depth of Dante's "Inferno". At the end of my first year there, I was forced to go abroad to recuperate. On arriving I was amazed to find the natives selling wines and liquors at ridiculously low prices. Little did I think that my stay there would eventually stir up such a dreadful warfare among the people. I tried so hard to be impartial. The remaining years of my life I have spent in the practice of law, and I find, as did Blackstone, that she is a jealous mistress. Member: Lafayette Club, York, Pa., Country Club, York, Pa.

MORRIS FELTON LACROIX

In 1910 and 1911 I was at the Graduate School of Applied Sciences, receiving the degree of M.E. in June, 1911. Immediately after leaving the Graduate School, I accepted a position in the engineering department of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company, Ishpeming, Mich. From June, 1911, until September, 1912, I acted first as assistant and then as engineer on the Carp River Water Power development of the Cleveland Cliffs Company. From September, 1912, until January, 1915, I was engineer of the Lake Mine at Ishpeming, Mich. In January, 1915, I was transferred to the geological department and am now assistant geologist. Member: American Institute of Mining Engineers, Harvard Club of Boston.

ISIDOR ABRAHAM LANDESMAN

I am a real estate and insurance broker and counselor and attorney-at-law. Since leaving Harvard I have realized what a tremendous asset a college education is, and it seems to me at present that if I had the opportunity I would like to return to Harvard to complete my education there. In the six years passed since 1910 I have learned from business and association with various people that I live in a century of unlimited possibilities, in the greatest country and age of a big busy little world. To specialize in some single thing wanted by us humans spells success to the individual, and even then I think my shortcomings and limitations would be immense and indefinable in this wide expanse of learning, and it is with a full realization of this truth that I think I would like to go back to Harvard. Member: Harvard Menorah, West End Y. M. H. A.

RALPH MARTIN LANE

After graduating, I spent several months in Europe. A great part of this time I was with T. W. Ellis, of our class, with whom I crossed. On my return, in October, 1910, I came out to St. Louis, and in June, 1911, obtained a clerical position with the Wichita Union Stock Yards, Wichita, Kan. I was connected with this concern for almost two years, having been promoted in the meantime to the position of secretary and treasurer. In November, 1912, I resigned from this company, accepting a position as assistant to the general superintendent of the Detroit Copper and Brass Rolling Mills, Detroit, Mich. My work in this connection was entirely along operating lines. On December 31, 1914, I left this firm to become associated with the one I am with at present; namely, Polack Tyre and Rubber Company. Before returning to St. Louis, I was connected with their Detroit branch, and in March, 1915, was instructed to open a new branch office in St. Louis and assume the duties of its manager. While I have not been East for some years, I nevertheless still keep in touch with various college activities and have recently met quite a few members of our class.

CHARLES LANIER, JR.

I finished my college course in the spring of 1909 and spent the next ten months travelling in Europe and South America. In the latter place I took a very exciting and interesting trip through the jungle country of Paraguay. In April, 1910, I went to work in the banking house of Redmond and Company, where I remained until July, 1913. I then went into business by myself working at odd things until March 1, 1915, when I became secretary of the Lenpier Trading Company, Inc., with which concern I am still connected. Besides my regular business, I have a few outside interests such as the oil business in Mexico, which, in December, 1913, enabled me to be present at a three-day attack on Tampico by Villista soldiers; also cattle ranching out in Wyoming, which gave me a very pleasant and healthy three months this last summer. I am afraid I shall not supply you the three hundred words asked for, as, outside of what I have mentioned above, I have had but little that would be of interest. My life is that of a quiet business man and I do but little that is out of the ordinary. The literary accomplishment blank I shall leave blank, but purely from necessity. Member: Knickerbocker Club, Racquet and Tennis Club, both of New York.

REGINALD BISHOP LANIER

I left college in the middle of my senior year after mid-year examination in order to travel in Cuba and Mexico. I returned in the Summer School 1910, to finish the one course required for my degree of A.B. In the autumn of 1910 I began work with Messrs. Spencer Trask and Company, investment bankers, and I continued with them until the autumn of 1913, when I went into the office of Messrs. Hambleton and Company, bankers. In the autumn of 1915 I entered the employ of Messrs. Winslow, Lanier and Company, bankers, where I am at present. SAMUEL CROCKER LAWRENCE

The summer of 1910 I spent in the Rocky Mountains of Montana with a Harvard geological expedition. In the fall I returned to college to take up some advanced work in geology, at the same time acting as assistant instructor in "Geology 4". In the fall of 1911, I entered the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, but was forced to leave in the spring to go to Mexico on business. In the fall of 1912 I went to work at Wm. Filene's Sons' Co., Boston, as assistant to the merchandise manager. My health broke down the following February, so I left and eventually drifted to Canton, North Carolina, where I went to work in the wood-yard of the Champion Fibre Company, (a 200-ton wood-pulp mill). After a few months I was made superintendent of the wood-yard which kept me busy until June, 1915. At that time I left and went to West Point, Va., where I went through various stages of evolution,—some painful and some amusing,—which finally brought me to the job of assistant superintendent, which I hope to be holding down when this goes to print. I entered the Medical School in September, 1910, and was graduated in June, 1914. I entered the surgical side of the Boston City Hospital November, 1914, after serving five months on the orthopedic service at the Massachusetts General Hospital. In June, 1915, I went to a field hospital situated at Danner-Camieu, in Northern France, serving as a surgeon in the first Harvard unit, attached to the Royal Army Medical Corps. I returned to the City Hospital in November, 1915, after this leave of absence, and resumed work on the surgical side. I expect to finish there in July, 1916, and then expect to go to the Children's Hospital for six months, on the orthopedic service. After that—the cold world. Member: Masons, Amicable Lodge of Cambridge, Harvard Club of Boston.

HARRISON DENHAM LE BARON

I have been located in Oxford, Ohio, teaching in the Western College since leaving college. My especial work is in theoretical music. In addition I teach organ, and play for chapel and church services. I direct a choir of fifty and a chorus of eighty. In 1915, I was made an associate professor. nership with Spencer E. Toll for the purpose of manufacturing and selling electrical dental specialties. In July of that year my wife and I decided to go over to Europe; so combining business with pleasure I took with me a sample case containing the articles we manufactured. I was pretty successful and succeeded in establishing agencies in Rotterdam, Berlin, Leipzig, Zurich, Milan, Paris, and London. I was obliged to pay a duty on my sample case upon entering Holland and Italy but not in the other countries. I continued in this business until April, 1914, when, on account of ill-health and danger of consumption, I was obliged to give it up and sell out to my partner. That summer my wife and I camped out on Conn. Lake in northern New Hampshire. The winter of 1914-1915 we spent in Asheville, N. C., and last summer we again camped out in New Hampshire; so by last fall I was in first-class shape. On November 15, 1915, I went to Gary, Ind., and was employed as concrete inspector by the American Sheet Steel and Tin Plate Company. I was obliged to give up this job on February 1, 1916, and return to New York where I am at present employed by the Century Tire Company. Member: Fox Hills Golf Club, Stapleton, S. I., N. HUBERT RANDOLPH LEONARD

In the early part of 1910, I went to Minneapolis to join the commercial organization of the Minneapolis General Electric Company, a light and power company under the management of the Stone and Webster Corporation. In November of the same year, I left this company and entered the service of the General Electric Company at Schenectady, N. Y., where I have been located since. I began work in the testing department which is a division of the factory composed of apprentice engineers who subject the various products to electrical and mechanical tests before shipment. After a year of experience in the factory, I was given the opportunity of visiting the principal plants of the company to observe the methods of design and manufacture in preparation for work in the sales organization. I joined the supply department shortly after, and engaged in the development of the sale of electrical material through the medium of the electrical supply jobber. In this work I travelled intensively through the greater part of the country east of the Mississippi River for a period of three and one-half years. In the latter part of 1915, I was transferred to the accounting department as a travelling auditor which is my present position.

MAURICE JOHN LEONARD

In October, 1910, I came to Cuba to engage in sugar manufacturing on a plantation known as Central Armonia, where I am at present located. Recently, I was made assistant general manager. Member: Harvard Club of New York, American Club of Havana.

RUSSELL HENRY LEONARD

After graduation, I worked for two months on the liquidation of the Mt. Hope Iron Company, of Somerest, Mass., and in the fall of 1910, I was an operative in the Davis Mills of Fall River, attending at the same time the textile school in that city. In the spring of 1911 I was appointed an agent of the United States Tariff Board, to figure costs and collect data in mills in this country. In September of the same year I went to France to do the same work for the board. After returning to this country I worked for eight months for F. S. Moseley and Company, bankers, of Boston, as a salesman of commercial paper. I left here to work one year for the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates, at Ludlow, Mass., as secretary to the agent, Mr. Stevens. The following six months I was selling agent of a small cotton yarn mill in Warren, R. I., and in December, 1914, I was elected treasurer of the Wampanoag Mills, Fall River, Mass., where I am located now. WALTER LIPPMANN

My first job was on Everybody's Magazine as assistant to Lincoln Steffens. I wrote a number of articles and helped on some investigations. In the summer of 1911, I became a sub-editor of Everybody's Magazine, and kept that position until New Year's of 1912. Then I was appointed executive secretary to Mayor George R. Lunn, of Schneectady, at the beginning of his administration and stayed with him until May, 1912. Following that, I edited and prepared for the press The Poems of Paul Mariett. That summer, I wrote a book called A Preface to Politics, which was published in January, 1913. During the winter of 1912-1913 I wrote a number of articles for various magazines. That spring and summer and the next winter I was working on a book called Drift and Mastery, which was published in the autumn of 1914. In November, 1914, a weekly paper called

CLARENCE COOK LITTLE

In September, 1910, I became secretary to the corporation of Harvard University, and, at the same time, entered the Graduate School of Applied Science. The work in the first position was extremely interesting to me and provided a wonderful opportunity to meet and observe the men who are giving their best efforts to Harvard's well-being. In the Graduate School I took half-time work in research at the Bussey Institution. The particular problem on which I worked was the analysis of the inheritance of certain characters in mice. In the winter of 1911, I reluctantly gave up the secretarial work and put full time into research. In June, 1913, I took and "flunked" an examination for the degree of doctor of science, and, in June, 1914, after reviewing a large amount of knowledge, which I have since forgotten, I passed the examination and received the degree,—thereby experiencing the thrill so aptly described by our contemporary cartoonist, Goldberg, "Now you've got it, what are you going to do with it?" In May, 1911, I was officially declared exempt from an income tax up to $4,000 (idle privilege). After a short wedding journey in the White Mountains, my wife and I returned to Brookline, where we occupied a small house on my father's estate. Here, in May, 1912, our eldest son, Edward, was born. At the present writing he is a very active young gentleman, quick on (and off) his feet, and, to top it off, a "south-paw". In August, 1914, came our second child, Louise, a determined lady, who promises trouble for her elder brother a little later, though at present she acts as "tackling dummy" very successfully. Last September boy number two, Robert, arrived, and at the present time is fulfilling the onerous duties of a six-months-old infant with ease and grace. In fact, in the gentle indoor sport of roaring, he, like Ben Adhem's name, led all the rest. At the present time I am a research fellow in genetics for the Cancer Commission of Harvard University. In spare moments I try to act as a trustee of the Noble and Greenough School, run a large and noisy kennel of thoroughbred dogs, assist the "missus" in picking out plumbing fixtures and other parlor ornaments for a newly-started house, and answer vague and disturbing questions propounded by the eldest infant, above referred to. The house will, I hope, be finished in October, and from then on will always be gladly opened to any and all members of 1910. I cannot complete even a brief account of my "life" since graduation without a reference to my parents. None ever lived who gave so much to their children and asked so little in return. Their sole purpose in life was to make their children and each other happy. These two motives, closely interwoven were the guiding forces of their life. So beautifully did they follow them that when in August, 1914, they were taken within a day of each other, it did not appear, nor has it since seemed like death. I have written ten or twelve articles on Genetics in various Scientific Journals. Member: American Society of Zoölogists, American Society of Naturalists, American Association for Cancer Research, Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Club of New York.

On July 5, 1910, I started work in the bond department of Parkinson and Burr, and I have been there ever since. CHARLES HAROLD LIVINGSTON

After graduation in 1910, I spent two years in the Harvard Graduate School, specializing in Romance languages. 1912-1913 was passed as instructor in English at the Hill School, Pottstown, Pa., the "once" famous incubator for Yale athletes. Part of 1913 was also spent in wandering aimlessly around the map of Europe and then came a big jump from Venice to Santa Barbara, Cal. I spent a very happy year in California as master of modern languages in the Santa Barbara school which has sent one man to Harvard so far and expects to send more. Then in the spring of 1914 came another big jump from Santa Barbara to Paris, the first leg of what was planned to be a three years' experience in Europe. However the war broke out shortly after my arrival in France and not being of bellicose disposition, I returned to the United States, got out my green bag and started a campaign in the Harvard Graduate School for a Ph.D., which is still some distance away I fear. 1914-1915 and 1915-1916 have been spent at Harvard with the exception of a ramble of several months in the Rockies, Wyoming, Montana and the Yellowstone in the summer of 1915. I have been appointed instructor in Romance languages at Harvard for 1916-1917.

JOHN MUNRO LONGYEAR, JR.

After leaving Harvard, in the spring of 1909, I went with my father on a trip to his coal mine in Spitzbergen, north of Norway. That fall, instead of returning to Harvard, I went to Houghton, Mich., and attended the Michigan College of Mines. During the time that I was there, my main activity, outside of learning to be a mining engineer, was producing and writing the music for two musical comedies that were put on by the students. Immediately after graduation from there, with the degrees of bachelor of science and engineer of mines, in May, 1912, I went to work at the Superior Copper Mine, near Houghton, as efficiency engineer. This mine is one of the subsidiaries of the Calumet and Hecla, which practically began the efficiency movement as applied to mining. I stayed with the Superior until May, 1913, when I was transferred to the Osceola Mine, near Calumet, in the same capacity. While there, I married Elizabeth Barrett, of Houghton. When the strike was called in July, I left the company, and went to Boston. The next two years I spent acquiring the degree of master of science in geology, at Harvard. This winter, 1915-1916, I am spending at the University of Wisconsin, getting a Ph.D. The last two summers I have been doing geological field work in Northern Michigan, where I expect to settle after leaving here. I wrote the music for The Red Streak, also incidental music for In Tobero, musical comedies produced by the Micomi Club of

The first year after graduation I spent in travelling. The next year I went to the Harvard Law School. I stayed in the Kentucky coal fields for some time during the erection of a coke plant. For the last few years I have been in business in Boston.

SHERWOOD MOORE LOWREY

As some of you may remember, I left Cambridge at the end of our sophomore year. Having had my fill of education I returned to Hawaii and entered the employ of Lewers and Cooke, Ltd., dealers in building materials. Beginning in the lumber yard with hours from 6.30 A. M. to 5.30 P. M., it was a couple of years later that I obtained an office position which I held until November, 1911, when I resigned from the firm to accept a position with the Guardian Trust Company, Ltd. My new duties consisted of the management of the stock and bond department and the overseeing of the general accounting. I held this position until February, 1915, when I resigned to accept the treasurership of Lewers and Cooke, Ltd. That position I now hold. Several changes other than business have also taken place. First and most important of all was that on November 14,

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

1911, I was married. We now have a little daughter, Jane, three years old, and little Robert Sherwood eight months old. Soon after the war in Europe broke out, realizing the extent to which it might extend, I enlisted in the National Guard, believing that what little training one might receive would be well worth while in case trouble should ever come. Remember that we are 2,100 miles from the mainland with no fleet to protect us. Consequently if trouble should come, it would be strictly up to us who live here. By "us" I mean the people who live here together with the 10,000 United States regular troops now stationed here. After a year's service in the ranks I secured a commission as 1st lieutenant in a new company that was being formed. With the exception of the three white officers all of the other members, 139 men, are Filipinos. The drilling has required much time, two evenings each week in addition to Sunday mornings. It has been well worth while. Our guard has increased in the past five months from 1,200 men to over 4,000 men, and is still increasing. It is an example that well might be followed on the mainland. I regret exceedingly that it will be impossible for me to be in Cambridge during our sexennial, but here's hoping that you all will have the best kind of a good time.

TWINING LYNES

I took up my residence in Groton School when it opened in the fall of 1910, and have been on the job since that time. As far as I can see, I expect to continue here indefinitely. My work consists in teaching various subjects, principally history, English and music. The latter is really my department, and includes a good many branches; the training of the choir and glee club, giving weekly organ-recitals, a series of music lectures each year, and the teaching of piano, organ and harmony. Constant association with boys is an integral part of a schoolmaster's duty, and he is at that work from the rising bell until the lights are put out for the night. While at Harvard I worked at music with the idea of becoming a professional musician, and with that idea in mind, assumed the responsibilities of my first job. Peculiarly enough, I find that I am here, first a schoolmaster, and second, a musician. And that is the way it should be, I think. In the summer of 1911, I went to Europe, to travel a bit, and to study organ-playing and choir-training in England, until time for the re-opening of Groton. Before going to London I cruised in the Baltic and the North Sea, and rambled a bit in Denmark, Holland, Belgium and northern Germany. The choir-work of which I speak consisted in observing various methods of training boys' voices. In the summer of 1914 I again went to England with the same object in view, and settled in Hereford to study with Dr. Sinclair, organist of the cathedral. At the outbreak of the war, I was in London, where things were interesting, and, for a time, unordered. I returned in time for the opening of Groton. The trip I made in the steerage, from Liverpool to Quebec. I was alone and had no cares and worries. It is the sort of thing that one finds difficult to put on paper. However, it was one of the most wonderful experiences of my life. But—once is quite enough. During the summers of 1912, 1913 and 1915 I was at a camp for boys on the Belgrade Lakes, Maine. I expect to return there for the coming summer. I have composed several songs for voice and piano (published by Arthur P. Schmidt), several anthems for church use (written for a boy choir and published by Arthur P. Schmidt). ALEXANDER STERLING MACDONALD

The task of writing my life since graduation, recalled by Pete Little's recent notice, presents a problem as difficult as though one were suddenly called to present to St. Peter sufficient reason for being allowed to enter Heaven. Our own peculiar problems, so vital to ourselves, may prove of little interest to another. Starting in the summer of 1909, two years in a brokerage office on State Street proved conclusively that stock speculation could not always be relied upon to make up the difference between wages earned and money spent in living. So I quit luxurious hours and habits, and from seven till six with Park and Pollard Company attempted to master the art of making two eggs appear where there was but one before. The poultry feed manufacturing game was interesting and instructive and more remunerative than selling bonds. Four years and a half I spent there and now leaving the buying end of the grain business I have just started for myself the grain brokerage and commission business. I am optimistic as to its possibilities—though without doubt the difference between buying and trying to sell will be apparent. Work has been absorbing but family life equally so. My family moved from Ashmont where we had lived twenty years to Winchester in the fall of 1912. There I met the present Mrs. MacDonald, and we are living in Winchester quietly enough, keenly absorbed in watching the growth and development of a young son. Sexennial time will include the second anniversary of my wedding; but, as Wellesley 1911 will be celebrating reunion too, I expect to be able to present a perfect attendance record. Time moves along very quickly and it is hard to realize that over six years have elapsed since my college days. I have written no books and joined no clubs—in fact have done little to make myself distinct from the ordinary, commonplace, law-abiding citizen. These enforced autobiographies cause, of necessity, some reflection, perhaps self-analysis, and may give necessary stimulus for many accomplishments before decennial time.

MAURICE ALFRED MACK

Maurice Alfred Mack was born Jan. 6, 1889. His parents were Harry H. Mack and Lena Wetzler. He prepared for college at the Franklin School, Cincinnati, O. He is by occupation a stockbroker at 50 Broad St., New York, and resides at the Majestic Hotel, 72d St., New York. He was married on April 18, 1912, at New York, to Gladys L. White.

WARREN McLAUGHLIN

I was graduated from Harvard College in June, 1909 (as of 1910). I was a student in metallurgy at Columbia School of Mines from September, 1909, to June, 1913. I received the degree of metallurgical engineer in June, 1913. I started work October, 1913, for the Canadian Copper Company, Copper Cliff, Ontario. From October, 1913, to January, 1914, I was a laborer in the employ of the Canadian Copper Company; from January to March, 1914, converter helper; from March to May, 1914, sampler; from May to June, 1914, I was a laborer in the employ of the Nipissing Mining Company, at Cobalt, Ontario; from June to July, 1914, millman; from July, 1914, to April, 1915, mill sampler; from April, 1915, to August, 1915, assistant in research work; from August, 1915, to November, 1915, assistant metallurgical engineer; from November, 1915, to February, 1916, chief assayer; from February, 1916, to date, assistant mill superintendent. Member: University Club of New York, American Institute of Mining Engineers.

FRANK BURNHAM McLEARY

Having completed work for my degree the previous June, I left college in February, 1910, and until March, 1911, I was with the S. A. Woods Machine Company, Boston. Then for three months I sold advertising specialties in and around Boston. The following fall I undertook to teach English at Colby College. I made some very good friends and had a bully time. From 1912 to 1913 I taught English in Syracuse University, occupying the same conference room with B. G. Whitmore. But I got impatient in the early spring and went down to New York on a scouting expedition. "I understand you want to take up magazine work," remarked the advertising manager of Doubleday, Page and Company to me in an interview arranged for me by a friend. "What side of magazine work are you looking for?" "The business side," I replied, somehow divining that this was the thing to say. (Until that moment I had had my mind set on just plain writing,—newspaper work, or magazine writing, if I could qualify). This answer seemed to please him; and on July 7, 1913, I began to solicit school advertisements for the World's Work. In the course of this work I had occasion to prepare two little articles, "What School for the Boy?" and "What School for the Girl?" which ran in the advertising section of the magazine. This led to an unique job,—the preparation of story advertisements for some of our national advertisers. The following articles which have appeared in World's Work, "in position immediately following editorial text," suggest some of the interesting features of this work: The Wonder Story of the Kodak (Eastman Kodak Company, October, 1913), Leading the Bookkeepers out of Bondage (Felt and Tarrant Manufacturing Company, December, 1913), Cutting the High Cost of Good Motor Cars (Chalmers Motor Company, January, 1914), A Better Chance for the Babies (Nestlé's Food Company, February, 1914), Marshalling the Four Winds for Health and Industry (B. F. Sturtevant Company, March, 1914), The Pursuit and Capture of Father Time (Elgin National Watch Company, August, 1914), New Wings for Business (Lamson Company, September, 1914), Defeating America's Greatest Enemy (General Fire Extinguisher Company, October, 1914), Keeping Travel Swift, Safe and on the Minute (Hamilton Watch Company, December, 1914), The Retreat of the Hide-Bound Ledgers (Baker-Vawter Company, February, 1915), Following the Sunset to the Golden Gate (Southern Pacific Company, April, 1915), The Quest for Perfect Tone (John Church Company, June, 1915), The Apache Trail in Sunset Land (Southern Pacific Company, February, 1916), Increasing the Comfort of a Nation (Northwestern Knitting Company, March, 1916). CAMERON MACLEOD

I got through college in 1909, but took my degree with 1910. I was graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1912. I was employed by the firm of Macleod, Calver, Copeland and Dike in August, 1912, which specializes in patent, copyright, and trade-mark law. In the fall of 1913, I entered the firm, where I am practising law at the present time. During the summer seasons while in the Law School, I had several very good fishing trips. I took two trips to the south-east branch of the St. Marguerite River, for salmon. I took, in all, from eighty to one hundred salmon, which averaged in weight over twenty-one pounds. The St. Marguerite River runs into the Saguenay at some little distance from the St. Lawrence. It is one of the rivers on the south side of the height of land, the north side of which drains into Hudson Bay. I also salmon-fished in the St. John, which runs out at Douglstown on the Gaspé Peninsula. In 1913, I went to England and Scotland for two or three months' golf. The summer of 1914 I spent at the office and part of last summer

JOHNSON DANIEL McMAHON

Immediately after I was graduated, I studied law in the office of John D. McMahon, American Block, Rome, N. Y. I was admitted in April, 1914. From July, 1914, to January, 1915, I worked in the attorney general's office of the state of New York at Albany as deputy attorney general. Since that time, I have been practising law as a member of the firm of McMahon and McMahon, in Rome, N. Y. I am a member of the Democratic state committee of New York state. Except for the six months in Albany, I have lived in Rome continually since graduation. Member: Rome Country Club, Teugega Country Club, Rome Club, Harvard Club of New York, Adirondack League Club, B. P. O. E., No. 1268.

BERNARD ALOYSIUS McMANUS

I attended Harvard Law School during 1910-1911 and 1911-1912. Then I spent the year 1912-1913 tutoring in Dorchester and 1913-1914 teaching in the Government schools of Porto Rico, being located at Caguas. I completed my law studies at Columbia Law School and received the degree of LL.B. During the year of 1915-1916 I have been teaching Latin and Spanish in a private school in New York. I plan to take the bar examinations in Massachusetts this June and if successful will begin practice there.

JOHN RUSSELL McMILLAN

After leaving college I went into the central part of North Dakota to learn the grain business. I spent a winter there in Eckman, N. D. I spent the following four years between our office in Minneapolis and various parts of Minnesota, and North and South Dakota. I took one trip to Europe, and have been in New York once since I left college. Since marrying I have been in Minneapolis, once in Florida—no other trips. Member: Minikahda Club, Lafayette Club, both of Minneapolis, Harvard Club of Minnesota.

ROGERS MACVEAGH

I received my A.B. at mid-years, 1909, as of 1910. I spent the spring of 1909 partly in California, partly on a farm in New Hampshire. I was at the Harvard Law School from 1909 to 1912. I did not take a degree, owing to serious illness in 1911. I was a clerk in the office of Stetson, Jennings and Russell, in New York City, in the autumn of 1912. I visited the Republic of Andorra, in the Pyrenees Mountains, in December, 1912, and January, 1913. I was admitted to the New York bar in the spring of 1913. I entered the office of Teal, Minor and Wingree, Portland, Ore., in July, 1913, where I have since remained. I joined Troop A, 1st Cavalry, Oregon National Guard, when it was mustered in in December, 1913; acting as first sergeant at camp at Monterey, Cal., in July, 1915; commissioned second lieutenant in October, 1915; appointed quartermaster of 1st battalion, 3d infantry, and assigned to provisional machine gun company. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Club of New York, University Club, Portland, Ore., Multnomah Amateur Athletic Club, Portland, Ore.

PERCY CHILDS MADEIRA, JR.

The years 1910-1913 I spent in the study of law at the University of Pennsylvania Law School, during the last two years being an editor of the Law Review. Almost immediately after graduating from the Law School I entered the law office of Morgan, Lewis and Bockins, in Philadelphia, and have remained there ever since. On May 2, 1914, I was married in Baltimore, Md., to Margaret Townsend Carey of that city; and on March 2, 1915, our son, Percy C. Madeira, 3d, was born. I have written an essay on the doctrine that leases of coal are equivalent to sales thereof (University of

JOHN EDWARD MAHONEY

I rush to spread before you these notable achievements of mine: I got my degree—at last; I am no longer an office-boy, and for some unknown reason a girl—you know—the regular “good scout” hold-the-trenches-with-you sort—has consented to go into 50-50 partnership with this “poor but honest” pilgrim. To you, Horatio Alger moving picture heroes, who have ascended the golden stairs of business success—possibly by the private escalator—these achievements of mine seem small and unworthy of notice; but I envy no one. I am happy, cheerful and contented—except for a little hyperacidity, by the way.

JOSEPH J. MAHONEY

I am by occupation a stockbroker at 68 Devonshire St., Boston and reside at 19 Olmstead St., Jamaica Plain.

LOUIS ALOYSIUS MAHONEY

Though it pleases me to think of myself as a member of 1910, actually I didn't get my degree until 1912, the cause of which same delay being a long illness. In July, 1912, I landed a job with the United Shoe Machinery Company, and up-to date I have succeeded in keeping it. For the past year I've been in charge of the company's interests in Sao Paulo, Brazil. Sao Paulo may sound like a combination of shanties and saloons with a population of 500 on a Saturday night. As a matter of fact it's some city,—population 450,000,—and New York has nothing on it for bright lights and “sich things.” The only drawback is that its about 6,000 miles from Harvard Square. So I'll have to forego the sexennial.

JAMES BENHAM MALCOM

Upon graduating from college in June, 1910, I entered the New York office of Lee, Higginson and Company, starting as a runner, and, after receiving a good training in the elements of the bond investment business, was sent out in New York City as a junior bond salesman. After being with Lee, Higginson for over two years, I accepted a position as bond salesman for the firm of Dominick and Dominick, with whom I am still connected. I have always lived in New York City during this time except for going away for a short vacation in the summer. Member: Harvard Club of New York.

JOSEPH JAMES MARKS

I finished college, or rather my requisite number of courses for a degree, in June, 1909. From that date until October, 1909, Nelson's Business College claimed my spare moments, when I entered my father's business, of which I am now secretary. In June, 1910, I returned to Cambridge for class-day exercises. Until November, 1911, I worked hard in anticipation of the Yale game, which I attended, and since then I have lived a model life, awaiting the sexennial reunion for another chance to live many years in one week. I suppose the next big event after this will be the surrender of my personal liberty to some, as yet, unknown suffragette. Until then I remain happy that I am a regular "gink" and a member of 1910. Member: Harvard Club of Memphis.

RALPH STEVENS MARSHALL

After leaving college, I started as a clerk with the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company, staying with that company until January 1, 1911, when I changed over to the bond business as a salesman with N. W. Harris and Company, Incorporated. I remained with this concern until May 1, 1914, at which time I changed to the restaurant business, entering my father's place of business, known as Jones and Marshall, 28 and 32 Merchants Row, where I am at present located.

FRANK WILLIAM MARTIN

During the past six years my experiences have been many and varied. In the fall after graduating I matriculated to the Medical School where I spent four very interesting yet hard years of study. During the four years I carried on a great deal of hospital work; that is, in the summer vacations I did extra work in the medical clinics at the Massachusetts General Hospital. Inasmuch as I was going in for surgery I took advantage of studying medicine during the vacation months. Along with this medical clinical work I worked at the beach in the afternoons at life-saving, this work lasting from June to Labor Day. I enjoyed this immensely besides being well paid for the job. It gave me a great chance to be out of doors and to be able to keep in the best of physical condition. I have worked at this for seven summers from 1907 through 1913. In the summer of 1912 I took the summer obstetrical course, thereby anticipating the third-year course and worked in the West and North Ends, delivering babies, fifty-three in all. They were of all sizes, shapes, and shades. The tales I could tell would interest you immensely, but space does not permit. In the fall of 1912 I was taken into the Oliver Wendell Holmes Medical Society, the following year being elected secretary-treasurer; also was taken into the Alpha Rho chapter of the Alpha Kappa Kappa Medical Fraternity, in which I later held office. At the competitive examinations held in Boston for the hospital appointments I succeeded in getting the first appointment at the Massachusetts General Hospital on the surgical staff. This began May 1, 1914, and I remained until October 31, 1915, a most enjoyable 18 months of hard work and great experience. The next day I went to the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital at the invitation of Dr. Harvey Cushing and had a four months' neurological service, a most valuable training under a great leader in neurology. March 1, 1916, I began teaching anatomy in the Harvard Medical School in the afternoons. April 1, 1916, I started an appointment,—assistant to the surgeon at the Boston Dispensary for a term of six months. I have opened an office in Boston. I am en-

I spent three years (1909-1912) in the Harvard Law School. I went abroad in the summer of 1912. In August, 1912, I entered the office of Byrne and Cutcheon, New York City. In January, 1913, I resigned from Byrne and Cutcheon, and entered the office of Everett, Clarke and Benedict, where I now am. In January, 1913, I enlisted in Squadron A, New York National Guard; where I served three years. In November, 1915, I was elected a member of the Democratic county committee of New York County. On January 19, 1916, I married Miss Agnes W. Hutchinson of Philadelphia. Member: Harvard Club of New York.

LEE MERRILL MARTIN

The first year after graduation I was sub-master in Danvers High School, Danvers, Mass. In 1911 I entered the Graduate School of Business Administration at Harvard and took the regular first year's work there. Following this I was assistant buyer in Filene's Store, Boston. Later I worked for the New England Mutual Insurance Company in Boston. Finally in 1914 I bought a splendid farm of 135 acres which I am still working. I enjoy running my own business, living a healthy, out-of-doors life, and am making more net profit than I ever did before. I am secretary and director of the Lisbon, (N. Y.) Library Association.

CLIFFORD ORLAND MASON

July 1, 1910, I entered the employ of Mason and Snow, wholesale dealers in, and manufacturers of men's furnishing goods. My time since then has been devoted principally to the buying and selling of all kinds of men's wear. In September, 1911, I started the four years' course at the Boston Y. M. C. A. evening law school and in 1915 was graduated from there with the LL.B. degree. On March 24, 1916, I was admitted to the Massachusetts bar.

WILLIAM NORRIS MASON

Since graduation I have been occupied chiefly in completing the work at the Architectural School for the degree which I received last June. I was not in the school continuously; for, at two different times, I spent the larger part of a year at my home in Bangor. I am now in an architect's office in Boston.

CARL FREDERICK MASSEY

The summer of 1910 was spent at the engineering camp, Squam Lake, N. H. My eyes had been giving me much trouble during the latter part of my last year in the Engineering School and the work at the camp left them in such condition that I had to give up engineering as my life work. My brother was then engaged in commercial apple growing near Wenatchee, Wash., and I spent the period from the fall of 1910 until the spring of 1911 at his ranch, giving my eyes a needed rest and at the same time becoming greatly interested in the apple business. The spring and summer of 1911 were spent in Virginia, investigating fruit sections in all parts of the state. That fall my brother and I purchased an orchard site near Winchester and planted 10,000 apple trees. The time since then has been spent in developing the young orchard, studying the problems of orchard-management and of crop-marketing, and becoming identified with the apple industry generally throughout the state. I find the work exceedingly attractive in many ways. The care of an orchard and the disposal of the crop require no less study or attention than any other business, and, too, the hazards of the season have to be met; but the business offers the best features of country life and is perhaps the ideal answer to the "Call of the Land." THEODORE MAYNZ

I left Harvard in June, 1909, having completed the required 17 courses, and entered Columbia University School of Engineering. I was graduated in June, 1912, with the degree of M.E. In June, 1913, I received the degree of Master of Arts in electro-chemistry. Upon receiving the degree of mechanical engineer I entered the employ of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company of New York, in the motive power department as assistant engineer. In November, 1913, I left the Interborough and joined the forces of the Combustion Engineering Corporation of New York City, first as salesman, then as estimating engineer, erecting and construction engineer, and am now in charge of testing and operating. My company manufactures a line of automatic stokers for both bituminous and anthracite coals. My work has brought me in contact with the power equipment of numerous types of manufacturing plants all over the East, from Atlanta to Buffalo, and as far West as Cincinnati. I am neither married nor engaged and my hobbies are motor-cycling and ice-skating. I have written technical articles entitled: Evaporation Costs, (Power, June 30, 1914), Limiting Factors in Forcing Boilers, (Power, Nov. 2, 1915). Member: American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Harvard Club of New York, Harvard Engineering Society of New York.

LAWRENCE SHAW MAYO

Since graduation, my time has been divided between assisting Professor Channing in his course in American history and the writing of a biography, "Jeffery Amherst". The monotony of such a life has been relieved by trips to England and to the Pacific Coast. I have written The St. Mary's River, a Boundary (1914), Jeffery Amherst, a Biography (1916). Member: Colonial Society of Massachusetts, Brae Burn Country Club.

ELIOT GRINNELL MEARS

I entered the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration in the fall of 1910 because I believed I was going into business; but I am now teaching. In the summer of 1911, I worked for a steel company in Worcester, returning to the Business School for my second year's work, thereby losing my chance to become a wealthy man; for this company is now making huge profits from its munition business. I was graduated with the degree of M.B.A. in 1912, and was elected marshal of our small class. In 1912-13 I was assistant in industrial organization and since then a member of the teaching staff of the school. For two years I was a director of the Beverly (Mass.) Trust Company, until I resigned this spring. Last fall I bought out the Boston Stammerer's Institute, the oldest school of its kind in the country, from its owner and principal then in failing health and now deceased. I removed the school to 246 Huntington Avenue, opposite Symphony Hall, and on February 1, 1916, combined with Samuel D. Robbins, Harvard, '11, the founder of the Robbins School of Stammering, the new firm assuming the name of the older school, with Robbins as principal and myself as manager. For two years I have been a member of the industrial committee of the Cambridge Y. M. C. A. During the present year I have been president of the Harvard Business School Alumni Association. The most fortunate happening in my life was my election as husband of my wife. I am now secretary of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration and instructor in public utilities operation there. I hope members of the class of 1910 will call on me at 17 University Hall (not U. 4) when you are in Cambridge. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Colonial Club, Cambridge.

PAUL ADAMS MERRIAM

The two years following my graduation I spent in the Graduate School of Applied Science, taking courses in mechanical engineering and acting as half-time assistant to Professor Ira N. Hollis. I received my M.M.E. degree in June, 1912; and then went to Europe, where I gave up some time to travel. Upon my return, I went to work in the shops of the Wheeler Condenser and Engineering Company, in Carteret, N. J. For some months I was a regular workman in these shops and had a chance to learn a lot about machinery that I did not learn in college, and to get a better understanding of the workman's point of view. From the shop I was transferred to the draughting room, where I remained a few months. I then went with the Griscom Russell Company, in New York City, and was employed in their engineering department. While in New York, I was very congenially located with two 1911 men and a Tech. 1912 man in an uptown apartment. These were indeed happy days! They did not last long, however, for, early in 1914, I left New York to take the position that I now have of assistant manager of the Smith and Winchester Manufacturing Company, in South Windham, Conn. Last summer I became much interested in the preparedness movement, and spent one month in the Plattsburg training camp for business men. This was a splendid experience. I followed it up by enlisting in the local militia company here in Williamantic, and am now one of the officers of this company. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

JOSEPH LEO MERRILL

I have found my first six years out in the world very interesting and eventful. Shortly after I was graduated, I entered the employ of the W. H. McElwain Company, makers of shoes. Two questions that seemed hard had to be decided right off. 1. What end of the business would you like to follow up; the distributing end or the manufacturing end? 2. What end are you fitted for—if any? In answering question No. 1, I said I felt I would like to follow up the distributing end, as distribution seemed to be the problem that every company was up against when it began to talk in eight figures, and that this end presented the greatest opportunities and was conducive to a more diversified, eventful and interesting life. In answering question No. 2, I said I felt I was best fitted for the distributing end. I came to this conclusion because I felt I was not fitted by any special training for the manufacturing end. It was finally decided to try me out and put me through the mill. I went through a great many departments and did innumerable odd jobs for about a year and a half and did about everything I could to learn the manufacturing and inside end of the business. After eighteen months it developed that one of the salesmen who looked after Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Colorado, Missouri and a few towns in Iowa and Illinois, had to have an assistant on account of poor health and I started out with him on a five months' trip. Before the trip was over, this salesman accepted an opportunity that came up to go into business with two of his friends. I finished the trip alone. I saw the life of an average travelling man and had a great many interesting experiences. I learned what he was up against and can appreciate him now and have a great deal of respect for him. When I returned to Boston, I learned that the salesman who had looked after all the large cities was badly in need of an assistant. I had the good fortune and the pleasure to accompany him and watch him work. It certainly was a pleasure to see him work out some difficult problems and land great big orders and make good friends. After being with this man for about six months, one of the salesmen in the Eastern part of the country decided to make a change, and I was given his territory under the direction of the big-city salesman. This was my first opportunity to show any constructive sales ability. I was up against it good and hard, and I was pretty discouraged many times, but stuck with it and gathered all the information I could and studied the game carefully. My results on paper were fairly good, however, and I was encouraged. I continued to look after this territory and to assist in the selling in the large cities including New York, Chicago, Kansas City, St. Paul, Minneapolis and the other large cities in the East, for about a year when the man I was assisting resigned to go in business for himself. It was then decided that I should be tried out to see if I could fill "his shoes", so for the past year and a half I have been selling shoes for the McElwain Company in New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Rochester, Boston and some of the smaller cities. I have enjoyed the six years very much and have gotten a great deal of good training and valuable experience. I have seen a great deal of this country and considerable of Europe during the summer of 1913. I have seen the business of the McElwain Company more than double in these six years and watched it with great interest stretch back to the source of supply in developing sole-leather and upper-leather tanneries and various kinds of supply factories, and forward to the consumer by becoming interested in the distributing mediums. I must say that I have found the game of setting up new records each season very absorbing and fascinating. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Boston City Club.

The first three years I spent in the Harvard Law School, graduating with the class of 1913. Since then I have been practising law in New York City, first in the office of Davies, Auerbach and Cornell, and since March, 1915, in the office of Wilson M. Powell. In the summer of 1914 I was one of the many Americans stranded in Switzerland at the outbreak of the war. After a month of watchful waiting at Interlaken, our party went through Geneva to Lyons and Paris, and to

For various reasons things did not work out as I had expected, and in January, 1911, I was back East, working at the Quissett Mill in New Bedford. I left there in September of the same year to work at the Aetna Mills in Watertown. In the following June, I entered the employ of Hornblower and Weeks. JAY SPALTI MEYERS

Jay Spalti Meyers was born at Pleasantville, Iowa, November 7, 1887, and attended the public schools there. He moved with his parents to Indianola, Iowa, at the age of seven years, where he continued in the public schools until, when 12 years old, with his parents, he removed to Dallas, Texas. Here he was graduated from the public high school at the age of 16 years. He then entered Phillips Exeter Academy at Exeter, where he was graduated and entered Harvard University. After graduation he took one year of rest from school work, learning the business and working in the various departments of Olive and Meyers Manufacturing Company at Dallas. He then entered Harvard Law School from which he was graduated. He then hurried to Denver, June, 1913, to help his father in a new, large and technical business in which he was needed and the responsibilities of which had been assumed only with his consent, advice and the promise and prospect of his help when he finished school, all of which was given most intelligently, faithfully and with personal sacrifice until his death. After a very strenuous business trip of nearly four and one-half months throughout the Middle West and East, he returned to Denver to look after some business for the company, take charge of his father's office, and at the same time to get a few weeks' change from the hard nervous strain of the road. He, together with another young man and two young lady friends had planned an outing for August 29 at Fairview Lake, which is about eighteen miles southwest of Denver. He left home in a motor early that morning, and on reaching the lake they secured an old boat with improvised paddles. His companion, Mr. Gibbs, set out several fishing lines fastened to floating bobs. After taking a long tramp hunting, Myers returned and ate a hearty meal, and seeing that a fish had been hooked, forgot the risk of the old and leaky boat and went out to bring in the fish. The boat filled fast and before he could get back, it had filled almost to the top. Realizing his danger he stood up and the boat tipped over and threw him backward into the water. The cold water seemed to paralyze him, and, although he was a good swimmer, he soon sank. Other boats nearby hurried to the spot, but his body did not rise. His father writes: "It is needless for me to state that this has been the saddest blow of my life. He was not only our only child, but the noblest of sons and, still more, he was my worthy business partner and the staff on which I leaned for many months when my business burdens and reverses seemed more than human could bear. Through his scientific knowledge he saved his mother's life when there seemed no hope.

and in the same manner brought me back to good health after I had almost given up, and by virtue of these acts, and his wise, kind, and brave assistance and encouragement helped save and place on a safe basis a valuable business. He cared little for money or glory, but worked faithfully, long and hard, that others might enjoy it, believing, as he had been taught from childhood, that whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap, and that the only way he could really help himself was by helping others.”

JOHN ALFRED PARSONS MILLET

My first four years after graduation were spent at the Harvard Medical School. During the summers of 1911 and 1912 I travelled in Europe, spending most of the time in England. The summer of 1913 I spent as “doctor” to Mr. Henry Richards’ camp at North Belgrade, Me. During the following summer I was associated in practice with Dr. James B. Ayer, of Boston. Since that time I have been taking a medical internship at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, and am now about to start for Buffalo, N. Y., where, if I am fortunate enough to satisfy the demands of the New York State Civil Service Commissioners, I shall start work on March 1, as internist to the New York State Institute for the Study of Malignant Disease. Member: Aesculapian Club, Boston, Harvard Club of Boston, Massachusetts Medical Society, American Medical Association.

HAROLD PALMER MILLS

After graduation, I entered the New York office of the National District Telegraph Company, which installs and operates a system of special fire-alarm boxes in banks, hotels, theatres, factories, etc. While in this company I was married in April, 1911. In June, I was sent to take charge of the Philadelphia office and remained there three years. During this period, I became interested in furniture design and manufacture and in July, I entered the Architecture School of the University of Pennsylvania to study designing. Last May, I removed to New York to continue my work there and in September, 1915, I became connected with a decorating firm in the city, having general charge of the furniture end of the business. I am also doing designing of furniture for private clients at present. I may add that I am also taking a course in the Architecture School at Columbia University. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia, Harvard Club of Boston.

GLENN FERGUSON MITCHELL

[Mr. Mitchell has nothing to add to his last report.]

KENNETH RIDER MONTGOMERY

In the year 1909, I took the agency for the "American" car in Detroit with a capital of $10,000. In 1910, I still had the agency but was out half of my capital, and in addition had acquired a wife. In 1911, I still had the wife, no capital and gave up the car agency. From 1911 to 1915, I graduated from city salesman for the Krit Motor Car Company to Michigan branch manager for the same concern, still having the wife. In 1915, instead of my being broke, the company went broke. This decided my migration to Brooklyn, where I am now engaged in selling car lots of flour to unsuspecting buyers, and of course still having the wife. Member: Detroit Tennis Club, Detroit, Mich., Crescent Athletic Club, Brooklyn, N. Y.

LAWRENCE LARKIN ANTHONY MORAN

I have been around Pittsburgh, Pa., since the spring of 1910.

HALLOWELL VAUGHAN MORGAN

During the six years since our graduation my life, as compared to that of many of our classmates, has been very uneventful. Shortly after Commencement I completed my fourth annual tour of duty with the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, Troop B, 1st Squadron Cavalry, and went abroad, touring Europe extensively but rather hurriedly for the remainder of the summer of 1910. In the autumn I returned to the home of my father in Philadelphia and entered the employ of Messrs. Ervin and Company, bankers. In 1913 I married and settled at Rydal in the country outside of Philadelphia, at which place I resided until I removed, last March (1916) to Jenkintown, Pa. In February, 1915, I left Ervin and Company and became associated with the banking house of Elkins, Morris and Co., where I am now employed. Member: Huntington Valley Country Club, Philadelphia.

LAURENCE WILLCOMB MORGAN

In the spring of 1910, I went to England with my father and sister. We took an automobile with us and toured England and Scotland. Shipping the car back to America, we travelled (by train) through France, Holland and Belgium, sailing home from Antwerp. For four years I was connected with George Willcomb and Company, at 60 Chardon Street, but am now connected with A. W. Wood and Company, as a stock-broker. I was married in January, 1915, and went to California on my wedding trip, seeing both the San Diego and San Francisco fairs, also the Grand Canyon of Arizona. Since May, 1915, I have resided at Beverly Farms, Mass. Member: Brookline Country Club, Essex Country Club, Union Boat Club, Harvard Club of Boston.

WILLIAM FELLOWES MORGAN, JR.

July 26, 1910, I started on a trip around the world with E. C. Bacon, '10, and G. P. Gardner, Jr., '10, (see book written by G. P. G., Jr.). I spent ten months travelling in Russia, Far East, Egypt, Greece, Turkey, Austria and France. I returned to New York in May, 1911. I went for a six-weeks' trip to Grand Canyon, Arizona, in the summer of 1911. In the fall of 1911 I started a course at Columbia School of Mines. I left Columbia February, 1912, and went to work with the Harrison Street Cold Storage Company, of New York, as a delivery and receiving clerk. I played hockey that winter on the St. Nicholas team; also in 1913 and 1914. October 19, 1912, I married Mary Rathbone. About February 1, 1913, my wife's health caused me to give up work. I spent that winter and spring in the South and the summer at the St. Lawrence River. In October, 1913, my wife and I went out West with the intention of spending the winter and spring in the Far East. We spent a few weeks in Honolulu in December and then changed our plans and came home. I went to work in January, 1914, with the Brooklyn Bridge Freezing and Cold Storage Company as manager. I am still with this company. Member: Racquet and Tennis Club, New York. Bedford Golf Club.

ALFRED IRVING MORIARTY

Nothing of great importance has happened in my life since publication of last report. In September, 1915, I took a place in the business world and I am very glad to have made the change from that of school teaching.

HOWARD MORRIS, JR.

In February, 1910, I finished my college course, although I took my degree with the class in June. In April of that year, I entered the employ of the Westinghouse E. and M. Company, lamp division, in the factory at Bloomfield, N. J. I remained with the Westinghouse Company, doing factory work and then sales correspondence and finally actual selling in New York City for nearly three years. In March, 1913, I resigned and became associated with Harris, Forbes and Company, of New York, bankers and dealers in investment bonds. Luckily I was not called upon to spend a great amount of time in the office, and in June, I emigrated to Syracuse, N. Y., as representative of the firm for that territory, under the direction of N. F. Glidden, Jr., 1903. Since that time I have settled down in Syracuse, with every prospect of remaining for some years. Glidden resigned from the firm, in which he was a partner, in January, 1916, and I have succeeded to his position as manager of Central New York territory for Harris, Forbes and Company. Member: Onondaga Golf and Country Club, Sedgwick Farm Club, Century Club, all of Syracuse, N. Y., Harvard Club of New York, Harvard Club of Syracuse, Black River Valley Club, Watertown, N. Y.

WILLIAM REID MORRISON

After leaving college, I entered the Harvard Medical School and was graduated in the class of 1913. I was a member of the Oliver Wendell Holmes Medical Society while in the school. In July, 1913, I was appointed house officer on the second surgical service of the Boston City Hospital, and had a general surgical training for twenty months. In April, 1915, I entered the Boston Lying-In Hospital for a service of seven months. I was appointed an assistant in anatomy at the Harvard Medical School in September, 1915. I am now practising surgery and obstetrics. I have written an article on Extrauterine Pregnancy (read before the Oliver Wendell Holmes Medical Society). Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

CHARLES FESSENDEN MORSE, JR.

In the fall of 1910, I entered the Graduate School of Applied Science at Harvard, where I spent the ensuing year, studying electrical engineering. The next summer I enjoyed my last long vacation, finishing it up in the fall with a successful hunting trip to New Brunswick, and another to the southern part of Missouri after ducks. On the last day of October, having obtained a discharge from Battery A, of

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

Boston, thus shaking myself clear of Massachusetts, I presented myself at the factory of the General Electric Company in Sehneetady, and was admitted to the student engineers' course. This work kept me busy for the next three years. It was of every description, pleasant and unpleasant, and varied from being about third mate on a boring mill in a machine shop to the operation of electric trains along the banks of the Erie Canal—with an occasional swim in its muddy waters when there was no one looking. In the summer of 1914, I was offered a regular position in one of the engineering departments of the General Electric Company; but the business depression following the outbreak of the war put an indefinite delay on this, and after waiting until nearly December, without anything materializing, I started looking around for something else, and soon after the beginning of the new year landed a job with the Edison Company, of Boston, where I have been ever since. Member: Skating Club of Boston.

HARMAR MORSE

After graduation from college, I worked as estimator for a Lynn, Mass., firm of heating engineers, and then as inspector for Warren and Gerrish, architects, of Boston, Mass. Finally, after two years and a half, I entered the insurance business in Boston, and have been in that line since then, writing a general line of insurance, but specializing on life and accident and health. Member: Interchange Club, Boston, Mass., Trinity Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Clinton, Mass.

STANLEY WINDSOR MOULTON

Until October, 1912, I was working for the Boston and Maine Railroad at the Chamber of Commerce, and then, seeing no advantage of working for the railroad or any other large corporation, where I had no one to take a personal interest in my individual welfare, I left and started to learn the cotton business, going into a mill at Newburyport, Mass. I went into this business with the certainty of advancement, due to myself of course, and started at the bottom. I found out, however, that I could develop no strong liking for machinery, which was very essential, so I left after a three months' trial. Beginning the first of January, 1913, I entered an accountant's office in Boston, as I had a strong feeling that in that business I would thoroughly enjoy myself and hence be successful. I had always liked figures, and, although I knew nothing of the principles of accounting, I acquired from my employer increasing knowledge and practical experience. I remained with him for a year and a half and left because of a better opening and more money. During the next year I changed twice more for reasons similar to the first and am now associated with the firm of D. B. Lewis and Company, at 45 Milk Street. I feel as if my three changes of employers had widened my experience because of the different methods in use by different accountants. My present connection is mutually satisfactory, and I hope to make no more changes whatsoever, as I feel that there is an exceptionally fine future ahead for the firm and hence for myself. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Boston City Club.

CHARLES ALEXANDER MUNN

Member: Metropolitan Club, Washington, D. C., Chevy Chase Club, Chevy Chase, New York, Philadelphia Club, Philadelphia, Pa., Tennis and Racquet Club, Philadelphia, Pa., Radnor Hunt Club, Radnor, Pa., Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain, Touring Club de France, Paris, France.

ROBERT GOOKIN MUNROE

After leaving college in 1909, I entered the employ of the American Woolen Company, going to Lawrence, Mass., in October, where I worked as an apprentice in the mills. In October, 1910, I was transferred to the Puritan Mills of the same company in Plymouth, Mass. April, 1911, I was sent to the New York office of the American Woolen Company, where I performed various and sundry menial, but instructive, tasks. In the summer of 1912, I had the opportunity to enjoy a two months' trip to Europe. The fall of that same year I was elevated to the noble position of traveling salesman in the Middle West. I stopped at numerous small and inconspicuous towns such as Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Louisville, where I not only labored diligently to increase the good will of the trade toward our excellent company; but also enjoyed the hospitality of numerous classmates and college friends (including a few benighted but exceedingly genial Elis). During the fall of 1914, I was transferred again to the job of a New York City salesman and proceeded to while away my daylight hours on the East Side of New York. The summer of 1915, I was transferred to the export department of the American Woolen Company and since then I have been making periodic trips to Canada. During my five years in New York, I have joined the 7th Regiment Infantry to the detriment of that organization. I have had several narrow escapes from matrimony by being refused and I have hypocritically enthused over the very youthful and exceedingly homely offspring of a number of very domestic classmates. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Fox Meadow Tennis Club, Searsdale, N. Y.

GARDNER MURPHY

Soon after finishing college I entered the employ of the banking house of Estabrook and Company, Boston. One of the first essentials in this business, apparently, is to acquire an intimate knowledge of the streets of Boston by doing messenger work, and this I did very thoroughly. After filling several other jobs I started out on the road to sell bonds, travelling in Maine at first where I grew healthy but not rich, and more recently in eastern Massachusetts where I now am. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

HUGH NAWN

Since graduation, I have been with The Hugh Nawn Contracting Company, general contractors, Boston. Our work has been largely subway construction, and, during the past six years we have completed the Boylston Street subway, the Summer Street station of the Dorchester tunnel, and at the present time are constructing the Dewey Square station on the same route. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Club of New York, Engineers' Club of Boston, Exchange Club of Boston, American Society of Civil Engineers, Boston Society of Civil Engineers.

HARRIS JOSEPH NELSON

I have been on the staff of the Boston News Bureau since July 5, 1910.

THOMAS JEFFERSON NEWBOLD

I spent the first year working for the Democratic party, in behalf of Franklin D. Roosevelt for state senator of New York. I was elected to the Dutchess County Democratic committee, which I was on till 1913. In the fall of 1911 I went on a trip to Panama, Costa Rica and Jamaica, returning to New York, where I started working for the New York Trust Company about January 1. In the spring of 1912 I was operated on for appendicitis and after taking the summer off, returned to the New York Trust Company where I worked until the following June, when I went to the Democratic National Convention in Baltimore. I spent the summer and fall working at the national headquarters in New York until election day. I then went on a three months' trip to Florida, Cuba, and New Orleans, most of the time shooting at different clubs. On my return to New York I entered the International Cotton Mills, and I spent a year travelling for them, finally ending up in the selling agency in New York. I got married in January, 1914, and took a trip through Southern France; then went to Manchester, England, to study cotton conditions and when war broke out, continued there in the Manchester agency of International Cotton Mills. I sailed from Liverpool the day after the Lusitania was sunk, but reached New York safely. On July 1, I entered the Old Colony Trust Company where I have been since. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Knickerbocker Club, New York, Tennis and Racquet Club, Boston, Poughkeepsie Golf and Country Club, New York, Poughkeepsie Tennis Club, New York.

JEWETT BEACH NEWTON

September, 1909, I started to work for J. R. Worcester and Company, consulting engineers, of Boston. June, 1911, I left them and went to Albuquerque, New Mexico, from there to San Diego, Cal., where I worked on a large concrete construction job as a steel worker. In November, 1911, I got a job in El Paso, Texas, with the United States Reclamation Service on the Elephant Butte Dam at Elephant Butte, N. Mex., about 100 miles north of El Paso, as draughtsman and instrument man. The Reclamation Service transferred me from Elephant Butte to El Paso, in May, 1912, and in June, 1912, I came back to Boston, working for George F. Newton, architect, as engineer, until February, 1913. From February until June I worked on a ranch in Alberta, Canada, as cook, laborer, and carpenter, leaving there for Montana, where I filed on a homestead near Fort Benton, about 30 miles back in the country. My application was not allowed, due to a previous filing on this piece, made while I was inspecting the land. After waiting to hear the result of this filing, I worked on a sheep ranch as farm hand until August, 1913. This was a 17,000 acre farm about 60 miles south of Great Falls, Mont. In January, 1914, I started with Monks and Johnson, Boston, as draughtsman and inspector on mill construction. September, 1914, to date, I have been working as structural engineer for George F. Newton, architect. Member: Boston Society of Civil Engineers, Cohasset Yacht Club, Harvard Club of Boston.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

ARTHUR REGINALD NIELD

I spent the first two years after graduation in Newburyport, Mass., with the First National Bank of that city, and later with the Newburyport Broom Company. However, finding that New England did not agree with me financially, I left in December, 1912, for fields more green, and reached Shreveport, La., after some wandering around between New York and New Orleans. After looking Shreveport over, I decided that I liked the town, and so stuck around, and went to work in the Commercial National Bank as an extra crank on an adding machine. This soon palled on me and did not pay much more than the average job does in Massachusetts; so I went with the firm of Crawford, Jenkins and Booth, Ltd., wholesale grocers, cotton factors, and dealers in automobiles. This job I find more to my liking and have been on it ever since. They put me in the cotton department, and there I stayed. My life so far has been very uneventful, simply a case of one damned job after another, till I got something I really liked. I am very glad to say that I like Louisiana and the Sunny South, and especially Shreveport, which to say the least is some town. I have done nothing interesting or strange, except to find out the old truth that a man is worth nothing in his own home town, and the sooner he finds it out and goes elsewhere the better off he is likely to be. I have written no books, censured no plays, raised no children, and really done nothing for my country or my class. Have managed to keep out of jail and matrimony so far, and become a good Elk and a Democrat, like all true Southern gentlemen. I think I have voted as a Republican, Socialist and Bull Moose, before I went Democratic, but as you can't vote in Louisiana unless you are a Democrat, there was only one thing to do. In the last six years I have had a lot of fun, and a lot of valuable experience, but nothing worthy of mention. Member: Shreveport Lodge, No. 122, B. P. O. E.

JOHN TROWBRIDGE NIGHTINGALE

On leaving Cambridge, after the class graduated in June, 1910, I travelled abroad for six months, spending most of the fall in Switzerland, trying to master the intricacies of the French language. Returning to Boston in January, 1911, I entered the employ of the Hood Rubber Company, with whom I remained until February, 1914, working most of the time in the purchasing department, at first in their Boston office later at the factory office of the company at Watertown, Mass. Since February, 1914, I have devoted most of my time to the formation and development of the Laminated Materials Company, which now has a plant in British Columbia engaged in the manufacture of ply-wood lumber and a new ply-wood box, both of which are made under a new patented process. During the last two years I have done a fair amount of travelling, which included the Canadian Rockies, the Province of Alberta, California, and most of the cities of the Northwest. I expect to spend a part of each of the next few years in British Columbia. Member: Harvard Clubs of Boston and New York, Union Boat Club, Tennis and Racquet Club, both of Boston, Vancouver Golf and Country Club, Vancouver, British Columbia, Westminster Club, New Westminster, British Columbia.

MICHELE NIGRO

I was at the Harvard Medical School from 1909 to 1913; at the Newton Hospital from 1913 to 1914; was graduated from the Medical School in 1915 (February); at the Frost Hospital in Chelsea, 1915. I have been in private practice since July 15, 1915. I am a fellow of the Massachusetts Medical Society.

FREDERICK JAMES O'BRIEN

Since graduation I have taught at the Boston Latin School. In addition to teaching, I handle the athletics of the school.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

HORACE WILLIAM O'CONNOR

After graduating, I spent the summer in Philadelphia as an agent for the S. P. C. C., under the efficient direction of a Harvard man, Roy Smith Wallace. In the fall, I travelled to the corn-belt and began my duties as an instructor in English at Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Ind., the home of such famous literary Hoosiers as General Lew Wallace, Maurice Thompson, Meredith Nicholson, and the immortal Bard of Alamo. After spending three years at the "Hoosier Athens", two as instructor and one as acting professor and head of the department of rhetoric (vice R. W. Brown, '06, who was in France on leave of absence), I returned to Harvard and took my A.M. Since then, I have been instructor in English at Indiana University. Except for the occasional discovery of a student who can pronounce a as in father (pace G. Ade!), my days here are uneventful. A year ago last Christmas, however, I had a rather hot time. The house I was rooming in burned down and I lost everything I had except part of a suit of clothes and a bath-robe. Books, notes, typewriter, all went up, and I (literally almost) barely escaped alive. The people forgot to awaken me, and I had to do a slide for life down a rope to the roof of a back porch. There I had to stand bare-footed in the snow, the temperature just above zero, the gelid breezes whipping my legs, until some one brought a ladder to let me down. I can sympathize with Henry the what-th at Avignon. A hot time I think I said. I have written: Attracting Birds to the Yard (Suburban Life, October, 1912), My Friends, the Woodpeckers (Suburban Life, 1914).

LORIMER GEROME OGDEN

Leaving college before the end of my senior year on account of my father's ill health, I immediately took over and managed his real estate and loan business for nearly two years, when gradual improvement in health allowed him to engage actively in business matters. During his sickness I was elected to fill his place on the directorate of one of the local banks of which he had been vice-president. After purchasing a marine motor of Mr. Trebert, a gas engine manufacturer in Rochester, N. Y., I became interested in the new reciprocating rotary gasoline engine and eventually purchased an interest in the patents. Numerous experiments and tests throughout a period of nearly four years enabled us to evolve a perfect type of rotary gasoline motor for truck, marine, or submarine use. With the motor practically ready to market, the unexpected European crisis so upset the financial market that it seemed impractical to secure the large amount of capital necessary to start manufacturing on a large commercial scale; so that we were compelled to await more settled financial conditions. In developing the auto-marine type of rotary motor, certain ideas occurred to us which we combined and have designed into what we believe the ultimate type of aeronautical motor,—a sixteen-cylinder motor about thirty inches long and twenty-five inches in diameter, developing nearly one hundred and fifty horsepower at a weight of about three hundred pounds. Experiments on this new motor are nearly completed and we expect to market the engine commercially at an early date. Acquaintance with Rochester parties led me to invest in stock of the Ontario Ice Company, Inc., of that city, of which I am now secretary and treasurer, having been secretary of the company from its organization in 1913. On going to attend the organization of this ice company, I met again a schoolmate whom I had lost track of for several years. She had been a trained nurse and seeing her again led to our renewed acquaintance, and on June 25, 1914, Miss Charity Allen Pierce and I were married. After a short wedding tour by automobile through the Mohawk Valley and the Berkshires to Harvard and Boston, we came to live at "Lormont," my father's home in Penn Yan, as his advanced age of nearly eighty required my presence at home to attend to varied business matters. On April 6, 1915, our son, George Lorimer, namesake of his two grandfathers, came to brighten our home and our lives; and he has a smile of welcome for all the family save when the pangs of an empty stomach or fancied neglect cause long and eloquent protests. Business and family cares have prevented my attendance at the former class reunions; but should father's strength be such that I can get away, I hope to attend the sexennial reunion.

WILLIAM RICHARD OHLER

I was graduated from the Harvard Medical School in June, 1914. Since that time I have been taking a medical service at the Boston City Hospital, and shall complete my service in March, 1916. During this summer my work will be at the Harvard Medical School as an Austin teaching fellow in Bacteriology. I have written: Experimental Polyneuritis (Journal of Medical Research, Vol. XXXI, No. 2).

SIGOURNEY BUTLER OLNEY

On completing the college course in three years I entered the Harvard Law School, graduating therefrom in June, 1912. In October, 1912, I entered the office of George D. Yeomans, general counsel for the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, and have continued in that office since that date. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Rockaway Hunting Club.

ANDREW JOSEPH ONDERDONK, JR.

After commencement I went abroad, visiting France, Switzerland, Austria and England. In the autumn of 1910, I entered the Harvard Law School and was graduated in June, 1913. Prior thereto, in May, 1913, I was admitted to the bar in New York state. The summer of 1913 I spent abroad, and, on returning in the autumn, I entered the law offices of Judge Alton B. Parker, under whose guidance I obtained my first practical acquaintance with the courts. In July, 1914, I joined Mr. George Santayana in Paris and we went on a journey to some of the cathedral towns of Northern France, including Rheims, Soissons, Laon, and Amiens. The ancient town of Laon is built upon an isolated ridge jutting out from the plains of Champagne. At sunset we watched the French Army aviation corps practising; but neither there nor clambering over the moss-grown leaden roofs of the Rheims Cathedral, did we imagine that these were soon to be the battle-fields of the great war. Four or five days later, when war was declared, I had reached the Southern Tyrol, bordering closely on Italy. I journeyed to Vienna without difficulty, spent August and September there, and returned by way of The Hague and Rotterdam, arriving in New York at the end of October. Since then I have been engaged in the practice of the law on my own behalf and am specializing in surrogate's and estate matters, particularly in their relation to consular treaty rights. I have written an essay entitled: The Intellectual Temper of the Age (published in The Harvard Monthly for April, 1913). Member: Harvard Club of New York, The Holland Society of New York.

WARREN ORDWAY

During the first year after graduation I studied engineering in the Harvard Graduate School, holding a position as assistant under Professor I. N. Hollis, now president of Worcester Polytechnic. During the summer of 1911 I went abroad with my brother and visited England, Belgium, Holland, France, Germany, Switzerland and Italy. One of the most interesting parts of the trip, especially in the light of recent events, was a trip through the Krupp steel works at Essen. After a pleasant dinner at the Krupp hotel, an agreeable young German met me and drove me from building to building in a landau, driven by a coachman in white spats. As I went through the huge machine shops smoking "Krupp" cigarettes, I could not help wondering if American manufacturers would ever learn the fine art of hospitality. During 1911-1912 I worked in various capacities in the factories of Chickering and Sons, Boston, and James Guiler and Company, Framingham. This was followed by a period of work in the sales office of the Green Fuel Economizer Company, Boston. In the fall of 1913 I entered the employ of the Lamson Company, Boston, makers of carriers and conveyors, with whom I am connected at the present time. After a year of moving from department to department I took up the work of preparing educational matter for the salesmen. In the spring of 1915 I was made advertising manager, upon the resignation of the former holder of this position. CHARLES DEVENS OSBORNE

After leaving college, in 1910, I went abroad and travelled in England, France, Germany and Switzerland, with Robert T. Lee, '09. On September 23, 1910, I sailed to Bombay with B. A. G. Fuller, '00, and travelled with him in India, Ceylon, Burma, China and Japan. I returned alone to Europe via the Siberian Railway and returned to America in September, 1911, and settled in Auburn, N. Y. After working a year in my father's office, I entered the Auburn Publishing Company where I am at present employed on the editorial staff of the Auburn Citizen, an evening newspaper of that city. I am vice-president of the Auburn Publishing Company, Inc. I am a governor of the Owaseo Country Club of this city. Member: City Club, Auburn, N. Y., Owaseo Country Club, Auburn, N. Y., Harvard Club of New York, Harvard Club of Boston, 3d Infantry, N. G. N. Y.

After leaving college, I started work as a runner in the bond house of Moffat and White, at 5 Nassau Street, New York City. That was October, 1909. I stayed there as runner, desk trader, and bond salesman up in New York state until May, 1912. During that time the firm changed its name to White, Weld and Company, and removed to 14 Wall Street, When I left White, Weld and Company, I went South and joined my brother in North Carolina. We bought about 3,000 acres of land, opened some of it up and for the next three years I farmed, and raised cotton, corn, and peaches, and led the pleasantest life I have ever known. During that time I went abroad twice, once in the summer of 1913 and again the week after the war broke out in August, 1914. The last trip was on the U. S. S. Tennessee which took the gold and relief commission to stranded Americans in Europe. In June, 1915, I again went to England and spent two months. On my return, I left the South and became a member of the editorial staff of the World's Work magazine. That was in October, 1915. Last summer I became engaged to Miss Katherine Sefton, of Auburn, N. Y., and we are going to be married on June 3, 1916. This I think brings me up to the sexennial on Class Day. Member: Harvard Clubs of Boston and New York.

After graduating from college in February, 1910, I at once entered the Boston University Law School as a special student and remained there until the end of the school year in June. During the ensuing summer, I studied in the law office of Messrs. Fish, Richardson, Herrick and Neave, of Boston, entering the Harvard Law School in September, from which I received the degree of LL.B. cum laude in June, 1913. During the college year 1912-1913, I was an assistant in government 1, under Professor W. B. Munro and President Lowell. In the fall of 1912, I was admitted to the New York bar and, upon graduation from the Law School, took up the practice of law in New York City in association with my father, William H. Page, of the class of 1883, with whom I am still connected. In June, 1914, I was admitted to practice in New Jersey, where I have resided since leaving Cambridge. My interest in athletics is as great as ever, though my activities have necessarily been more limited, and confined mostly to boxing, wrestling and riding in the winter, and tennis, swimming, riding and track athletics in summer. In January, 1916, I became a member of Squadron "A" Cavalry, N. G. N. Y. in which I take a keen interest, as well as in the general subject of "preparedness." Since February, 1916, I have been lec-

WILLIAM KINGMAN PAGE

Returning to Cambridge in the fall of 1910, I entered the Graduate School of Applied Science, department of mining and metallurgy, where I spent the year 1910-1911. In July, 1911, I left for the copper mining camps of the Southwest United States and Northern Mexico, and spent the summer on a tour of inspection, returning to Cambridge in November. In December I returned to Arizona and entered the service of the Copper Queen Consolidated Mining Company, where I remained a scant month, going west to California the latter part of the month. In February, 1912, I was married to Olive Stebbins, of Pasadena, Cal., and left two weeks later for Santa Rita, New Mexico, to enter the employment of the Chino Copper Company. In July, 1912, I removed to Denver, Colorado, and in August I joined the Golden Cycle Mining Company, at Colorado City, and shortly afterwards returned to Denver to take a position with the Adams Express Company. I left Denver the middle of November for Perth Amboy, New Jersey, where I joined the experimental laboratory of the Chile Exploration Company. In July, 1913, I was transferred to the New York office of that company, as assistant to the consulting metallurgical engineer, which position I still hold. A boy, Wm. Kingman, was born to us in November of that year. In February, 1915, I removed to Chicago to take charge of the experimental electric furnace plant of the Chile Exploration Company, remaining there until December, when I returned to New York, on my way to Chile to install a full-sized electric furnace plant at the reduction works of the company. At present I am located at Chuquicamata, Chile, engaged in the erection of electric furnaces. It is my expectation to return to New York in the fall, and resume my position in the New York office. I have obtained a patent for improvements in the Manufacture of Magnetite Anodes. I have written: History

WILLIAM MORGAN PALMER

After graduation I spent a pleasant year as master in a private school in Lenox, Mass. The following autumn I accepted an offer from the Chinese Government, as a professor of English in a government college in Pao Ting Fu, about eighty miles outside of Peking. I left in August of 1911 for the East, via Seattle and Japan, and had filled my position in the government college for scarcely more than a month when there broke out the Revolution of 1911-1912 which threw the whole country into a turmoil and eventually resulted in making China a republic. Such excitement prevailed that all activities ceased and I returned to Peking. Almost simultaneously with my arrival there came the news of the massacre of part of the foreign colony in Si An Fu (a large but inaccessible city in the western part of the country), and the imminent danger of survivors. A rescue party was at once formed in Peking which I joined. It seemed entirely inadequate for the purpose, being composed of only eight members beside myself, most of whom were English. However, we procured the best horses and arms available, and, after three weeks' hard riding, arrived at Si An Fu. We collected the foreigners (among them several women and children) who had survived the first lawless outbreak in which eight of their number had been killed, and escorted them safely to the railroad at Hankow. Our list of refugees numbered over three hundred on the way out. The relief party covered something over seven hundred miles and were in the saddle almost constantly for two months. At the close of the revolution and the organization of the republic I was offered a position as foreign inspector in the Chinese government salt administration, with headquarters at Newchwang, Manchuria, where I was visited, in the autumn of 1913, by my family, Col. and Mrs. Franklin Palmer, and my brother, Franklin H. Palmer. I have since then been transferred to Chang Chun, Manchuria, on the Trans-Siberian Railroad, where I am inspector of a territory larger than New England. The life there, while somewhat lonely, is in many respects extremely interesting. I am very pro-Chinese and take a keen interest in the development of the people and country. I expect to be at home this spring and take in the sexennial.

EDWARD LINCOLN PARKER

After graduating in June, 1910, I started the following fall in the Harvard Law School, and remained there until June, 1913. After an illness of about six months, I started the practice of law at Taunton, Mass., in the office of Hall and Hagerty of that city, being admitted to the bar in January, 1914. I remained in Taunton with this firm until October, 1915. On November 1, 1915, I commenced work in the claim division of the Travelers Insurance Company, at Hartford, Conn., where I am at the present time located. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, University Club of Hartford, Conn.

FOSTER HEGEMAN PARKER

On leaving college I went to work as map clerk in the Massachusetts Fire and Marine Insurance Company at 95 Water St., Boston. In the winter of 1912-1913 I left there and went into the agency of Jones and Brennen in Salem as an insurance agent on salary and commission. I had intended to begin farming at my present address in Maryland in January, 1914, but my wife was taken sick with local meningitis and I was not able to get here until she had recovered, which was about the first of April. My crops, though late, turned out fairly well. I have been farming here since then. I have 211 acres of land, about 180-190 under cultivation, employ three men the year around, with extra hands at harvest time.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

I keep ten head of work horses and mules and some milk cows, and make a specialty of registered Duroc Jersey hogs. Wheat, corn, and tomatoes are my principal crops for market. I have eighteen acres in alfalfa which keeps me in hay the year around. The farm is now established on a good paying basis, but, owing to the death of my father in October of last year, business and family affairs may cause me to move back to Massachusetts in another year or two. Member: Salem Billiard Club, Salem, Mass.

GEORGE ALANSON PARKER

I have, since leaving the Law School, been engaged in the practice of the law in Boston. I am a member of the school committee of Lancaster and hold a second lieutenant's commission in the Massachusetts Field Artillery. I have attended various schools connected with military work and the second camp at Plattsburgh, last summer. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

ROWEN CARLTON PARKER

After we were admitted to the fellowship of Harvard men, and I had taken my last swim in the class-day fountains in the yard, I spent the summer as a leader at the Denison House Boys Camp at Lake Wentworth, N. H. In October I entered that paradise of Harvard men at 147 Milk Street, Boston. Here I had a "position" as bell-hop, and spent the time in answering calls, running errands, buying gum for Stone and Webster's stenographers, and finding many other uses for my store of knowledge acquired during the many hours of watchful waiting under the administration of Professors Taussig, Ripley and Gay. In June I was transferred to the accounting department, as a runner. I ran for about ten months without getting anywhere in particular. I had become interested in boys' club work during my senior year, and during this time in Boston I lived at the Denison House, a settlement house in the South End, where I was assistant head of the men's and boys' department. Nearly every evening was spent in leading boys' clubs, or in other forms of social work, and then there were Saturday afternoon hikes and Saturday night basketball games. My vacations were spent at the boys' camp conducted by the House in New Hampshire. From there several week-end visits were made to Squam Lake, where I called at my old tent and where I found the boys still working on the railroad just to pass the time away. One of these visits was marked by an expedition of 30 miles on foot and a climb up Mt. Whiteface, led by Fat Estabrook. Yes, we all reached the top. In September, 1913, I decided to pull up stakes, break away from my old New England conservatism, and strike out for the great Southwest. I landed in Shreveport, La., where A. R. Nield, '10, and J. B. Herold, '09, had located and which they said was a good town. Here I went to work for the Commercial National Bank as a bookkeeper. The Commercial is a fine bank, and I had hoped to own it soon. However, after a year in the bank, I realized that my chance of rising much higher was small. Not being offered the presidency of any other bank, I decided to get into something that would offer better prospects. So in December, 1914, I became connected with the Caddo Abstract Company. For this concern I am now digging through old court records, examining and "abstracting" conveyances and mortgages, wills and suits, making maps and other things, all of which when properly put together, make up an abstract of land title. Last summer I also became interested in a real estate and rent collection business as a side line. My favorite recreation is canoeing and camping. In June, 1914, I pulled off a stunt by taking a trip with a chum from Shreveport to New Orleans down the Red and Mississippi Rivers in an 18-foot Oldtown canoe,—a distance by water of about 800 miles. It was the first time it had ever been done in so small a craft. The trip was a success. We enjoyed paddling through cotton fields, swamps, forests of cypress, past rice fields and the romantic old plantations of the lower Mississippi so much that we again made the same trip last September. I have invested my savings in corner lots.

ERIC PARSON

Since leaving college I have been in educational work. During the winter of 1910-1911 I tutored, and from September, 1911, to June, 1915, I taught English composition and literature at Groton School, Groton, Mass. During the spring and summer of 1915 I built a school for boys at Pinehurst, N. C. The school, known as the Pinehurst School, began its first term on October 14, 1915. At present I have ten boys in attendance. I have written an article entitled: The Church School (to be published by the Bobbs Merrill Company in Childhood and Youth Series), a volume of English Essays (Macmillan).

ARTHUR BOWKER PARSONS

The summer after graduation I spent as counsellor at Brantwood Camp, New Hampshire, with a staff of Harvard men. That fall I returned to Harvard for graduate work in French and German, and took my A.M. in June, 1911. That summer and the next two were also spent at the same camp. My first position was teaching modern languages at Worcester Academy. During the year 1912-1913 I held a similar position at St. Andrew's School, Concord, Mass., but, owing to poor health, was obliged to resign in the spring. After a summer of camping, I took a tutoring position at Greenwich, Conn. I had the good luck to go abroad with the same family in May, 1914. After touring Italy and Switzerland, we were at Lucerne, and on the point of leaving for Munich, when the bulletins bore their message of war. Then followed hectic days of scrambling for dribblets of money, and the organization of the American tourists—most of whom believed their country would be ruined if they didn't return immediately. Finally, on August 21, the first relief train to Rotterdam was announced. We hastily provisioned for several days, and embarked at midnight. During our trip down the Rhine the Germans, enthusiastic from their first successes, cheered us as we passed through, flags a-waving. Real relief came in the shape of a bed at Rotterdam after three nights of trying to sleep sitting up. We loafed in Holland until the "Noördam" sailed the last of September. In the Hague I stayed at the "Salmon Hotel" where Ed. Hunt was preparing for his trip to Antwerp. During February and March, 1915, I was tutoring in Florida, then went to Buffalo with the same family, where I stayed until June. Last summer I was counsellor at Camp Monadnock, Jaffrey, N. H., directed by Frederick Ernst, 1912. I am now in Pasadena, Cal., doing secretarial work; but expect to return East in May.

LEAVITT COOLEY PARSONS

I was so used up in the process of graduation that I did not get a job until after January, 1911, when I started in as "General Jump" in a New York bond house. In 1912 I was sent to its Boston office, where I remained until October, 1913. At that time I left and became interested in the organization of Marshall and Company, a new firm to specialize in public utility bonds. My address should be in care of them, at 70 State Street, Boston, so long as my health lasts. As to other activities: in 1914 I was interested in the formation of the Beverly Trust Company, where I was made a director. A little later I was elected a director of the Gloucester National Bank. In 1914 I lectured on finance at the Boston Young Men's Christian Association, and the same year I was appointed instructor in finance at Boston University, where I still give a course in investments and one in corporation finance. I am at present vice-president of the Sanigenic Products Company. I am not yet married: nor do I feel in immediate danger. I have written articles for various financial magazines and newspapers:

WILLIAM BARCLAY PARSONS, JR.

Shortly after celebrating Jesse Waid's victory at New London, I went abroad and spent the summer in Germany, where, by more or less diligent application, I was able, at least on my return, to read the names of a few medical journals if I had more than a passing acquaintance with them. This I considered of great advantage in beginning the studies of the next four years at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University. These four years were a different proposition as regards work from the four delightful preceding ones, and were as full of interest as of application. The vacations were spent doing out-patient hospital work, abroad or out West on a successful and thoroughly healthful hunting trip in Alberta. In my fourth year at the P. and S. I was fortunate enough to be elected to the Alpha Omega Alpha, and to receive a surgical appointment to the Presbyterian Hospital. I have finished over eighteen months of that two years' service and am now in the last six months, being house surgeon at present. These months have been exceeding pleasant, full of work, leaving but little time or desire to be out much, but thoroughly compensating in interest and enjoyment. By the time reunion comes, I will be almost ready to go forth seeking the halt and maimed that may be of poor enough intelligence to seek my advice, or in such suffering that they care not who takes care of them. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Racquet and Tennis Club, New York.

RICHARD HARKNESS PATCH

Along in September after graduation I decided to enter the Graduate School and study for a Ph.D. in chemistry. Together with my research the first year I had an Austin teaching fellowship in chemistry 1. The next two years I spent as assistant in chemistry 5 and my last year I had charge of the chemical laboratory at Radcliffe. During the summers of my last two years I tried my hand in chemical research at the Midvale Steel Company, Philadelphia, and to Philly and "steel" I decided to stick after getting my degree. Directly upon receiving the afore-mentioned Ph.D., in June, 1914, I left for Europe with Jim Sumner. We were tramping in Switzerland when the war broke out. We were slipping around on the glaciers above Grindelwald and consequently did not learn of the declaration of war until the second day afterward. The weather was so superb that as soon as we were able to get some money we continued our walking. We started for Paris about the 15th of August. Reaching Paris we found everything closed as far as "amusements" were concerned; so we left at once for England. I arrived in Boston on the 2d of September with 43 cents in my pocket, having missed connections with a draft in Germany amid the general mix-up just previous to the outbreak of the war. Ten days later I entered the research department of the Midvale Steel Company. Here I am now in charge of research work on tool steel alloys and the manufacture of all special steels and alloys outside of our regular course of production. Member: Germantown Cricket Club, Philadelphia.

AYLMA YOUNG PEARSON

Though of the class of 1910, I finished my course in 1909, and spent the year of 1910 in special work at the University of Mississippi. In June, 1910, I came to Memphis and was admitted to the bar and have practised law since that time. In 1912 I became associated with Mr. L. H. Graves and formed a partnership of Graves and Pearson. Later that firm was dissolved and for the last two years I have been Having devoted a year to study in the Harvard Law School and the intervening time in business in Boston I am renewing the study of law, to complete preparation for bar examinations. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

HAROLD PETERS

After completing my work for the degree in August, 1909, I worked in a real estate office in Boston until December, 1910, when I went to New Zealand by way of San Francisco, Tahiti, and the Society and Cook Islands. After five weeks in New Zealand, I proceeded to Melbourne, Australia, by way of Tasmania. While staying on a sheep station in the back part of New South Wales, I injured my knee, and, owing to ignorant treatment, soon lost the use of the leg, and was obliged to return to Boston, where I arrived in June by way of Luva, in the Fiji Islands, Honolulu, Vancouver, and the Great Lakes. After this I remained in or near New England until February, 1915, when I sailed from Boston in the American sailing ship "Rhine," bound for Buenos Aires with lumber. We arrived in the River Platte the twenty-second of April, after a very fair passage of fifty-five days. From the Argentine I continued south, by way of Port Stanley, in the Falkland Islands, and then through the Straits of Magellan; thence up the west coast of South America to Valparaiso. Leaving this port in June, I proceeded along the coast, touching at several Chilean and Peruvian ports and going up from Callao to see the ancient city of Lima; thence passing through the Panama Canal to Colon and from there to New York. I am now engaged in the real estate business in Boston.

SAMUEL ARTHUR PETERS

At the end of our sophomore year I left college to accept the principalship of a grammar school at Croton Falls, New York, where I taught that year, 1908-1909. The year 1909-1910 I taught at Mount Hermon, Mass., in the Boys' School. The following two years I taught in the Castle Heights School in Lebanon, Tennessee, 1910-1912. I then returned to Harvard and studied one year, 1912-1913. I tutored privately the next year at Peconic, Long Island, New York. The year 1914-1915, I returned again to Harvard and completed the work for the degree of A.B. and in addition two courses toward the degree of A.M. This year, 1915-1916, I am acting in the capacity of head of the department of English in the Morristown School. While in college I specialized in English. The year 1912-1913 I was an editor of the "Advocate".

GEORGE MILLER PINNEY, JR.

After taking my degree in February, 1910, I spent three months in Panama, South America and Jamaica. In April, I started in with Bird and Son, paper and asphalt roofing manufacturers, working in overalls in their mills at East Walpole, Mass., Pont Rouge, Quebec, Canada, and Phillipsdale, R. I. until May, 1911. I had many experiences with the laboring class, lived with them and worked with them, and now can say I know how the other half of the world lives and incidentally acquired the knowledge of the manufacture of asphalt roofing and paper. In May, 1911, I went to St. Paul, Minn. I landed there with no job and no money, and commenced by throwing pipe out of a flat car at $2 a day, with Crane, Ordway Company, a wholesale concern and branch of Crane Company, of Chicago. I was with them until January 1913, finally becoming manager of their mail-order sales and shipping department. During my stay in St. Paul, I rowed on the senior eight of the Minnesota Boat Club. In January, 1913, Charles Flandrau and I started to take a vacation on a coffee ranch, near Mexico City. To make a long story short we got into the midst of the Madero Revolution, finally reached Vera Cruz and took a freight boat for Hamburg, Germany, landing there after one month. We travelled in Germany, France, England, Italy and Greece; and I also got into the midst of the Balkan War in April, 1913. June, 1913, found me hunting a job in the Southern States; and after unsuccessful efforts in New Orleans and Birmingham, Ala., and Atlanta, I finally went with the Pierce Oil Company, in St. Louis, in June, 1913. I sold oil in Missouri and was assistant to the salesmanager. In January, 1914, I went back to the asphalt roofing game; went with the General Roofing Manufacturing Company, and have been with that company until the present time, in the sales department entirely, in their St. Louis, New York and Cleveland offices. Too bad I can't tell all the experiences I have had in Canada, West Indies, South America, Mexico, Europe and out West; but I have been settled in Cleveland, Ohio, for the last two years and am becoming daily more inclined to envy the man who has a home and a fixed place of habitation. Member: Minnesota Boat Club, St. Paul, Minn., Century Boat Club, St. Louis, Mo.

GEORGE DONALD PIRNIE

In the summer of 1910 I organized and conducted the playgrounds (public) of Pittsfield, Mass. During the remainder of 1910 and during most of 1911, I was with the department store of Forbes and Wallace in Springfield, "learning the business". I did not care for department store life, and since I had always wished to teach, I accepted a position as teacher of commercial English and arithmetic with the Springfield Business School. The following year I began teaching literature and grammar in the Forest Park School, Springfield, Mass., where I am at the present time. During the summers of 1914 and 1915 I conducted a camp for boys on the shores of Yokum Lake, Becket, Mass. I could not purchase any suitable land on the lake front and consequently I decided to discontinue the camp, although I had met with very pleasing success. During 1912 and 1913, my musical instinct assisted me to sing in the First Congregational Church of Westfield, Mass. In 1914, I sang at Faith Congregational Church in Springfield. At present I am baritone soloist at the Church of the Unity, Springfield. I forgot to mention the most important fact of all:—I have a mighty powerful young son who is going to be educated mentally and physically to such a degree that when he reaches Harvard he'll be the kind of tenor which no Eli will want to face. Member: Educational Club, Civics Club, Musical Art Society, Schubert Male Choir, all of Springfield, Mass.

HERBERT MALCOLM PIRNIE

During the summer of 1910 I was an assistant in the Harvard Engineering Camp and entered the Graduate School of Applied Science in the fall. June, 1911, I received the degree of master in civil engineering and entered the employ of Hazen and Whipple, now Hazen, Whipple and Fuller, consulting civil engineers, and, as assistant engineer in charge of some of their work, I have been located in a number of different places. Two months in the fall of 1911 I was in St. Albans, Vt., and the first six months of 1912 in Norfolk, Va., and its vicinity, where I had all I wanted of the pleasures of the Great Dismal Swamp. After a month's vacation to recover from malaria, I went to Ottawa, Canada, and left there in February, 1913, to carry on a series of experiments back in the Harvard Hydraulic Laboratory. After finishing these studies I transferred my activities to Vassar College for the remaining two months before commencement. From July, 1913, until April, 1914, I was located in Beverly, Mass., and the next five months were spent in Ottawa, Canada. Then after a few months of living in Beverly and New York, I went to Watertown, N. Y., where I remained until February of this year. At present I am in New York City, but there is no telling whether next month will find me here or on the opposite coast. My work consists largely of investigations for new or additional water supplies for cities and work on the design of water-works and water-purification plants, so that the city which applies to us for any of these things is liable to have me in its midst for several months.

WILLIAM PITKIN

The year following my graduation was devoted mainly to attendance at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration although I did find time to take six weeks during the spring term for a pleasure trip to the West Indies, the Panama Canal, and South America. In June, 1911, immediately after the close of the school year I entered the employ of the Western Electric Company, taking the so-called student's course. This consisted of six months' training at the main plant at Hawthorne, Ill., situated about six miles west of Chicago. Here I became acquainted with the various manufacturing departments and with the more important lines of apparatus manufactured. Following this work, I was placed in the installation department for a period of six months, putting the finishing touches on a switchboard at Buffalo, N. Y., and installing an entirely new exchange at Salamanca, N. Y. Having thus had a year's preliminary training I was thought sufficiently well versed in telephone knowledge to be placed in the general telephone sales department at New York where I remained until March, 1914, as assistant to the general telephone sales manager. At that time I went to the Daniel Green Felt Shoe Company, with main offices in Boston. In making this change I was influenced primarily by the fact that the position held greater promise and secondarily because it enabled me to live once more at home in Boston. SHEPARD POND

Since graduation my life has been entirely uneventful. Having completed my college course in three years, I entered the bond department of Hayden, Stone and Company, in the fall of 1909, and I am still associated with this house. During this time my home has been, as previously, in Winchester, Mass., and my life, except for periods of vacation which were devoted either to travel or yachting, has centred around Boston. RUEL PUTNAM POPE

Life in Beverly consists mainly in working and minding your own business, in both of which pursuits I have been fairly successful. I have worked hard for six years in an attempt to learn the retail lumber business and I am still at it. In fact, I have spent so much time working that my existence has been very quiet and hence, uninteresting to the class as a whole. I hope for a better report at the next opportunity afforded.

Since 1913, I have been in Houston, Texas, practising law, being a member of the firm of Gill, Jones and Tyler. In 1912, I compiled a pamphlet on the subjects of the Honor System and Student Self Government at the University of Texas, being at that time the president of the Students' Association in that institution. THOMAS IVES HARE POWEL

I have been engaged in my business steadily since graduation, spending the first year at Kidder, Peabody and Company's, Boston, and remaining years with Wilson, Slade and Company, Providence. I was elected, in 1914, for three years, to the Newport city council, and am serving, in 1916, on various sub-committees. I was elected, in 1915, a director of the Newport Trust Company. I spent the winter of 1914 in Europe and plan to go in April, 1916, to a military camp at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. In 1915 I published a series on Architecture edited by Professors Chase, Pape and Post, of Harvard. I spent the summer of 1916 traveling in Japan. I was editor of "University Prints," "French and Spanish Art" and "English Painting." Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

JAMES JARVIS PREBLE

After spending the summer following graduation at the beach, recovering from the arduous labors incidental to securing a sheepskin, I joined the engineering department of the Metropolitan Water Board. During the next two years I worked in various capacities, principally on the construction of three tunnels, two under parts of Boston Harbor, and of several pipe lines. In September, 1912, I was transferred to the Metropolitan Sewerage Board, when a large extension to the Mystic Valley sewer was commenced. Not being impressed with the opportunities for advancement and somewhat depressed with the remuneration given in this branch of the state service, the greater part of which is supposed to consist of experience, I decided to make a change, and in August, 1913, entered the employ of the Spray Engineering Company as superintendent of construction. My first duties were constructing a spray cooling system for the Maryland Steel Company at Sparrow's Point, Md., and installing air-washing and cooling equipment used in connection with steam turbine generators in Pittsburgh, Allentown, Philadelphia and New York, in order given. In October, 1914, I took the so-called fatal plunge and joined the already swollen ranks of the benedicts. Shortly after the momentous occasion I was transferred to the engineering department of the Boston office as assistant to the chief engineer, in which capacity I am employed at the present time. With the exception of one vacation spent in Washington, I have each fall responded to

DANIEL BADGER PRIEST

After graduation from the Harvard Law School, in 1914, I entered the office of Breed, Abbott and Morgan, New York City, under whose direction I have enjoyed plenty of work. found some valuable experience, and gratefully received the usual unmentionable salary. I enlisted in Troop B, Squadron A, of the New York National Guard even before the beginning of the popular furor for preparedness, and have found in that outfit my principal source of exercise and recreation. My foreign travel has been limited to occasional trips to Boston and Washington and extended talks with "Thar She Blows" Holmes. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Squadron A Club.

GEORGE PALMER PUTNAM

After a year at Harvard, owing to ill health, I came West, took a year's work at the University of California, and then came to Oregon. In 1910 I purchased a newspaper, the Bend Bulletin, at Bend, Ore., which I continue to own and direct. I was mayor of Bend two terms. Have travelled fairly extensively, including two European trips and six months in Central America, writing for newspapers and magazines. Since January, 1916, I have been secretary to the governor of Oregon, and am now residing at the state capital, Salem. I have written: Southland of North America, 1913 (Central America). In the Oregon Country, 1915. Member: Emblem Club, Bend, Ore., Sierra Club. San Francisco.

ALBERT ZANE PYLES

After graduation I spent a year at the Harvard Law School. My legal progress was then interrupted by an ill-mannered appendix. It was forcibly ejected, but the evil that it did lived after it, necessitating an unwelcome tour of hospitals and an intimate practical knowledge of medical ways. Two years' adventuring in New Mexico followed. I worked as a cowboy in a region where the Old West lingers, with its freedom and ardor and youth,—the West of Owen Wister and Frederic Remington. It was a fine thing to experience the mad confusion of the round-up and the exhilaration of lonely rides across the far plains. But even more to be desired was the opportunity to be with these men of the ranches, to eat, sleep and ride with them, to know them in their long hours of toil and in their periods of rough celebration. Last summer

HAROLD ROBERT RAFSKY

In September, 1910, I went to Fargo, N. D., as instructor in chemistry in the North Dakota Agricultural College. While there I devoted part of my time to research in textiles. In April, 1911, I left Fargo, and went as chemist with S. D. Warren and Company, paper manufacturers, at Cumberland Mills, Me. I remained with that concern until March, 1916, when I left to devote my time to promoting several processes which I have developed, connected with the paper industry, upon which patents have been allowed or are now pending. I have written scientific articles: "1-Benzoylphenyl-3-methyl-5-pyrazolone" (Journal of American Chemical Society, 1910), "On the Quantitative Estimation of Sodium Hydroxide in Black Liquor" (Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, 1912); (both with co-worker). I returned to Baltimore in the autumn of 1910 and for three months worked in a broker's office, when I got a position on the Baltimore News. I remained with the News till November, 1912; then, on account of ill health, I went to Asheville, N. C., where I stayed till May, 1913. After the summer of that year I came back to Baltimore and studied during the winter of 1913-1914. In March, 1914, I became connected with a local advertising firm for which I worked steadily up to last autumn. I then resigned and once more looked for newspaper work. I was taken on by my old paper the Baltimore News, at the beginning of this year, and am with it now. In August of 1915, I attended the military camp for business and professional men at Plattsburg, N. Y. Member: Bachelors' Cotillion of Baltimore, Maryland League of National Defence, Dramatic Art Club of Baltimore, National Security League, L'Hirondelle Club of Ruxton, American Defence Society.

CLARENCE CROCKER REED

The summer of 1910 I spent in the West, exploring the Canadian Rockies and Yellowstone Park. I visited Vancouver Island, off the Pacific Coast, and caught a goodly number of salmon; the largest weighed something over forty pounds, but I have learned not to speak of it very freely in this community, for my reputation's sake. In the fall of 1910 I entered the Law School, and was fortunate enough to get my degree at the end of three years. My experiences were not different from those of the average law school student. Each summer I spent pleasantly; in New Brunswick in 1911, and again in the West in 1912. Not long after my graduation from the Law School I was married, and my wife and I were fortunate in reaching Europe a year ahead of the war. After an extremely pleasant honeymoon of about four months, we returned, and I entered into the pursuit of my profession. The pursuit still continues, and I am undergoing the same experiences as most young lawyers in middle-sized city, I

JOHN (SILAS) REED

On leaving college, in June, 1910, I worked my way to England on a cattle-boat, in company with Waldo Pierce, who, disgusted with the swell of the boat, leaped overboard, swam back to Boston and crossed on the Lusitania to Liverpool. In the meantime I was arrested for murdering Pierce, who finally turned up during my trial in Manchester, and I was saved. I bummed across England, smuggled across the channel and walked to Paris with Pierce. I walked through Spain alone, lived in Paris six months, walked with Pierce through Provence and along Riviera to Monte Carlo, where I became engaged. I returned to America hot-foot to make a fortune and get married, and went to work on the editorial staff of the American Magazine, also as business manager of Landscape Architecture, a quarterly periodical which I finally nearly ruined. I wrote for Collier's American, Saturday Evening Post and lesser publications. After six months my engagement was broken. In 1912-1913 I got interested in labor fights, and in the spring of 1913 I was arrested while walking the picket-line in the silk-workers' strike in Paterson, N. J., and given thirty days in the county jail. I served only four, got out and wrote up the jail, and the result of it was, I planned, wrote, and staged the Pageant of the Paterson Strike, in Madison Square Garden in June, 1913, with one thousand strikers brought from Paterson. At the same time I became disgusted with regular life and threw up my job on the American Magazine, accepting an invitation to spend the summer in Europe. Returning in September, 1913, I be-

But I was dismissed from the position of managing editor, after three months, because of the hearty air of irresponsibility I had encouraged among the office force. In the winter of 1913-1914, upon the recommendation of Lincoln Steffens, I was sent to Mexico as war correspondent for the Metropolitan Magazine, then to write the Colorado strike, then to Europe, to write of the war,—where I spent more than a year, and visited all the belligerent countries. I have written books: Sanger, a poem (published 1912, F. C. Bursch, Riverside, Conn.), The Day in Bohemia (published 1912, F. C. Bursch, Riverside, Conn.), Insurgent Mexico (published 1914, D. HOWARD ANSELM REILING

After a few months in my father's silk mill in Union Hill, N. J., I sailed for Europe in February, 1910, to attend the textile school at Crefeld, Germany. I completed the course of three half-year terms and incidentally found time to do considerable travelling and enjoy myself thoroughly even when in Crefeld. Contrary to my previous experiences in Germany, I found the people to be very friendly, good sports and excellent companions. From Crefeld I went to Milan, Italy, where

I spent a month in a raw silk office and then to Lyons, France, where I spent a month with a commission house, and finally returned to America in November, 1911. I went back to our mill in Union Hill for a year and then spent another year at our office in New York. In October, 1913, I again left New York, this time for Rhode Island, where I spent a year at our mill in Valley Falls, and in October, 1914, came to Scranton as assistant superintendent of our mill in this city, and have been in charge since the first of this year. Since my return to America my experiences have contained so little of interest that they are not worth giving in detail.

EUSTACE REYNOLDS

I entered the New York Law School in the fall of 1910 and was graduated in the spring of 1913. In the summers of 1912 and 1913 I toured in Europe. Then I was sub-master and teacher of sciences at the Ricker Classical Institute, at Houlton, Me. At present I am instructor in sciences at the Hudson (Mass.) High School.

CARL BALCH RICHARDSON

My life since graduation has not been a sensational one. In the latter part of June, 1910, I entered the automobile business in the employ of the Ford Motor Company, at their Cambridge (Mass.) service station, which was just being opened. My work there was mostly of a clerical nature, but one that gave me a good insight into the mechanical end of the business, in fact, ideal work for a foundation. In June, 1911, I received an offer to go into the wall-paper business and in July, 1911, I entered the employ of Joseph W. Gerry, then of Cornhill, now of 63 Franklin Street, Boston, who deals in foreign and domestic wall paper at wholesale and retail. I have been with this concern ever since. On June 3, 1912, I married Miss Pauline Ross Gerry, of Watertown, Mass. On July 23, 1913, we were blessed with a flax-haired, blue-eyed baby, Ruth Elizabeth. Member: Unitarian Club, Watertown, Mass., Harvard Club, Watertown, Mass.

HENRY BARBER RICHARDSON

The autumn after graduating I entered the Harvard Medical School and ploughed through a four years' course, after which I went abroad, intending to do research work in Professor Mueller's clinic in Munich. In August, 1914, I was interrupted by the war, having spent my time in acquiring a bowing acquaintance with speaking German. After six dreary weeks waiting for something to do in the hospital in Munich, I went to Bonn and spent four months in research work, in Switzerland, which was very peaceful, in spite of its martial appearance. I then came home to begin a service as house-officer in the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, in Boston, where I have completed the first year of my 16 months. Member: Aesculapian Club, Boston, Phi Rho Sigma, Boston.

EDWARD BLAKE ROBBINS, JR.

At graduation in February, 1910, being forced by the college office either to continue to take courses which I might not pass in June, or to vacate my rooms, I adopted the latter, and what seemed to me the safer, alternative; and, degree in hand, entered the employ of the American Trust Company, in Boston, as a "runner". Not finding any of the higher positions in this institution open to me at the end of five months, and fearing that senility might overtake me still stamping cancelled checks, I left the bank and, adopting Horace Greeley's advice to young men, in October, 1910, I went West. Whether this was wise or not I shall leave to my ultimate biographer; but I know I spent twenty-two of the most interesting, varied and yet at times disagreeable months of my life to date. With a great friend and through his influence, I secured the promising job of "pit-rat" in the railway repair shops of the Portland Railway, Light and Power Company, of Portland, Ore., and until August, 1912, I worked through the various departments of both the street railway and light and power divisions of this public service corporation, never leaving overalls and early hours more than three jumps behind at any stage of the game, yet getting more fun and experience out of the work than I imagined possible. The hospitality of Portland, Ore., and the kindness of the inhabitants to us as day laborers will always be a particularly pleasant memory. As the operating end of public utilities for the long run did not appeal to me I returned East in the summer of 1912, and was eventually able to persuade E. W. Clark and Company—the firm who operates the Portland Company as well as many other such public utilities—to take me on in the financial end of the game. After a preliminary stay of nearly two months in the main office in Philadelphia, I came up to the Boston office of E. W. Clark and Company, when it was opened in November, 1912, and have been there ever since. One particular example alone of my worldly progress remains of which I am justly proud. In 1913 at our triennial I could only pledge financial assistance for our reunion. This year, our sexennial, I was able to give in cash ahead of time. What may I not be able to do in 1920 with such a record of progress to date?

Since graduation I have been engaged in musical work of various kinds, for the most part, in Boston. I have done a good deal of editorial work, arranging, etc., for the Boston Music Company. I have taught piano, and musical theory (harmony, etc.), and what time I could, I have given to composition. Some of my pieces are published. Combined with this regular work I have had various independent jobs, among which were,—arranging and conducting music for the Harvard Architectural Masque (1911); conducting music of Hume and Spelman's pantomime at "The 47 Workshop" (1913); arranging and conducting incidental music for five plays given by "The Children's Players" in Boston (1912-1915), and for several plays given at the new Toy Theatre, Boston (1915); I have conducted the orchestras for a charity ballet in Brooklyn (1914), for the ballet of "Pandora's

I attended the Graduate School of Business Administration, 1910-1911. In the fall of 1911, I did some accounting work for three months, then took a job as "move-man" at the Plimpton Press, Norwood, Mass. I worked in several departments, learning the printing and binding business, and studying the results of the introduction of scientific management. Believing a broader experience highly desirable, I left the Plimpton Press in the summer of 1914. After a six-weeks' vacation, I started on a trip of observation and study of the work and methods of several large printing, engraving, ink and paper plants. The trip included Harris-

In 1910-1911, I finished in mining at college, taking the M.E. in June. I then went down to Low Moor, Virginia, and had charge of the engineering department of the Low Moor Iron Company until November of 1911, when a depression of the iron market temporarily closed up the mines there. My next job was to go out West, with Mr. A. H. Rogers, of Boston, as assistant, on a test of the Steptoe Copper Mill at McGill, Nev., where I had been employed during the summer of 1908. I returned from this job in January, 1912. From that time until November, 1912, I worked independently, taking anything that offered. Among other things I worked for a time for the Charlestown Gas and Electric Company, designing steel work, coke-screening apparatus, shaking furnace grates, and so forth. In August, September, and October, I went West again making a number of mine examinations for Mr. Galen L. Stone, of Hayden, Stone and Company, in Nevada and elsewhere. In November, 1912, I came to Hurley, Wis., to take a position with Pickands, Mather and Company, as general engineer for their mines on the Gogebic Range, where I have been employed ever since. The work includes geology, exploration, mapping, and general engineering. I was married, September 10, 1913, to Marion Woodworth, Radcliffe, 1910. We were classmates in the Cambridge Latin School. I have written: The Use of the Cement Gun in Lining a Steel Shaft on the Gogebic Range (Engineering and Mining Journal, February 27, 1915). CHARLES DILLER RYAN

After taking my degree, I went to San Jose, California, where my mother and father were living at the time. There I worked on a newspaper as a cub reporter for about nine months. When we moved to Los Angeles, in the summer of that year, I gave up newspaper work and decided to take up medicine. Both my mother and father died in Los Angeles in September, 1911, and I went back to our home in Springfield, Ill. Until the early spring of 1912, I was busy administering my father's estate here. Then I went to Europe for six months and lived mainly in southern France and the Pyrenees. In the fall of that year, I entered Christ's College, Cambridge, and spent the academic year and the "long vacation" there. The next fall, September, 1913, I entered the Harvard Medical School, but was forced to resign and go home after a short time to attend to business interests there. Until the fall of 1915, with the exception of a summer school course at the University of Chicago, I was in Springfield most of the time, engaged in business. Last fall, 1915, I entered the Medical School of the University of Pennsylvania and expect to continue my medical studies. Upon graduation in June, 1910, I worked for the Producer's Oil Company in Southern Illinois until October, 1910, when I entered the Northwestern University department of law at Chicago, Ill., from which institution I took the degree of LL.B. in June, 1913. During the last two years of my work in the law school I undertook to run a farm as a side-line, with more or less, probably less, success. In July, 1913, after passing the Illinois state bar examination, I entered the practice of law at Rockford, Ill., first entering

CARL RICHARD SAFFORD

My life has been confined to a very limited area. Five years of the six have been spent in the employ of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, United States Navy, at Newport, R. The past six years have been very interesting for me but I fear that I cannot make the narrative equally so, even by the profuse use of the personal pronoun. it was a Cook's tour which hastened us through England, Holland, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Croatia, and the northern part of Italy. We returned in September, sailing from Rotterdam and arriving just in time for me to enter the junior year in mechanical engineering at Tech. In order to complete the course in two years, I had to take some shop work in the summer school, which occupied the best part of July. In the fall, I decided to stay out a year and gain some first-hand information about the Taylor System of Scientific Management by working in a shop which had successfully adopted the various features of shop management developed by Mr. Taylor. Through Mr. Taylor's influence, the Tabor Manufacturing Company of Philadelphia had developed a system of training college men who wished to gain some practical experience during their course and in September, 1911, I began work there in company with two Cornell men and one from Haverford. It was within walking distance of my home, but save as a place for sleeping, I saw very little of it, for I found that a ten-hour working day in the shops for one who was accustomed to nothing more than the trivial labors of the Institute, left little energy for anything else. In June I went back to Boston for some exams, and then went down to Cape Cod to drive for a garage in Falmouth. There were many adventures which might be recorded, if space permitted, but after six weeks of it, I decided that the job resembled work too much for a summer vacation and went up to the White Mountains for a brief visit with the folks. From Bethlehem I went across country to Portland where I joined Clayton Ernst for our first real canoe trip. We started at North East Carry and came down the West Branch of the Penobscot to Mt. Cross, taking about ten days for the trip. The following year was devoted to completing the requirements for an S.B. at Tech. In July, I began work for the Independence Inspection Bureau of Philadelphia, a firm of consulting engineers in fire and accident prevention. After six months with them, I resigned and began work as a student engineer with the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania. The preliminary work of training included everything from a week in the operator's school to digging pole holes out in the country. In May, 1915, I was transferred from the engineering department to the Philadelphia plant department and am now working for the Philadelphia division transmission engineer. My father's death in February has made a change of residence necessary. We haven't made definite plans as yet but my next address will probably be in one of the suburbs of Philadelphia. I am expecting to be on hand for the celebrations in June. Member: Harvard Club of Philadelphia, Engineers' Club of Philadelphia.

GORDON GREENWOOD SAMPSON

I finished the requirements for my degree in September, 1909, and, after a pleasant vacation in Nova Scotia with Harlan Drown, I became associated with my father in the stock brokerage business at 75 State Street, Boston. In July, 1911, a partial heat prostration and nervous breakdown laid me up for nearly a year. I went to Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H., then to Guilford, Me., to recuperate. In May, 1912, I became travelling salesman for the National Drug Company, covering the state of Maine. I remained with them until January, 1913, when appendicitis nailed me. I went back on the road from March until June, when I accepted a position as construction superintendent with the Barrett Company, remodelling the structure at 35 Wendell Street, Boston, into their present office building. This work lasted until November, when I became their assistant purchasing agent. I spent my summer vacation in 1914 at Lake Winnepesaukee, N. H. In May, 1915, another prolonged illness put me "out of business", and in August I hiked back to Guilford, Me., my old rustivating ground, to recuperate. In December I spent a few days scaling logs in a lumber camp in the Maine woods. At 40 degrees below zero it is the best "blood circulating" job I know,—and the food,—don't say a word! I returned in February, 1916, and have been gradually recuperating ever since. The above run of luck has kept me from participating in many class activities; but I hope to see more of you fellows in the future.

HERBERT STEVENS SANBORN

I was with the Marlborough Electric Company, of Marlborough, Mass., until April, 1913, to learn the business. I returned to Boston and have been with the electrical engineering department of the Edison Electrical Illuminating Company to date. Member: Soley Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Somerville, Mass.

GEORGE BROCK SARGENT

[Mr. Sargent has nothing to add to his last report.]

SULLIVAN AMORY SARGENT, JR.

The summer of 1910 I spent tutoring a boy at Beverly and in Maine. In the fall, I started in the yard of the George McQuesten Lumber Company, where I worked two years. In the winter of 1912, I went to Jacksonville, Fla., and Mobile, Ala., for two months, to learn the southern end of our business, since which time I have been located in Boston and the vicinity except for a trip to the English Henley Regatta with the Union Boat Club crew in 1914.

EDWARD GROTRIAN SCHAUROTH

The two years following upon graduation I spent at Worcester Academy, Worcester, Mass., as instructor of Greek. In June, 1912, I married, and the following autumn came to Philadelphia, where I have been since, engaged as head of the foreign language department at the Friends' Central School. I have written: The Hupozomata of Greek Ships (Harvard Studies in Classical Philology, Vol. XXII, 1911). Member: Philadelphia Classical Club, Archaeological Institute of America, Pennsylvania Society, Association of Modern Language Teachers of Philadelphia, Society for the Promotion of Liberal Studies, Philadelphia.

HENRY THOMAS SCHNITTKIND

My life since graduation has had nothing out of the routine. Till 1914 I worked for my A.M. and Ph.D. degrees, and after that I entered the publishing house of Richard G. Badger (Poet Lore Company), where I am now employed in a business and editorial capacity. I like my work first-rate, and thank the lucky stars that I don't have to teach for a living. I have but one regret; and that is, that at college I was not told about life as it really is. That caused me a few jolts at the outset. Now, however, I am "wise", and so find smoother sailing. My private life has been all that pleasant friends and loving companionship can make it. I believe that the happier a man's life is, the duller is its recital to others. I have written two juvenile books: Giuseppe, and Alice and the Stork; and three plays: Shambles, Laughter Wins, and Prayers.

VICTOR FRANZ SCHOEPPERLE

I left Harvard in 1907. I entered Haverford College in 1908 and was graduated with A.B. in 1911, and became a member of Phi Beta Kappa. I entered the employ of N. W. Halsey and Company in June, 1911. There has been no change since.

O. ROBERT SCHURIG

Having finished the required work for the Harvard A.B. degree in the summer of 1909 at the engineering camp, I took up the study of electrical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the fall of 1909. From September, 1909, to June, 1911, I was a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, receiving the S.B. degree in 1911. From June, 1911, to January, 1912, I had miscellaneous occupations in the field of electrical engineering; viz. telephone work, consulting engineering work, etc. From February, 1912, to September, 1913, I was with Stone and Webster Management Association. During this period I was employed with the work of the operation and the superintendence of the Blackstone Valley Gas and Electric Company, of Pawtucket, R. I. In September, 1913, I accepted a position as instructor in electrical engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Since October, 1914, I have been also connected with the electrical engineering research division as secretary. I have written miscellaneous articles as associate editor of American Handbook for Electrical Engineers (Wiley, 1914). Member: American Institute of Electrical Engineers, University Club, Boston.

WARREN FRANCIS SCRIBNER

Upon leaving college in 1909, I entered the Law School. I was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1912. In September, 1912, I opened an office in the Exchange Building, 53 State Street, Boston, and have carried on a general practice of the law ever since that time. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Yorick Club of Lowell, Vesper Country Club of Lowell.

LOUIS CURRIER SEAVERS

I was unfortunate enough to leave Cambridge in February of my senior year, just at the dawning of the time of the most pleasant adjustment between my college appointments and responsibilities, and my knowledge of the points of interest and life of Boston and environs. Without doubt I should have remained during the second half of the year, getting a sound business training in the Graduate School of Business Administration, and digging an up-to-date subway under my constitution. Instead, I migrated to the "Wonderful Northwest", that land of apples and opportunity, where everything grows in the most bountiful profusion, if you only spend enough money on it. There, in a bosky dell, buried in the fastnesses of the Rocky Mountains with the continental divide blocking the view out the back windows, and the jagged snow-capped Bitter Roots fencing off the front yard,—there I found work. I had come to the very spot where Lewis and Clark had spent a winter in 1806 on their expedition to get material to write “Fifty-four Forty or Fight”, that little trip paid for by the guests of the Astor House, New York. The work waiting for me was—digging holes—digging holes for apple trees. Hard ground it was. A crowbar was the only instrument feasible, and with the crowbar I planted countless apples and potatoes. After producing a beautiful crop of the famous Bitter Root potatoes, famous in the Bitter Root Valley at least, and proving again that things will grow out there if you spend enough on it, I began to have a longing for the sight of a periodically regular pay-check. So I made a gift of my potato crop to a commission man, packed the ranch in straw for the winter and left the Bitter Root—so long on scenery, and so short on exchange. At Chicago, I deemed it advisable to pick my associates carefully; so I decided to go in with Mr. Armour in the packing business. The intricate proposition I offered the firm was soon accepted, and I started in. With the aid of a guide and one of those gas helmets, now so popular abroad, I passed through the gateway in which stands, inferred if not expressed, the scriptural text, “Man cannot live by bread alone”, and entered the labyrinth of cattle pens, canneries, tunnels, elevators, freezers, fertilizers, soap works, smoke houses, hide cellars, bone specialties, and slaughter houses, until I finally reached my post. It was absorbing work, and made me feel right next to the inside of things. I stood at the end of a chute, two floors under the killing pens, and hung up the livers. Apparently, it was a very popular job, for one almost had to pay to get it. The hours were not early, which to a certain extent, I supposed, accounted for the popularity of the job; they were quite late. Quitting time was very late in the afternoon, and beginning time very late at night. The liver room was entrancing, but I was not allowed to spend very much time there. At the expiration of numerous weeks.

when I had become an expert liver hanger, I discovered that was not the only department, which so to speak, let one see the wheels go around. As a matter of fact, for the next two years, I oscillated amongst the entrails. By the end of that time the packing business was beginning to be an open book to me. I knew exactly how things were packed, in the cow, and in the can. Another year and I had oscillated some more; I had finished selling pigs' snouts to the Ghetto, and had brought up with a spoon in my hand as wet nurse to a bunch of South Dakota cooks. Nothing should be omitted in the packing business; so, to get to a more advanced stage of the business, I was teaching the people, through their cooks, how to transfer the packing from can to stomach without changing its specific density. Having now spent many years following the Scriptures, according to St. Pack-er, I felt a well-rounded business experience demanded that I follow the packers' already quoted motto "Man cannot live by bread alone", according to St. Luke, so I went into the brokers' business. I soon became star guesser in a Chi-cago office that specialized in grain options. The option part is most easily explained by saying that it refers to the fu-ture; then the man can have his choice, the lake or the Colt, water or bullet. By the end of a couple of years I had ac-cumulated considerable experience. I could tell bull weather from bear weather, but only afterwards, and knew that bull news was usually the bearer of the two. A couple of years of this, though, found me growing short of sand, and therefore skidding badly, but full of well-rounded ex-perience. This experience was of great value. Crowbar slinger, potato digger, liver hanger, purveyor of pigs' snouts, star guesser,—taken together they produce consid-erable acumen. For the firm that was to get me, it was soft—just like steppin' on a young bird. So along in the summer of 1915, I carried the acumen back to where I had laid its foundation, and became assistant to the head office boy in the down town office of Armour and Company, where the hours are early, early noon, and early afternoon, and where I have been ever since. Member: Onwentsia Club, Lake Forest, University Club of Chicago, Casino, Battery C. I. N. G., Chicago.

FREDERICK MONROE DE SELDING

After my graduation in 1910, I went into the office of the Standard Oil Company, in New York. My work was concerned with oil companies in Kansas, Oklahoma, West Virginia, Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania, and with natural gas companies in West Virginia and Pennsylvania. For a while during the year 1911 I held the position of treasurer of the Colonial Oil Company. During 1912, I worked in the office of the president of the southern group of pipe-lines, transporting oil through Kentucky, West Virginia and Pennsylvania. In June, 1913, I went to Detroit, Mich., where I acted as paymaster on the construction of a six-inch oil-line from the trunk line at Cygnet, Ohio, to the Imperial Oil Company, Ltd., refinery at Sarnia, Ontario. This, by the way, is the first international pipe-line for the transportation of oil. In September of that year I went to Kentucky, where we laid a 12-inch gas-line from the West Virginia gas fields to Louisville. In April, 1914, I went to Calhoun County, West Virginia, for the Hope Natural Gas Company, where we did some wild-cat drilling to test some new territory. We got four fair-sized gas wells and one small oil well, good for three barrels a week. From there I went to Wolf Summit, W. Va., for the same company, where we erected a pump station to handle the gas from some new wells the company had taken over. In March, 1915, I went to Tulsa, Okla., for the Carter Oil Company. At that time there was a great deal of activity in the Cushing field, which was good for 300,000 barrels a day. It has since fallen off considerably, and is now producing 90,000 barrels. We have made considerable investment in producing property, leases and tank farms, and are now building a refinery. I am at present located in the New York office of the company, at 26 Broadway. Member: Harvard Club of New York.

HARLIN ALBERT SEXTON

In the fall of 1911 I entered Springfield College for a two years' course in physical education. I played varsity soccer, basket-ball and baseball. During the summer months I was employed by the city of Springfield as a playground director. In the fall of 1912 I was stricken with typhoid fever and compelled to give up my college course for the entire year. After my recovery, I went to Sheffield, Mass., for the months of April, May and June, where I was engaged as baseball coach at Berkshire School. I re-entered Springfield College in September, 1913, but another severe illness (pneumonia) prevented me from completing my course and obtaining a degree. However, I decided to give up hopes of a degree, for the time being at least, and accordingly accepted a position as assistant physical director at the Technical High School of Springfield, Mass. The following year I was promoted to the position of physical director at the Technical High School, where I am now located. Member: Educational Club of Springfield.

EARL SHAFFER

For two years after graduation I was registered in Harvard University as a member of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, studying in the departments of fine arts and archaeology. My next move was to get myself appointed to the literary editorship of a magazine published in Boston. I was literary editor, or, to be more precise, assistant literary editor, of the Jacobs Orchestra Monthly during 1912-1913. From 1913-1914 to 1914-1915 inclusive, I was a tutor in Cambridge. Then I decided that I should like to be principal of a high school. I accordingly secured the position which I now hold, that of principal of the Forestport High School, Forestport, N. Y. As to what I shall be up to next, I am unable to say at present.

ALBERT ABRAHAM SHAPIRA

Since graduation I have spent four short years, 1909-1913, at the Harvard Medical School, and two shorter years of medical preparation in hospitals. From November, 1913, to March, 1915, I was house officer on the gynaecological service of the Boston City Hospital, and from March until October, 1915, I was house officer at the Boston Lying-In Hospital. Medicine is a broad field, and I hope to confine my work chiefly to obstetrics, gynaecology and surgery. For a little while after I got through at the hospital I felt as if the whole world had dropped out from under me and I was just floating in space, with nothing to do and nothing to interest me. But fortunately, my period of depression was short, and, for the past four months, I have engaged in active medical practice and things are going along quite smoothly, for a beginner. Recently I received an appointment as assistant in anatomy at the Harvard Medical School and the work in this has been keeping me fairly well occupied. Member: Massachusetts Medical Society, Boston Medical Society.

CHARLES FRANCIS SHARRY

I have spent four years at Harvard Medical School after graduating from college. The remaining two years I spent in New York hospitals, to wit: The Holy Family, The Manhattan Maternity, The New York Board of Health.

JOHN BRECK SHAW

I spent the summer of 1910 in Maine, and entered the Harvard Law School in September of that year. In January, 1911, I was forced to leave the Law School and undergo an operation. On recovering from this, I went to San Francisco and sailed from there for Yokohama via Honolulu about April 1, 1911. I remained in Japan several months, spending much of the time in Tokio, Kyoto, Nikko and Miyanos-hita. I also travelled about the country a good deal upon short trips, such as climbing Mt. Fujiyama, shooting the Fujikawa Rapids, etc. In June of that summer, I went to Korea, visiting the cities of Seoul and Chemulpo, and sailed from the latter place to Taku, the port of Peking, across the Yellow Sea. On the way to Peking I visited Tientsin. From Peking I went by rail to Hankow and thence down the Yangtze River to Shanghai; from there back to Japan via Port Arthur, Mukden and Seoul. In July, I went to the Hokkaido and the Kurile Islands. In September, I went to the Philippine Islands and from there to Hong Kong and Canton. From Hong Kong I went to Saigon, Cochin China, and from there several hundred miles up the Mekong River to the ruins of Ankor in Cambodia. Returning to Saigon, I went by water to Rangoon, Burma, via Singapore and Penang. After a trip up the Irrawaddy River to Mandalay and Bhamo, I went to Calcutta; from there to Benares, Delhi and Agra. I attended the Durbar in Delhi and went up through northern India to the Kyber Pass; then to Bombay and from there to Colombo, Ceylon. After two weeks in Ceylon I sailed for Europe via the Suez Canal, landing in Marseilles; thence to New York via Paris, London and Liverpool in February, 1912. I then re-entered the Harvard Law School and stayed until the end of the year. During the summer of 1912 I was a councillor at the Mowglis Camp, Bridgewater, N. H. In September, I started as a bond salesman with Paine, Webber and Company, Boston. In January, 1913, I went to Fort Myers, Florida, tutoring, for the rest of the winter. During the summer I worked for the Standard Oil Company, in New York. In November, I went to Florida and spent the winter there, returning north in April, 1914. About two weeks later I got a position with the United Fruit Company, and sailed for Panama via Jamaica. I was stationed on a banana plantation about thirty miles inland from Bocas del Toro, Panama, on the Panama side of the Sixaola River, which is the boundary line between Panama and Costa Rica. After the outbreak of the European War, I returned to the United States, and in September, 1914, took a position as headmaster of the Florida Huron Mountains

School for boys, spending the year with the school in its three locations: on Lake Superior, Captiva Island, Florida, and Lake Fairfield, N. C. I spent the summer of 1915 in Maine and in September entered the Columbia Law School, where I am now enrolled as a second-year student.

RUSSELL NEWCOMBE SHAW

I travelled for two years. Then I attended the Harvard Law School for three years. Since graduation I have been practising law in New York City. Member: Harvard Club of New York.

JOSEPH RAYMOND SHEEHAN

After the summer vacation of 1910, I went to work in the foreign office of Jordan Marsh Company., where I stayed some three months. From there I went into the wholesale clothing business with the Burton-Pierce Company and stayed with them a little less than a year. I then went into the brokerage business with a curb house, J. Thomas Reinhardt, and stayed there until April, 1912, when the house failed. In May, 1912, I went into the wholesale liquor business with my father and am still in that business. I have been fairly successful in this business and I will soon be paying father a salary. I am not married, and have no immediate prospects of getting married. I have met the dearest girl in the world, in fact, I have met about four of them since 1910, but they all went and got married to someone else. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

WARD SHEPARD

I was graduated from the Harvard Forest School in 1913, and immediately entered the United States Forest Service as forest assistant. My first assignment took me to the Jemez Mountains, in northern New Mexico, as a timber cruiser; and I stayed on this job for several months. The curious may find details of this kind of work—and ideas of the forest service in general—from Pinckney Lawson's "The Log of a Timber Cruiser" (Duffield). From there I went—still as a cruiser—to the Apache Forest, in Arizona; and suffered all the delights of daily mountain climbing, bunking in a tent, and eating sow-bosom and beans during two months of a Rocky Mountain winter. Next, I took a ride of about eight hundred miles on the back of a pony, whose gentle name, Billy, belied his inhuman qualities, through the Mazatzal Mountains, west of the Roosevelt Reservoir, along the foot of the Mogollon Rim, down the Verde River, through the Superstition and Pinal Mountains to Globe, then back through the Sierra Anchas to Roosevelt. The journey was not for pleasure, however, but to get a rough map of the various types of timber. That was in the spring of 1914. Since then, I have been a forest ranger on the Datil National Forest, first, at Rosedale, in the San Mateo Mountains, then at Luna, at the head of the San Francisco River. My work has consisted in supervising the use of the forest resources of my district,—grazing, timber, etc.; and in the summer, fighting fires, building trails and telephone lines, and attending cattle round-ups. Recently I have been transferred to the office of the supervisor, and put in charge of improvement construction work. Before ending this skeleton outline, I wish to remark that, for anyone who likes outdoor life, there is no work that has more variety and interest than that of the Forest Service; and no better country to do that work in than the great Southwest. With this qualification, however; it is a great country for a man and a dog, but a poor one for a woman and a cat. Member: Magdalena Rifle Club, Magdalena Game Protective and Sportsman's Association.

HENRY RICHARDSON SHEPLEY

I went to Paris the August after graduation to study architecture, and was admitted to the Ecole des Beaux Arts in July, 1911. The next two years I spent in travelling and in completing my course at the Beaux Arts, from which institution I received a diploma in February, 1914. I returned to America in July and started work with the firm of Shepley, Rutan and Coolidge (which later changed its name to Coolidge and Shattuck) where I am now working. Member: Beaux Arts Society, New York, Harvard Club of New York, City Club (22 Central Street), Boston, Architectural Club, Boston.

ARTHUR MURRAY SHERWOOD, JR.

I left college and entered the service of the General Electric Company, at Schenectady, N. Y., in April, 1909. I remained with them until May, 1910, when on account of poor health I was obliged to take up out-door work. I came to Maryhill, Washington, in June, 1910, and worked there for Mr. Samuel Hill as a ranch laborer until November, 1910, when I purchased an apple ranch at White Salmon, Washington, in conjunction with Gordon Forbes, Princeton, '05. I remained there until January, 1914, when I married Miss Evelyn Wilson of Portland, Oregon. Returning to White Salmon, after several months spent in New York with my family, we stayed there until November, 1914, when we removed to Portland, Oregon, and I re-entered the employ of the General Electric Company in their Portland District Office where I have been continuously since that time. Member: University Club, Multnomah Amateur Athletic Club, Harvard Club, all of Portland, Ore.

ORVILLE SHIPMAN

After graduation I had stomach trouble for something over a year and a half (until April, 1912). During this time I was able to work only intermittently in the First National Bank of De Kalb. From this I acquired some valuable experience, but not much money. In April, 1912, my stomach trouble ceased and I have had no trouble since. From June to October, 1912, I was making a trip through the West and especially the Pacific Coast. I spent ten days in Colorado, two weeks in Los Angeles, and two months in Seattle. In October, 1912, I returned from Seattle and took up my present position as bookkeeper and office man for Bradt and Shipman, manufacturers of leather work, gloves and mittens. My father was a member of the firm. My duties also include keeping the books of the De Kalb Building and Loan Association. On July 4, 1915, my father died of cancer after an illness of several months and a fruitless trip to Rochester, Minn., to the hospital of the Mayo Brothers. My brother Andrew and I are the trustees of his estate. In this capacity I was recently elected a director of the Charles Smith Co., manufacturing furnaces and room heaters, at Chicago, Ill. Member: De Kalb Commercial Club, Kishwaukee Country Club, De Kalb, Ill.

WAYNE MILNER SHIPMAN

I left college in 1909 on leave of absence, having completed the required seventeen courses by that time,—two and one-half by anticipatory examination and the other fourteen and one-half by usual work in Cambridge. During the summer of 1909, I was a councillor in Camp Algonquin, a boys' camp on Squam Lake, N. H. In September, 1909, I went to Ridgefield School, Ridgefield, Conn., and became a teacher of Latin and German, also coach of the football team. In the summer of 1910, I was in a private family, tutoring a fourteen-year-old boy. Besides tutoring the boy, I travelled with him to the White Mountains and to the St. Lawrence valley region. On September 14, 1910, I married Miss Porter, of Canton, and returned to Ridgefield, where I taught the same subjects as before. Feeling that my opportunities for professional advancement were cramped, I returned to Boston when a position in the Volkmann School was offered me. I was there from 1911 to 1914 as teacher of Latin, German, and ancient history. The summers of 1911, 1912 and 1913 I was again councillor at Algonquin. During the year 1912-1913, I took Latin 7 as a graduate student. In this course I undertook such delectable tasks as translating Frank Bolles, Edmund Burke, Webster, and Woodrow Wilson into Latin. In January, 1914, I took the Boston school board examinations for junior master, and now hold a certificate which says I am duly qualified to do missionary work in our great metropolis. From May to September, 1914, I taught in the Boston Y. M. C. A. Evening Preparatory School. Here I gained an entirely new conception of teaching, for the men there realized what an education really meant and were going after it with every effort possible. In September, 1914, I became associated with the Huntington School, where I am now teaching, as before, Latin, German and history. I also taught in the Summer School (Day) in 1915. At the present time, I am trying to keep in touch with new developments in my own particular field, and at the same time find time for other activities. I am scoutmaster of Troop 1, Milton, also on the District Court of Honor,—a group of men who give scout examinations. I am interested in Y. M. C. A. work, church work, boys' work being my specialty in both. Also I enjoy outdoor life,—camping, gardening, "hikes", nature study and almost all kinds of athletics, though no longer an active participant in anything except tennis. During the last year, I have become rather active in local politics. Any inquiring friends will find me at 51 Warren Avenue, town of Milton. Member: Harvard Teachers' Association, Milton Educational Society, National Geographic Society, Boston Young Men's Christian Association.

ALFRED THEODORE SHOHL

For four years have I toiled in the Harvard Medical School trying to be a doctor. Then the question arose, "Now that you are it, what are you going to do about it?" I am still trying to find an answer. Last year I spent in acquiring a marketable product, by spending a year as an interne of the Montreal General Hospital. This year I have been at Johns Hopkins, trying to do chemical research in children's diseases. "Ars longa". "Tempus fugit". I have written: The Reaction of Earthworms to Hydroxyl Ions (American Journal of Physicians, Vol. XXXIV, 1914).

I spent four years at the Harvard Medical School and hospital. The last two years I've been practising medicine. Member: Massachusetts Medical Society, East Boston Medical Society.

FREDERICK JOSEPH DE SLOOVERE

Upon graduation, in 1909, as of the class of 1910, I entered the Harvard Law School, graduating in June, 1912. Upon being admitted to practice of law in Massachusetts, I entered the employ of the law firm of Dickson and Knowles, with which firm I remained associated till November, 1914. I entered upon the practice of the law in my own behalf thereafter, having my office with the firm of Hoar and Dewey with whom I have been associated since November, 1914. About the first of the year 1915, I have been doing legal work also for the Massachusetts Bureau of Statistics, having charge of the compilation of the laws issued by that bureau.

THOMAS LAMBERT SMALL

[Mr. Small has nothing to add to his last report.]

LEWIS SMITH

From college I went West, to Montana, on signal work for the Northern Pacific Railway Company. After a few weeks there I returned to St. Paul, Minn., where I began work in the car shops of the same railroad as an electrician. During the winter of 1910-1911 I made five trips to Seattle as a train electrician. In April, 1911, I made another change, this time to the commercial department of the St. Paul Gas-Light Company, where I remained till January, 1912, when I had an opportunity to go to South America.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Until July, 1914, I remained in Rio de Janeiro in the employ of the Rio de Janeiro Tramway Light and Power Company, enjoying a life full of novel and valuable experiences. In October, 1914, I began work as assistant to the engineer of the Rumford Falls Power Company, the position I am holding today. In the meantime, on January 12, 1915, my marriage took place in St. Paul, Minn. And lastly a daughter was born on January 25, 1916. As I have travelled widely. I will mention the countries in which I have been in the last six years. They are: Brazil, Trinidad and Barbadoes (British West Indies), Panama, Columbia, Jamaica, and Cuba. My knowledge of these countries, added to that of most of Europe which I visited more than six years ago, gives me a conceited feeling of familiarity with the world. Member: American Institute of Electrical Engineers, National Electric Light Association.

PAUL SMITH

The first fifteen months after leaving Cambridge I spent in obtaining some preliminary experience in the lumber industry of the Pacific Northwest. During this time I "roughed it" at several mills and logging camps, and also found time for a trip from Seattle to Alaska with numerous interesting side-trips. I then returned to Kansas City, and, with that city as headquarters, spent the winter of 1911-1912 selling lumber and shingles in Missouri and Kansas. In March, 1912, I came to Moclips, Wash., where I have since been operating a shingle mill and logging camp. In January, 1915, I married Miss Helen Fowler, of Kansas City, Mo., and after spending the remainder of the winter in Southern California, we came to live in Moclips. Member: University Club, Tacoma, Wash., Tacoma Country Golf Club.

RALPH LEFTWICH SMITH

On leaving college in 1909 I entered my father's office (manufacturers and wholesale dealers in red cedar shingles). June 8th, 1914, I was married to Miss Harriet B. Tomlinson

REGINALD HEBER SMITH

During the first year after graduation I was in the Graduate School, doing some research work in American history under Professor Channing and also acting as assistant to Professor Winter in public speaking and assistant to Professor Coolidge in history. In the fall of 1911 I entered the Harvard Law School and studied there for three years. In the last year I was president of the Lowell Law Club. On my graduation, in 1914, I became counsel for the Boston Legal Aid Society and have held that position ever since. As the name implies, the work of this organization is to give legal assistance to poor persons who are unable to employ private attorneys. My duty is to exercise supervision over the entire work of the society. In November, 1914, I attended the conference of American legal aid societies held in Chicago and since that time I have been making a study of the work of legal aid societies in the United States. The first results of that study were published in connection with the fifteenth annual report of the Boston Legal Aid Society. I have written the Fourteenth Annual Report of the Boston Legal Aid Society, 1914; the Fifteenth Annual Report of the Boston Legal Aid Society, 1915; also articles: The Workmen's Compensation Act; a Real Domestic Relations Court; Wage Assignments: the Road to Bankruptcy (all in the Boston Advertiser); Oiling the Wheels of Justice (Boston Transcript). Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Boston City Club.

SIDNEY LUCIUS SMITH

I entered the employ of the Employers' Liability Insurance Company, in October, 1910, and was in their Boston office until March, 1912, when I went to Cleveland, Ohio, as their manager. I remained in Cleveland until March, 1913, when I went with the Globe Indemnity Company, as their general agent for the state of Connecticut, which position I now hold. I am, in addition, interested with Judge Joseph P. Tuttle and others in the Industrial Realty Title and Guaranty Company, a concern engaged in the general insurance and real estate business. Member: University Club of Hartford, Conn.

EDMUND LLOYD SONDER

The three years immediately following graduation I spent at the General Theological Seminary, New York, preparing for the priesthood in the Episcopal Church. On Low Sunday, March 30th, 1913, I was ordered deacon by the Rt. Rev. Philip Mercer Rhinelander (Harvard, 1891), D.D., S.T.D., Bishop of Pennsylvania, and on Michaelmas (September 29th) of the same year was advanced by him to the priesthood. A few days later I sailed from New York to take up missionary work in China, spending, however, six months in travel before reaching my destination. The following are among the places visited: Antwerp, Brussels, Metz, Lucerne, Como, Florence, Rome, Athens, Olympia, Constantinople (the most fascinating of all), Cairo, the Upper Nile, Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Nazareth, Damascus, Ceylon, Bombay, Delhi, Agra, Benares, Calcutta, Rangoon, Penang, Singapore, Hong Kong, Canton, Shanghai. It is difficult to estimate the life-long inspirational value of such a trip. I arrived in Hankow on Easter Eve, just in time to keep that great feast with friends, and completed my long journey to this place, Ichang, the next week. Two years have passed since then, spent partly here and partly in Wuchang. Much of my time has been occupied in trying to acquire this elusive but highly interesting language; but the needs of the mission field are so great and so inadequately met that the newcomer cannot escape responsibilities for long. My chief ones so far have been the chaplaincy of the Church General Hospital, Wuchang, for a large part of last winter, and the supervision of St. Joseph's Trade School, Ichang, where we are caring for over 100 of the most lovable little orphaned beggar-boys you ever saw. Most of them are absolutely destitute and half-starved when brought to the school, and they nearly eat their heads off the first few days! We teach them all a trade, so that they can go out into the world self-respecting, self-supporting Christian men, and it is wonderful to see their steady development physically, mentally, and spiritually. Recently another priest, Father Hayward (Yale, 1910), has come to take charge of the school, and I have been given other work, though I continue to live on at St. Joseph's for the present. Life here in China is of fascinating interest, and I wouldn't change work with anyone!

WILLIAM EMERY SOULE

I got my degree in 1909 "as of 1910" and spent the year 1909-1910 in the Graduate School. I intended to study for the Episcopal ministry, but as I was only twenty years old in 1910, I felt that I could profitably wait a few years before entering a course of study which would make heavy demands on a man's intellectual strength. I therefore spent the next year, 1910-1911 again in the Graduate School, doing some work looking towards future theological study, and paying a good deal of attention to music, primarily church music. During this year, I realized, however, that I ought to go home. My father was eighty-six years old—he is now one of the three surviving members of the class of 1845—and my mother, though much younger, had been an invalid for several years with no hope of improvement. There seemed to be an opening for a tutor at Exeter Academy; so in June, 1911, I pulled up stakes in Cambridge and went home. I put in two years as academy tutor, and then began to have longings to get at theological study. It was manifestly impossible for me to leave home and live in Cambridge again so in 1913-1914 I tried the experiment of commuting from Exeter to Cambridge nearly every day, attending lectures at the Episcopal Theological School, and at the same time being at home enough to look after things there. I completed one year's work in this way, but did not care to try it again. In 1914-1915 I made arrangements with the Bishop of New Hampshire to assist a certain nearby parson who is trying to solve the difficult problem of rural Christianity, and with him I learned more about some of the practical questions before the country minister than I should have ever learned in any divinity school. I also did some tutoring, though not as much as formerly. This year I have given up tutoring and am preparing an alumni directory and general catalogue for Exeter Academy. As I have about eight thousand names on my list, it will appear that I have a worse statistical job even than the worthy secretary of the class of 1910! I also assist in mathematics. I keep on studying towards theology, for I still look forward to the time when I can perhaps make a small contribution to the solution of the rural religious problem. For my avocations I am clerk of Christ Church Parish, Exeter, which I have twice represented in state conventions, organist of the local Masonic bodies, and family chauffeur. Member: Various Masonic bodies, American Guild of Organists, Harvard Club of Boston.

Upon completion of undergraduate work in June, 1909, I entered the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, from which I received a degree in June, 1911. In May, 1911, I took a position in the statistical department of

JOHN AUSTIN STARBUCK

The year following graduation I studied civil engineering in the Graduate School of Applied Science, Harvard University. In December, 1911, I entered the service of the Southern Pacific of Mexico at Empalme, Mexico. In March, 1912, I entered the service of Southern Pacific Company (Pacific System) at Los Angeles, Cal. In August, 1913, I was appointed to that company's three and one-half year course as student in railroading, embracing all phases of railroad work, upon which I am still engaged.

WILLIAM GEORGE STAUDENMAIER

I studied law, was admitted to the bar and am now practising in Rochester, N. Y. I was elected supervisor from the fifth ward, Rochester, on November 2, 1915. I was commissioned second lieutenant in Company A, Third Infantry, N. G. N. Y., stationed at Rochester, on November 24, 1915.

FREDERIC LINCOLN STEELE, JR.

Upon leaving college in June, 1911, I came immediately to Tamworth, N. H., and took up the management of a farm of 150 acres which had been in the family for about 20 years, but which had not, during that time, been actively worked. I specialize in apple raising. Besides bringing all the old trees on the place into bearing, I have set out nearly a thousand young trees, and am endeavoring to clean up a fresh piece of land and plant more trees every year. The young trees first set out (1912) are just coming into bearing, and promise well. My wife and I both find farm life healthy and to our liking.

GEORGE EUSTIS STEPHENSON

I was graduated from the Harvard Law School in the class of 1913. After a trip to Europe, I entered the city department of the Boston Transcript. In June, 1915, I was married to Louise Dixon, of Boston, and in November, I went to Washington as one of the staff correspondents of the paper, and have been there ever since. ROBERT MORRIS STEVENS

During the years 1910-1911 and 1912 up to October 6, I was connected with the office of ex-Mayor P. J. Moore, attorney at law, Pittsfield, Mass. I was married July 6, 1912, and was admitted to the bar on October 6, 1912. I opened offices in the City Savings Bank Building, in Pittsfield, where I am still located. In December, 1913, I was retained by the petitioners in proceedings brought to oust the licensing board of Pittsfield. Board was ousted in proceedings before the mayor, but reinstated by the Superior Court. In 1914, in the month of July, I was appointed by the Superior Court as senior counsel to defend Emma Chiendi and Fausto Naicisso, charged with murder in the first degree. These cases were tried in January of the following year. Since having been admitted to the bar, I have engaged in the general practice of law. In June, 1915, I enlarged my quarters, taking in an extra room and added numerous facilities, and later increased my office force. I have tried over two hundred cases since I entered into the practice of law. I have been asked, several times during the past six years, to become a candidate for various political offices, but have al-

The speakers during the evening ceremonies were Hon. William H. Lewis, Clement G. Morgan, and Professor Albert Bushnell Hart, and I presided. Member: Berkshire Bar Association.

ROBERT SPROULE STEVENS

After completing the college course in February, 1910, I spent much of that spring travelling in the West Indies. The following summer, I went to Europe, and returned to enter the Harvard Law School in the fall of 1910, from which I was graduated in 1913. In October, 1913, I passed the New York state bar examinations and entered the law offices of Rogers, Locke and Babcock, in Buffalo, N. Y. I remained with them for two years as managing clerk, and on February 1, 1916, formed a partnership with Eustace Reynolds, 1910, for the general practice of law, with offices at 505-506 Erie County Bank Building, Buffalo, N. After getting my degree in June, 1912, I returned to the trust company for a few months, but sailed for Europe in September of that year. After spending three months in England, France, Germany, Austria, and Italy, I went on East through Suez to Ceylon, India, Straits Settlements, the Chinese treaty ports, Manila and Japan, reaching home in May, 1913. I returned to the bond department of the Northwestern Trust Company that summer, and stayed with that company until January, 1915, when I opened an office to deal in bonds and mortgages. The first year after graduation from college I spent in the Graduate School. During 1911-12 I spent a most pleasant year teaching at the Danforth School, Framingham, Mass., a private school for younger boys. JAMES BATCHELLER SUMNER

I spent the summer of 1910 looking for a position as technical chemist. As nobody appeared to want me, I started working temporarily in my grandfather's cotton factory at Canton, at a salary of five dollars a week. In January, 1911, Professor Baxter telephoned to know if I would accept for a half-year a position to teach chemistry in Mount Allison University, Sackville, New Brunswick. I had hitherto felt rather disdainful of the profession of teaching, having felt a desire to get away from the class-room and become a business man. But the chance of increasing my salary from five dollars a week to five dollars a day, together with a desire to experience the winter sports of Canada, decided me to pack up and leave the very next day. I was very well received at Mount Allison, and was surprised by the remarkable esteem which the faculty of Mount Allison held for a Harvard degree. The courses which I gave were inorganic and organic chemistry, qualitative analysis, and physiology. As the man whose place I had temporarily taken assured me of his intention of returning the next fall, I left Sackville in June, and toured through Canada during the summer, spending most of the time on the Albertan prairie and in the Canadian Rockies. In the fall of 1911 I accepted an assistantship in chemistry at Worcester Polytechnic Institute. This I left in January, 1912, to study for a doctor's degree in biochemistry in the Harvard Graduate School under Professor Folin. I received my degree in June, 1914, and immediately set off for Europe in company with R. H. Patch, '10, and J. Wendt. Patch and I were beleaguered by the war in Switzerland, but escaped three weeks later through France. I reached home the last of August, and accepted the position, which I now hold, of assistant professor of biochemistry in Cornell University Medical School at Ithaca. In July, 1915, I travelled to Jackson, Miss., and then visited H. M. Potter, '10, at Houston, Tex. On July 20, I married Miss Bertha Ricketts, daughter of Professor R. S. Ricketts, of Jackson, Miss. Our present address is 510 Thurston Avenue, Ithaca, N. Y. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

JAMES TERRELL SWANN

After my graduation, and, on account of my eyes, that was not easy, I returned to the family plantation in Tennessee with the conviction that my father must be released from all worldly labors; but the old gentleman quickly let me understand that there was some difference between theory and practice. Crops had rotated his way since before the war and he guessed they would continue to so rotate. Concluding that I could not get as much work out of a "nigger" as could my experienced father, I hastened to Florida where I took charge of a large orange grove. Now oranges require and seem to thrive on theory so I fitted in fairly well, increasing the annual profit from 5 per cent. to 47 per cent. in one year. Though I have never told anyone yet, the price of oranges helped more than I like to admit. But then the boss should get the credit, if it rains, i. e., if he is to be blamed when it don't. Luck was with me again. I was ordered to Tampa, Fla., to look after a large water terminal project then under way, on which Uncle Sam was spending $2,000,000 for the benefit of—the people. This scheme involved me in politics,—red-hot politics, where councilmen wanted to be bribed and got real sore because I wasn't in that business. In fact these gentle grafters pretty nearly fixed me, but luck was again with me just as it was the day I got that 1910 diploma. Well I watched a large dredge belch forth sand, until it had made not only a harbor according to man's dictates but made available some 300 acres of valuable land right in the heart of our sun-kissed city. It's up to me right now to populate that land with business houses and to fill that mile or so of water front with ships;—but the war! the war! it hath played tricks with ships and ship rates. And along comes the Interstate Investment Company, a $1,000,000 corporation and buys all my playthings and after worrying me considerably finally induces me after some difficult persuasion to become its vice-president and general manager for the State of Florida. Member: Tampa Yacht and Country Club, Tampa Automobile and Golf Club, Ye Mystic Krewe of Gasparilla.

ALBERT MATTHEW SWEENEY

During the past six years I have been connected with the National Lamp Works of the General Electric Company, at Cleveland, Ohio. My work has been entirely experimental work in the lamp development laboratory. Nothing of particular interest to men not in the incandescent lamp business has happened. The work certainly has been interesting and has kept me extremely busy. That's why I'll have to write no more. Member: National Club of Cleveland, Ohio, Mela Recreational Club of Cleveland, Ohio.

ARTHUR SWEENEY

After graduating, I attended the Harvard Law School, receiving my degree in June, 1913. I was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in September, 1913, and since then have practised law in my father's office in Lawrence. Member: Merrimack Valley Country Club, Methuen, Harvard Club of Boston.

At the present writing I am still located in St. Louis as manager of the local office of the New England Equitable Insurance Company, working hard to gather together sufficient funds to be reasonably sure of reaching Cambridge next June by some more comfortable means than walking. Knowing that Jack Reed will be expected to write up his experiences, I guess I'd better stop and leave some space. Member: University Club, Harvard Club, both of St. Louis, Mo.

JOHN ELIOT THAYER, JR.

In the fall of 1910, I entered the Business School at Harvard College. I married Katherine Warren the following April and went abroad, travelling in Europe for six months. I went out on a ranch near Phoenix, Ariz., November, 1911. I returned to Lancaster, Mass., a year later, where I expect to be permanently settled. With the aid of my wife and two daughters I run a profitable apple and chicken farm. In June, 1915, through Robert W. Atkins, '10, I became interested in the sugar business and went into his office, where I am now working. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Somerset Club, Boston.

I am still camping in the city of my birth, Quincy, the home of three Presidents,—John Adams, John Quincy Adams, and Mike Milan, former president of the Bartenders' Union. Since leaving Harvard in 1910 I have learned two things in particular,—the joys of celibacy and the meaning of "Commencement". As to the latter my first enlightenment came at the high school in Wakefield, Mass., where, at the age of 20, I undertook to instruct the young minds of students of 18 and 19. They enjoyed it much. Between looking wise in public, joining the Y. M. C. A., and trying to fan the cigar smoke out of my clothes every morning at 8,

I found it a sacrifice. At the end of the year, with a reappointment in my pocket for self-protection, I sacrificed the sacrificed. I drifted into the Boston Globe and hit 'em for a job. They fell. I've been there five years, at home among Harvard men, of whom there are more than 20 on the editorial force. In that period I have covered almost everything from a W. C. T. U. sewing circle meeting up to the sob narrative of the Mohr murder trial. I was president of the Quincy High School Alumni Association last year. Among the things which I have done are: suffered from insomnia, bought some insurance, cut out the pipe, changed my noon eating-place and gained four pounds. Among the things I have not done are: killed a "boche", discovered an aid to painless puppy-birth or married an actress. Member: Quincy Tennis Club, Quincy, Mass.

After leaving college, Caleb Loring and I went around the world, which took us about a year. We spent about six months in Europe and then visited the "Holy Land" Egypt, India, the Philippines, China, Japan, and Honolulu. I then spent some time on the Pacific Coast. Returning home I joined the Guarantee Trust Company of New York, and worked in the bond department. I married Miss Susanna Grantland of Georgia on December 17, 1914, and have a son, Robert W. FLOYD WILLIAMS TOMKINS, JR.

Three more years of study, at the General Theological Seminary in New York, occupied me after graduation. My room-mate there, as in Cambridge, was E. L. Souder, 1910. Some studies in modern apologetics, under Dr. Dickinson S. Miller, especially appealed to me; and, after finishing my course, I was fortunate enough to secure a fellowship and remained to continue them for another year; Souder went to China that autumn. During this fourth year, having been ordained a deacon, I had charge of a young parish across the river at Ampere, N. J. Work at the seminary is supposed to consist of lectures and reading; but by necessity, because of the insufficient supply of clergy, nearly every student takes a laboratory course of this sort. It is instructive, but distracting, and rather hard upon the poor churches that supply material for the experimenting. At the end of the year, on Trinity Sunday, June 7, 1914, I was advanced to the priesthood by Bishop Rhinelander, '00, in Philadelphia, and by August had taken up the missionary work in the North Carolina mountains, in which I am still occupied. In the interval, however, a rather important event took place: I was married. I had been engaged for over a year, having met Miss Richey in New York. Valle Crucis, where we have settled, is a far call from Manhattan. We are fourteen miles from the railroad—fourteen miles of mountain and mud—and the said railroad is only a little narrow-gauge affair that runs to suit itself. Robinson Crusoe would be at home here; one has to do everything for himself. I have continued my studies along the lines of chopping wood (it takes some chopping to keep the stoves going in winter!), building a barn and making alterations in my house, not to mention such things as tables, wheelbarrows and fences, raising a “garden” (meaning vegetables), house-painting, hitching up a horse, cleaning chimneys, buying by mail, following a mountain trail, feeding a sow (my own), and making my own cuts of beef (when I can get it) with a saw and chisel. In spare moments I care for three mission chapels, and am chaplain of an industrial school for mountain girls. The work is greatly needed and takes my full time. I have not been away since my arrival—“right smart of a job”, as they say here; and it is full of interest.

FINDLEY McDOWELL TORRENCE

After leaving college, I entered newspaper work and was associated with papers at Dayton and Cincinnati until 1915, when I was employed to handle some publicity for the Ohio Association of Retail Lumber Dealers, and was subsequently elected secretary of the association. My life since leaving college has not been especially eventful, except for a few thrilling experiences while on my honeymoon trip in France just after war was declared. While in Lucerne we happened to find another war refugee from the class, Arthur Parsons. He was travelling as a tutor. We had not met since leaving college, and it was a very happy little reunion we had.

After graduating from Harvard in 1910, I studied and assisted in the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences at Cambridge for three years, holding the position of Austin teaching fellow in botany at Harvard for two years, and assistant in the same subject at both Harvard and Radcliffe for one year. I then came out here to the University of Michigan as an instructor in botany, and have remained here since then. I went to work in the Western National Bank, Oklahoma City, Okla. and am still here. My family and I have had good health, and all are happy.

JOHN TYLER

After graduation, I went to work in the Mutual National Bank, in Boston, starting in as messenger. In October, 1911, I was married to Margaret Carlton. We made our home in Brookline. Just after leaving college, I joined Troop B, of the Massachusetts Cavalry and saw active service at Lawrence, Mass., during the mill strikes. Shortly after returning home, I was taken sick, in the spring of 1912. In December of that year, my wife and I took a trip to the West Indies and were away three months. In June, 1913, I underwent a very severe operation and was therefore unable to attend the class triennial. In the winter of 1913-1914, I attended the short winter course of farming at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, at Amherst. Again my health failed and I could not finish the course. In the spring of 1914, I started a farm outside of Newburyport, but once again my health failed and I had to give it up in the fall of that year. That winter I spent in New Mexico, returning home in the spring of 1915. Since then I have been living in Weston, Mass., and have not been engaged in any business. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

WILLIAM THEODORE VAN NOSTRAND

From June, 1910, to March, 1911, I stayed around Cambridge and Boston trying to decide just what I wanted to do. In March, I went to Millinocket, Me., and started to learn the paper business in the mills of the Great Northern Paper Company. I worked there in various positions throughout the mill, sometimes at machines and sometimes in the office and chemical department. I worked there until July, 1913, when I was taken sick with rheumatic fever. In the mean time I went to Boston and married, and brought my wife back to Millinocket. That was January, 1912. In September, 1913, after over six weeks in bed with rheumatic fever, I removed to West Somerville, Mass., and as soon as I was able, which was not until January, 1914, I secured a position as salesman at Whitney Bros., Inc., wholesale paper dealers. In August, 1914, I was offered a position as manager of the bottling department of the Bunker Hill Breweries, and am still there. Member: Harvard Club of Boston. Newton Boat Club, Newton, Mass.

LAURIZ VOLD

Simple is my history for the past six years. After graduating in 1910 I entered the Harvard Law School, securing there the degree of LL.B. in 1913 and the degree of S.J.D. in 1914. Since that time, I have been holding a position on the law faculty of the University of North Dakota, and was appointed assistant professor at the end of the last college year. To satisfy the curiosity of anyone who may be interested, I may add to this simple history a few personal reminiscences. Graduating in 1910, full of assurance, but without visible means of support, I turned to university guiding, to fill in the summer. That autumn I received an appointment as assistant in economics under Professor Taussig, which, with the library position at Warren House, made possible my entry in the Harvard Law School. That winter, in December, 1910, Robert, our first son, was born, under conditions too trying to be here recounted. In June, 1911, Mrs. Vold was barely sufficiently recovered to accompany me with the child to Oak Bluffs, Marthas Vineyard, Mass., where we spent that and the following two summers. Mrs. Vold recuperated and I ran the railway and steamboat ticket office at that summer resort. We were, during these years, as I had been before, striving to earn enough to pay expenses as we went along. Though the pace set for work in the Harvard Law School was hard, I took time for outside work until the year in which I became a candidate for the doctorate in law, when I borrowed, in order to devote all available time to the law studies. Except for a brief period of suspense after the final graduation in 1914, before securing the appointment at North Dakota, our life has been one of comparative uneventfulness. The working time has been fully occupied in the effort to get ready properly to give legal instruction, and what leisure there has been has been spent devising ways and means to build a suitable house for a home for the family. Member: Commercial Club, Grand Forks, N. D., Fortnightly Club, Grand Forks, N. D.

ALEX VONNEGUT

Two years after graduation I spent with the New York Bureau of Municipal Research. In May, 1911, I went to Germany with an assistant of the bureau, to study and report on municipal governments in Germany with special reference to accounting methods, police administration, housing and public welfare institutions. From May, 1913, to May, 1914. I was one of the assistant secretaries of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. In that month I received an offer to work for the N. W. Halsey and Company organization, an experience which has left me with profound respect for that organization and profound sympathy for the hundreds of young men who seek to earn a living by selling securities in Boston. In June, 1915, I married Raye Dryer of Indianapolis, and since then have been secretary-treasurer of McCoy-Howe Company, a manufacturing pharmaceutical house in Indianapolis.

JESSE EDWIN WAID

I spent the first year after graduation tutoring in Newport and abroad. During the next three years I attended the Harvard Law School, graduating in 1914. In July of that year I rowed at the English Henley on the eight sent over by the Union Boat Club of Boston. I returned to America immediately after the regatta and commenced serving a clerkship in the law offices of Cary and Carroll in New York City. I was married in May, 1915, and was admitted to the New York bar later in the same year. I am now practising law in New York City and living in Plainfield, N. J. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Lawyers' Club of New York.

MERRILL WAIDE

After I graduated in June, 1910, I left for Europe immediately. There I spent a few weeks in England, France, and Germany; attended the Passion Play at Oberammergau; went down through the Tyrol to Italy and the Mediterranean, where I spent the fall. In November, 1910, after returning from Europe, I went out to Wyoming for a short trip, as I supposed. The wonderful independence of the life and the tremendous opportunities that the Northwest presents to Eastern men appealed to me so strongly that I bought the Bone Valley Ranch, at Van Tassel, Wyo., and spent nine months of the year for four years in ranching. By the spring of 1915, I had become very homesick for the East. Still a lover of the country, I removed East to my father's place in Virginia, and there enjoy the country life as much as I did out West, but without the disadvantage of being so far away from the Eastern cities and Cambridge. In October, 1915, I took charge of the mathematics department at the Richmond High School, which duties, together with the many problems of the farm, fill the life of a very simple country gentleman.

WARREN FRANKLIN WALKER

From 1910 to 1913 I attended the Graduate School of Applied Science (Harvard). January to July, 1914, I was assistant superintendent (at Leadwood, Missouri) of the St. Joseph Lead Company. July, 1914, to the present, I have been chief geologist for Kyshtin Mining Works Company, Russia. April 2, 1915, I was married at London, England.

CLYDE CARMAN WALLACE

After graduation, I spent about a year at Buffalo, N. Y., as a machinery salesman. Thence I went to Los Angeles, Cal., for three years, in the real-estate business. From Los Angeles I went to Philadelphia, where I was employed by the State Charities Department in special mental hygiene work, culminating in an exhibit in the city hall, Philadelphia. My next occupation was as a bond salesman for a New York firm. I covered the Hudson River territory for two years. I then secured the job of manager of the Equitable Personal Loan Company, at No. 3, East 14th St., an organization capitalized at $100,000, operating on a similar basis to the well-known Provident Loan Society. Member: Freysort Club, Lodge No. 1253, B. P. O. E., Bayview Tennis Club of Freeport, Massapequa Golf Club at Massapequa.

MILES WAMBAUGH

I spent 1909 to 1910 in the Graduate School, studying history. In the summer of 1910 for three months I was assistant to Dr. Grenfell as man-of-all-work in Labrador and Newfoundland. I entered the Law School in 1910. In the summer of 1911 I went ranching in Montana. I re-entered the Law School in 1912 and was graduated in 1914. I entered the law office of Brandeis, Dunbar and Nutter, Boston.

THORNTON KIRKLAND WARE

The first year following my graduation, I spent at the Harvard Law School. The next two years I attended the Boston University Law School from which I was graduated in June, 1913. On July 1, 1913, I passed my examinations for admission as a practising attorney to the Massachusetts bar; and on July 8 I sailed from Boston with Cameron Macleod, '10, bound for Liverpool. We landed at Queen'stown, but failing to find any there, we spent the next five weeks playing golf on that island and in Scotland. After travelling through England, France, Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Belgium and London, I sailed for Boston from Liverpool on September 30 with the fog-horn tied down (which, by the way, they were unable to untie till we reached the East Boston docks at midnight on October 9). Immediately upon my return, I entered the law offices of Charles M. Thayer, '89, in Worcester, where I remained a little less than a year. In September, 1914, I took up my residence in Fitchburg, and on October 1, 1914, was taken into law partnership by my father Charles E. Ware, '76. Since my graduation from the Law School I have been interested, so far as time from my business would allow, in various movements towards the improvement of living conditions and the general social atmosphere of the two communities in which I have lived. For example, in Worcester, I took part in an eleven-day campaign to raise $150,000 for a new Boys' Club building and endowment fund, which resulted in the collection or pledging of over $170,000. In Fitchburg, in May, 1915, I was general manager of the Clean-Up and Paint-Up Campaign, which resulted in our city's being among the foremost fifteen, of all towns and cities in New England who entered the contest, so far as the results of the campaign could show. In December, 1915, I was chairman of our second Community Christmas Tree which was erected at the head of our principal street a week before Christmas. Community singing by various organizations took place on Christmas Eve, and during the next week the tree was lighted every night, notwithstanding the fact that the wiring and decorations were forced to withstand the terrific wind-storm and blizzard of the day after Christmas. In January, 1916, I had general charge of the sale and distribution of tickets and the seating of the members and guests at our annual Board of Trade and Merchants' Association banquet. Over 500 ladies and gentlemen attended, and after the dinner and speeches, the floor of the State Armory, where the function was held, was cleared and dancing was in order till one o'clock. I am at present chairman of the troop committee (an advisory board of three older men) of the Boy Scout movement in Fitchburg. I am also on the house committee of The Fay Club and as such, chairman of the entertainment committee. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Worcester Club, Worcester, Mass., The Fay Club, Fitchburg, Mass.

GEORGE LEWIS WARREN

In August, 1908, while still at college I was employed by the Associated Charities of Boston to undertake the work of helping homeless men or tramps. Working part time while in college on this new development of the work of the Associated Charities I organized a joint department of the Associated Charities and the Boston Provident Association for Helping Homeless Men about the time of graduation in 1910. I then served as paid executive secretary of this department until November 1, 1912. In connection with this work and while still in college I with H. A. Sexton, formerly of the class of 1910, dressed up as tramps and slept for three nights in the cheap lodging houses of Boston where tramps do congregate and later reported our findings to the department. This stunt helped greatly in arousing interest in the problem. In November, 1912, I became a district secretary of the Boston Associated Charities in Charlestown which then had two districts. One year later I took total charge of both districts. During the past year I served as secretary of the Monday Evening Club and for the past five years I have been a member of the board of directors of the John Howard Industrial Home in Boston, an institution for helping discharged prisoners. At the National Conference of Charities and Corrections in Baltimore, in May, 1915, I was appointed a member of the committee on unemployment which has drawn up a programme for discussion at the meeting this year in Indianapolis. On April 1, 1916, I came to Bridgeport, Conn., as general secretary of the Bridgeport Charity Organization Society. My recreation during summer vacations has been camping in the woods of Canada, the White Mountains, and the Adirondacks. I served three years as a private in Battery A, M. V. M. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Bridgeport University Club, Catholic Alumni Sodality, Boston.

MINTON MACHADO WARREN

In 1911, I was construction foreman on big dam across the Mississippi River, at Keokuk, Iowa; in 1912, I took M. C. E. under George F. Swain at Harvard Graduate School of Engineering; in 1912-1914, I was assistant to chief hydraulic engineer, Stone and Webster Engineering Corporation, Boston; May to July, 1913, as chief engineer, I designed and built a dam for Devasego Falls development, Schoharie Creek, N. Y.; July to September, 1913, I was in charge of investigation and design of four proposed developments on the Housatonic River, Conn.; 1915, I was superintendent of Lake Ariguanabo Company, San Antonio de las Baños, Cuba,—a company supplying the town with electricity and water. Only one other American was in town. I have written: Penstock and Surge Tank Problems (Transactions American Society of Civil Engineers, 1915).

RICHARD WARREN

In October of our graduating year I secured a position in the office of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company and remained with this concern until May, 1912, when I made up my mind that I had had enough of inside work, and decided to enter the lumber business. I started in at the retail yard of Blacker and Shepard on Albany Street, Boston, and after two months transferred to the Dix Lumber Company of North Cambridge. While here I took a four weeks' vacation, and, with my father, went on one of the White Star Line cruises, on the S. S. Megantic, to the West Indies, Panama, Trinidad and the northern coast of South America. The Panama Canal was at that time nearly completed, yet no water had been let in, so that we were able to realize more fully the magnitude of that great work. In January, 1914, I changed from the retail end of the lumber business to the wholesale end, accepting a position with the Woodstock Lumber Company of Boston. My first job was to spend three months at a small operation in southern Quebec, where practically no English is spoken and where I could put to practical use what little I remembered from French 2a. Since then I have been assigned to jobs concerning the purchase and manufacture of lumber in all parts of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New Brunswick and Quebec. I was married on April 24, 1915, to Miss Edith Smith. For several months afterward I was on the road selling lumber, but am now back on the purchasing end and at the present time am making another three or four weeks' trip through Quebec. Member: Fales Club, Waltham, Mass.

EUGENE AUGUSTUS HOFFMAN WATSON

Until June, 1912, I remained at Cambridge, finishing up college work, and taking a half-year course in the Business School. After the summer's vacation I entered the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company's employ at 22 William St., New York, N. Y. I remained at that office from November 4, 1912, to March 24, 1913, when I became assistant manager at the company's Fifth Avenue branch at 475 Fifth Avenue, where I remained until July 15, 1914. At that time I was taken sick with pleurisy and spent the summer at Little Moose Lake in the Adirondacks. Not being permitted by my physician to work the following winter, I spent the time between October 15, 1914, and March 1, 1915, at Yama Farms at Napanoch, N. Y., a delightful spot. On March 8, I started on a trip to San Diego and San Francisco with my mother and sister, intending to spend a month or so with my brother, who was stationed at that time with his regiment in Yellowstone Park. Our plans were changed, however, and on April 13, we set sail for Honolulu, intending to return after a ten days' visit. We found the place so fascinating and so healthful that we stayed there until September 8, returning home slowly from San Francisco via Portland, Minneapolis and Chicago. On November 15, I resumed work at The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, this time at the downtown office, my place up town having been filled during my absence. I have not married, though many of my classmates have. Here in New York we make great use of the Harvard Club, finding many of our friends there at all times, and occasionally having a splendid class dinner such as that given at the club on November 5 of last year. Member: Harvard Club of New York, Automobile Club of America, American Yacht Club, Rye, N. Y., Society of Mayflower Descendants in the State of New York, Huguenot Society of America.

HATHAWAY WATSON

On being married the day after commencement, I left for a honeymoon of four weeks on the Pacific coast. On August 1, 1910, I started working as clerk for Estabrook and Company, at 715 The Rookery, Chicago, where I still remain, although now in the capacity of assistant manager. Coming to a city 1000 miles away from the familiar surroundings of Boston, knowing no one except Mac King and Henry Hooper, social friendships were some time in developing, but now seem to be on a firm footing. I have grown very fond of Chicago and its people and expect to spend the rest of my life in this vicinity. My children have both been born here, my daughter, the class baby, in May, 1911, and my son in July, 1913. The boy is entered in a school which should place him in college in time to graduate on my twenty-fifth reunion. So many of my classmates pass through Chicago that I have been enabled to keep in close touch with the big events, though necessarily many minor ones escape me, much to my regret. As chairman of the photograph committee I still have some albums for sale and shall be glad to receive any orders. Member: University Club of Chicago, Indian Hill (Golf) Club, Harvard Club of Chicago.

LESTER WATSON

After graduating in June, 1910, I went to Europe and spent the summer touring by automobile through Germany, Austria, the Dolomites, Switzerland, France, and England. On October 1, 1910, I went to work for Estabrook and Company, bankers, of Boston. On March 20, 1911, I was married to Katharyn Hoyt, of Brookline, sister of R. F. Hoyt, '10. Katharyn Watson was born February 5, 1912. With the exception of occasional motor trips I have stuck pretty closely to work and have found no time for much outside recreation. In the fall of 1914 when business was practically suspended on account of the war, I put in some time, along with C. C. Little, R. F. Hoyt and E. K. Merri-hew in coaching the freshmen in track work. I was assigned to Smith Hall and was glad to have them win the first interdormitory meet. It was a great pleasure to get out to Cambridge and work with those men and it did me much good. I have indulged slightly in politics and am a member of the Brookline Republican town committee. About the only outside interest I have had aside from fooling a little with wireless telegraphy has been my interest in fire departments and fire extinguishers which I have kept up with great interest, somewhat to the distress of my family. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

DAVID LOCKE WEBSTER

Since graduation I have been teaching physics and mathematics at Harvard and doing research work in physics. For the first two years and again the fourth I taught calculus and mechanics, assisting Professor Huntington, and since the autumn of 1912 I have conducted laboratory and conference sections in physics C under Professor Sabine. In 1914 I held a temporary position teaching electron theory. My research work for the first four years and a half consisted of experiments on light and theoretical work on light, X-rays, heat radiation and the constitution of the ether. In the autumn of 1914 I became especially interested in X-rays, following the brilliant discoveries of Professor Bragg, and have since then been doing theoretical and experimental work along that line. In June, 1912, I married Miss Anna C. Woodman, of Cambridge, and we spent the rest of the summer cruising in my 20-foot cat-boat between Cotuit, Mass., and Campobello, N.B. Our first child, Nancy, was born in June, 1913, and our second, Helen, in March, 1915. We are now living in Cambridge in winter, and spend our summers in Menemsha, Mass., where we moved after two seasons at Cotuit. I have written scientific articles: On an Electromagnetic Theory of Gravitation; On the Existence and Properties of the Ether; The Theory of the Scattering of X-Rays; The Dimensions of Electric and Magnetic Units; The Effect of Pressure on the Absorption of Light in Bromine and Chlorine, and its Theoretical Significance; Planck's Radiation Formula and the Classical Electrodynamics; The Intensities of X-Ray Spectra; The X-Ray Spectra of Tungsten at Constant Potentials; The Emission Quanta of Characteristic X-Rays. Non-Scientific: Around Cape Cod in a 13-foot Schooner. Member: American Association for the Advancement of Science, American Physical Society, Cambridge Boat Club.

GORDON BOIT WELLMAN

Directly after leaving college I went abroad and spent the summer travelling in England and northern Scotland. In the latter place considerable ornithological work was done. In the autumn I matriculated at Edinburgh University and at New College, Edinburgh. I studied here through the winter. In the following spring I sailed for Egypt and made my way up the Nile some six hundred miles, working again at the birds. The following months were spent in Europe, two months in Italy and considerable time in northern Europe and again in England. September, 1913, I entered Andover Theological Seminary, where I am just completing the three years' course for the S.T.B. degree. I have written: The Birds of the Middlesex Fells (Malden Historical Register, 1914). Member: Malden University Club, American Ornithological Union.

CONSTANT WENDELL

I left college at the end of my sophomore year and went to work in June, 1908, for Blodget, Merritt and Company, a bond house in Boston. On February 1, 1909, I went abroad as a companion to a young boy and travelled through Italy, Switzerland, Germany, France and England, returning home the first of April. I then worked eight months as an assistant walking boss for the Holbrook, Cabot and Rollins Corporation, while they were handling the polo field and race track at Piping Rock, Long Island. After this I worked a few months in the Boston office of Chisolm and Chapman, stock brokers, and in November, 1910, I was assistant book-keeper in the Lincoln Trust Company, which is now a part of the International Trust Company, Boston. The first of August, 1911, I decided to learn cotton manufacturing and worked for two years as a mill hand in the Boston Manufacturing Company, at Waltham, Mass. I can now turn the baled cotton into fine thread and I am pretty efficient as a weaver. My next duty was to work up some business in colored cottons and cotton yarn for this mill; but after travelling about the country for two years it became evident that there was not much of this business to be had; so I decided to change again, and in February, 1915, I got a job in the machine shop of Gray and Davis Company, Cambridge, Mass. They were doing a great deal of "overtime" and this work on top of the two years in the mill from which I had not fully recovered proved too much for my nerves, so that I was forced to quit and have not been able to do any work since June, 1915. I do not know what I will attempt next, but I am thinking rather seriously of applying for the position of instructor in Harvard's new course on "How to be an office boy!"

EDMUND CHARLES WENDT

I attended the Harvard Law School from 1910 to 1911, and the Columbia Law School from 1911 to 1913, receiving the degree of LL.B. from the latter in June, 1913. I passed the New York state bar examination in June, 1913, and was admitted to the bar in November of the same year. I went abroad in December, 1913, and remained in Europe until September, 1914, spending over seven months of this time in Italy. Since my return to New York, in September, 1914, I have been practising law. Member: Harvard Club of New York.

Upon graduation from college I spent the following summer and autumn hunting and travelling through the West and Mexico. On January 1, 1911, I went to work for F. S. Moseley and Co., note-brokers. I worked for them until May 1, 1913, when I went to work for Tucker, Anthony and Co., bankers and brokers, with whom I am now associated, having been admitted to the firm on April 1, 1916. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Harvard Club of New York, Tennis and Racquet Club, Boston, Somerset Club, Boston, The Country Club, Brookline.

JOHN B. E. WHEELER

After the close of college in 1910, I took a four months' trip through Europe, visiting in the course of my travels Gibraltar, Italy, Austria, Switzerland, France, England, and Scotland. Upon my return to Boston, in the fall of 1910, I entered the investment business and sold bonds and other securities for James A. Hutchinson and Company until March, 1913, when, after a hurried trip to California, on account of sickness in my family, I became assistant treasurer and later treasurer in the Asahel Wheeler Company, of Boston. In April, 1912, I married Kathleen Page, and have resided in Brookline, Boston, and Kendal Green, where I now am settled, I hope, for some time to come.

WILLIAM HARRISON WHEELER

For three years after 1910, I attended the Harvard Law School, receiving my degree in 1913. In the same year I was admitted to the bar, and since then have been with the firm of Brooks, Vaughan and French, in Boston, Mass. I was appointed bail commissioner in Suffolk County in 1915. I attended the Business Men's Camp at Plattsburg during August, 1915. Member: Harvard Club of Boston, Charity Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Cambridge, Mass., Cambridge Lodge, B. P. O. E., Cambridge, Mass.

BARTON WHEELWRIGHT

I entered the employ of the Grand Trunk Railway in July, 1911, as draughtsman on the Toronto grade separation. I was employed here until March, 1912, when I was transferred to the chief engineer's office, Montreal, on signal work. In May, 1912, I was sent to Valparaiso, Ind., as inspector on large block signal installation. In April, 1913, I was again transferred back to Montreal as signal inspector in the signal engineer's office. I was given temporary charge of signal work on the Grand Trunk, in October, 1914, when Mr. R. F. Morkill, signal engineer, was granted leave of absence to enlist for military service with the first Canadian expeditionary force. In December, 1914, I was appointed assistant signal engineer, and in January, 1916, I was appointed acting signal engineer of the Grand Trunk Railway System. I have written: Victoria Jubilee Bridge Protection (The Signal Engineer, February, 1915), New Automatic Signals on the Grand Trunk (The Railway Signal Engineer, January, 1916). Member: Railway Signal Association.

JOSIAH WHEELWRIGHT

During part of the summer after graduation, I made a six weeks' trip through Europe by automobile, being joined part of the time by F. S. Blanchard and J. T. Nightingale of our class. On arriving home in the fall I went to work in the shop of the Blake Electrical Company, to learn the business of motor winding and electrical contracting. About six months later, with two other men from the above company, I started a new firm doing the same kind of business,—the Amberman Electric Company, and have been with them ever since. With the exception of a couple of camping trips in the Adirondacks, the only vacation of any length which I have taken was in the fall of 1915, when I went to California for six weeks. My route took me through the Canadian Rockies, down the coast, and back

HENRY ALVERADO WHITE

After completing my freshman year at college, I decided that I would not return and finish my course. Therefore in the fall of 1907, I entered the Tufts College Medical School. After finishing my course there, I received an appointment as interne at the Massachusetts State Hospital at Tewksbury, where I stayed from March 1, 1911, to March 1, 1912. When my hospital service was finished, I took a month's vacation and then yielding to the solicitations of my parents, opened an office in Taunton, April 1, 1912, at 139 Bay Street. October 1, 1914, I bought a house on 17 West Britannia Street, where I am now located. On April 22, 1913, I married Miss Zora C. Wheeler, of this city, and at the present time we have one child, a boy, Gordon Thayer White, born December 19, 1915. During my first year in practice I was elected a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society and the Taunton Doctors' Club. I also belong to the Taunton Lodge of Elks, the Manchester Unity and the Home Benefit Association. Since May, 1914, I have been examiner, in Taunton, for the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company. Member: Massachusetts Medical Society, Taunton Doctors' Club.

I spent a year working on various commercial problems and then went with the Barrett Company, manufacturers of coal-tar products, beginning at their factory in Everett. At the present time I am located at their Boston office, 35 Wendell Street, as manager of the manufacturing department, also manager of purchasing. In 1914 I took a trip abroad, visiting England, Holland, Belgium and France, sailing back from Cherbourg just before the war broke out. I was married in Ede, Holland, June 18, 1914.

BREWER GODDARD WHITMORE

1910 to 1911, I was instructor in English at Syracuse; 1911 to 1912, assistant principal at the Wright University School, Mount Morris Park West, New York City, and graduate student at Columbia University; 1912 to 1913, instructor in English at Syracuse University; 1913 to 1916, assistant instructor and graduate student in English at Harvard. Member: Harvard Club of New York.

BYAM WHITNEY

After graduation I attended the Law School at intervals for one year. At the end of this period I decided, that, inasmuch as there was in Boston one lawyer for every nine persons, the rights of our citizens in this city were amply safeguarded, and that without doubt my duty lay in other lines of altruistic endeavor. Therefore, after taking a short four months' vacation, I entered a small investment house in Boston, in the capacity of "shacker" and general utility-man. After a few months of this highly exhilarating treatment, I entered the employ of William A. Read and Company, in November, 1912. On May 10, 1913, I married Madeleine Turner Brewer of Milton, in which town I have lived since. My career in William A. Read and Company's office was for the most part in the capacity of bond-salesman, at which art I became more or less proficient, with the accent on the penult, favoring many of Boston's investors with calls. In the fall of 1914, shortly after the Kaiser threw his helmet into the ring in various parts of the world, Mrs. Whitney and I took a trip to California. While there we visited Horace L. Hill, Jr., at his ranch in Los Altos. Hill is engaged in raising enormous herds of Russian Wolf Hounds which he sells to the élite of San Francisco at $15 per pound. While in San Diego I discovered Charles B. Nordhoff, perhaps better known to some of his friends as "Punch," in a clay-pit, even as the prehistoric Aztec, modelling images, tiles and vases which he sells to the Santa Fe Railway at prodigious profits. In the fall of 1915 I left Read and Company and became associated with Tucker, Anthony and Company, at 53 State Street, Boston, as purveyor of bonds. The Big Policeman from Chestnut Hill, alias Pancho West alias Bantam Boy is also very much and seriously on the job in the same office. The next event of importance in my life which I see on the horizon is class-day week, 1916, from which I hope, at least, to partially recover (with apologies to Chester Noyes Greenough for the "split infinitive") in time for the decennial. Member: Exchange Club, Boston.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

HENRY LAWRENCE WHITNEY

In the autumn of 1910, I went back to the university (Harvard) to study landscape architecture, which I continued for four years, receiving a degree of M.L.A., June, 1914. During the summers of 1912 and 1913 I went to Europe, where I travelled extensively. As I look back upon it now, but at that time (August, 1913,) gave it little thought, a statement was made by some English friends of mine with whom I was stopping, that they dared not go to the east coast for their summer vacation because they feared the German aeroplanes might visit England. This was a year before the war. Last year a German aeroplane passed over their house. In the winter of 1913, I was fortunate enough to go on a tour to the Panama Canal and the West Indies, besides touching at South America. The canal at that time had no water in it. Of the natural things on this trip that impressed me most were, the luxuriant tropical growth and a snow-capped mountain that rose out of the mist on the shores of South America, less than twenty degrees from the equator. Since the autumn of 1914, I have been employed by the Boston City Planning Board, first as landscape architect; second as assistant investigator in city planning for the survey of East Boston and the North End, which the Planning Board is now carrying on and will soon publish in reports. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

LYMAN FISKE WHITNEY

From June, 1910, to June, 1912, I was a student at the Graduate School of Applied Science at Harvard University and acted as proctor in Claverly for a larger part of this time. June, 1912, to October 1912, I spent this summer travelling abroad with Lawrence I. Grinnell, '12. During this trip we visited the large cities in England, Belgium, Germany, France, Austria, and Switzerland, and we spent three weeks of our time climbing in the Alps. October, 1912 to November, 1913: In October, I entered the employ of Stone and Webster and was a member of the statistical department until November, 1913, when I was transferred to the Key West Electric Company and stationed at Key West, Fla. November, 1913, to Nov. 1914, still in the employ of the Key West Electric Company, in the capacity of solicitor. December, 1914, to December, 1915: During November, 1914, I was transferred to Calumet, Mich., where I was associated with the Houghton County Electric Light Company. In December, 1915, I returned to Boston, to take up my duties in the home office of Stone and Webster. Member: Harvard Club of Boston.

JOSEPH CLARK WILBY

On my graduation I had an offer of a very promising position in one of Cincinnati's leading business houses; but after consideration decided to follow my original inclination to practise law. I studied in the law school of the University of Cincinnati, taking my degree of LL.B. in 1913, and being admitted to the Ohio bar the same year. I am now in practice with my father, Charles B. Wilby, '70.

EDWARD WILDER

This is my first attempt at giving an account of my life since leaving college. In fact until I received the blank to fill out I had hardly conceived of such a proceeding on the part of myself. If, a few years ago, I had foreseen such an effort was in store for me, I doubtless should have shaped, or attempted to shape, some of the events of the last few years differently. In writing the history of what I have been doing for the last six years, I am confronted by the fact that this period has been one of smooth sailing with very little of the storm and stress. I often look back on these half dozen years with regrets that I did not vary the monotony by a change of occupation or at least a change of residence. I have been teaching mathematics in the Dover High School, Dover, N. J., since my year of graduation. I have enjoyed this work very much and all my surroundings have been of the pleasantest. Each year of practice has added to my ability to cope with the different problems of the pupils' lives and my faculties have been broadened in my attempts to satisfactorily adjust myself to the responsibilities involved. For the last five years I have owned a motorcycle and have explored thousands of miles of highways in the states of New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, and Massachusetts. My summer vacations have been devoted to reading and motoring in the states of New York and Massachusetts. Member: New Jersey State Teachers Association, Morris County Teachers Association, Dover Literary Society, Dover, N. J., Association of Mathematics Teachers of New Jersey.

HENRY LONGFELLOW WILDER

In June, 1910, the week following commencement, I entered the employ of the John Morrell Company, pork packers, 75 Commercial Street, Boston, Mass. In September, 1911, I returned to Cambridge to enter the Graduate School of Business Administration and at the same time went to work in the office of the University Dining Halls, doing general accounting work. My work in the Business School was in scientific management, manufacturing and accounting. In March, 1913, I left Cambridge and went to Philadelphia as a traffic student in the traffic department of the long distance lines department of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. About the first of June, 1913, I was transferred to Cincinnati, Ohio, as assistant traffic chief. In the middle of December, 1913, I was again transferred, this time to New York, to the office of the general superintendent of traffic, as a traffic supervising assistant. I remained in New York until July, 1915, when I was again sent to Cincinnati as assistant traffic chief.

ROBERT HENRY WILDER

After leaving Harvard, back in the antediluvian age of the class of 1910, I attended Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y., and obtained what is known as a technical education. For the benefit of the skeptical I will say that I was graduated with full honors. September, 1910, found me in Ponce, Porto Rico, employed by Stone and Webster, of Boston, on the street railway. At first I was merely master mechanic, chief greaser, and general fixer; but later, after I had grasped enough of the Spanish Indian to swear effectively, I was given entire charge of the road—under proper supervision, of course. I returned to the States in 1912. The Pearson Engineering Corporation, Ltd., with vast interests in Spain, Mexico and South America, was then in the height of its glory, and I was lucky enough to obtain a position with them in an inspecting engineering capacity. This work took me around the country considerably. Between times I installed a new-fangled set of equipment on some specially constructed cars at the Brill works, Philadelphia. Later I was sent to England, France and Spain. It was in Barcelona, Spain, that disaster overtook me. My salary was not excessive; perhaps it was the war which financially embarrassed the company; anyway I came back to the States. Back in the States I looked for another position, but could not find any; so I looked for a job—nothing doing. I became desperate, willing to risk my life, and obtained a job on the New Haven Railroad. Nice job it was.—working nights in a round house currycombing locomotives. Next I “accepted a position” as blacksmith’s helper and had nothing to do but swing a twelve-pound sledge ten hours a day. Sometimes I got time and a half for doing it evenings when a rush was on. I rather enjoyed the evening work, for that kept me away so much longer from my bed over the corner saloon. Of course, I don’t mean to convey that I was doing this purely for the love of it, for the truth is that I couldn’t find any other place where they’d agree to give me real money to have me hanging around. Finally, however, Wm. J. Wilgus, consulting engineer, 165 Broadway, New York, took a long chance. He let me assist in the valuation of the mechanical and electrical equipment of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, both in the mines and on the surface; therefore, during the fall of 1915, I was in—literally in—the anthracite region near Pittston, Pa. Later I was in his New York office where I obtained considerable knowledge of appraisal work, and when that job neared completion I secured my present place,—that of an appraiser with Gunn, Richards and Company., certified public accountants, 43 Wall Street, New York, who agreed to support me in comfort as well as to pay me a salary, and all they wanted in return was for me to deliver the goods. The work is an appraisal of the Remington Arms Company’s plants and equipment. When it is completed, as it will be shortly. I shall be “on the town” again in New York. Therefore anyone knowing of a place which will pay enough to allow me to contribute to class enterprises and at the same time permit me to eat regularly, will kindly forward such information to my permanent address. No time limit to this,—and no joking either! Member: Bay State Lodge (Masonic) Montague, Mass.

CLASS OF 1910 — THIRD REPORT

HERBERT WING, JR.

During the six years—or in my case, seven, since I took my degree in 1909 as of 1910—since graduation, I have been occupied chiefly with graduate work and teaching. In 1909-1910 I taught Latin and science in the Wilmington, Mass., High School. That year two important events occurred: I received an election to Phi Beta Kappa; and in January, 1910, I had to stop teaching because of illness. That autumn I went to the University of Wisconsin for graduate work in ancient history and the ancient languages. I was there from 1910 to 1912, and returned in 1914-1915 to complete work for the Ph.D. degree. The year 1912-1913 was spent very pleasantly as principal of the Kennett, Mo., High School. Among the subjects which fell to my lot to teach was agriculture. Upon my return to the East, I decided to study the following year, 1913-1914, in Europe. I left on July 12, 1913, for Hamburg, spent six weeks in Berlin, three in Italy, and about nine or ten months in and about Greece. One of the pleasant incidents of the year abroad was the trip through Asia Minor I took in March, 1914. I returned to America in June, 1914. During the present year I have been teaching Greek and ancient history at Dickinson College and now hold the associate professorship of Greek here. Member: American Historical Association, American Philological Association, South Bristol Farmers' Club, New Bedford, Mass., A. F. and A. M., New Bedford, Mass., Chapter.

ALBERT GREENE WINWARD

The year following my graduation I spent in enforced idleness. Overexertion weakened the ligaments in my left hip to such an extent that the joint could be slipped in and out with slight pressure. That winter I attended the agricultural courses in the extension department of Columbia University, which stimulated my early desires of being a dairy farmer. As soon as my physical condition would allow, I began operations on my grandmother's farm in Tiverton. In my grandfather's time the place had cut as much as two hundred tons of hay a year. When I began with it, it cut about twenty tons of very poor quality hay. The buildings in themselves were well built and in good condition; but they had been laid out with the idea only of selecting the most undesirable location for each one. In the fall of nineteen fourteen I erected a silo near the cow-barn which helped matters some. A tornado in June, nineteen fifteen, straightened things out for me in about one minute. The silo and four barns were levelled and scattered for two miles. What I had not had courage to do for myself, the Lord did for me. Now I have a respectable cow-barn, to hold forty cows, nearly completed, and it is being built in a desirable location. My grandfather raised the fastest trotter of his time—Jay Gould—on this farm. My ambition is to raise the world's record cow on it.

DAVID JULIUS WITMER

The summer after graduation I spent in California. The following October I returned to Cambridge, to enter the Graduate School of Architecture in order to continue the work I commenced in college. After two years' graduate work, relieved by a summer in an architect's office, and followed by a few months in Europe, I entered the Boston office of Mr. C. H. Blackall, architect. Fifteen months later I left this office to practise my profession. For a year and a half I made my headquarters in Winchester, Mass., planning and executing considerable work. In June, 1915, I returned to Los Angeles, Cal., my original home, where I am now permanently located. Member: Boston Architectural Club, Harvard Club of Boston, Amphion Club of Melrose, Mass..

CHARLES HOLMES WOLFE

I started work in the fall of 1910 in the New Kensington, Pa., plant of the Aluminum Company of America. From there I was transferred, in the spring of 1912, to the general offices of this company in Pittsburgh, where I was located for about two months. In June, I was sent to the New York branch office, arriving in New York in time to take part in the Associated Harvard Clubs' meeting. Let me digress to say that it was "some party". For a full account of my life in New York see Dole, Jones, Munroe et al., who frequent the Harvard Club. In the spring of 1915, I joined Squadron A. I spent one week in July at the First Brigade manoeuvres at Fishkill Plains, N. Y. I was transferred back to Pittsburgh about the first of this year, where I am now located with the same company. At the present time I am engaged in looking into the South American market. I have joined the Plattsburg Association of Pittsburgh and am looking forward to spending a profitable vacation in Plattsburg this summer. I hope that the members of the class of 1910 will meet there for another reunion. Vale. Member: University Club, Pittsburgh, Pa., Harvard Club of New York, Squadron A Club, New York.

EDWARD SHANNON WOLSTON

Shortly after graduation, I went to work for the United States Geological Survey and continued with them until the expiration of the field season in October, 1910. My work consisted in mapping the roads for the government's topographical maps and I was located first at Woodstock, Vt., and later at Canton, Me. In November of the same year I took a position with the New York, Westchester and Boston Railroad on electrification work and was located in Mt.

Vernon, N. Y. My work here had to do with the location of concrete foundations for the structural steel towers supporting the catenary system, and I was on similar work with the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, and later on with the Pennsylvania Railroad at the office of their consulting engineer in New York City. I was married in November, 1913, to Miss Theodora L. Perry, of Boston, Mass. At present I am located with the S. K. F. Ball Bearing Company, of New York City. I am with the engineering department and find the work very interesting, since many of the formulas governing the selection of bearing sizes for different installations are not as yet thoroughly established. The company is, at present, importing all their bearings from the factory in Sweden. Their own factory in Hartford, Conn., is now under progress, however, and the company plans to move there about May 1 of this year. They are doing a large business now and indications point to a successful establishment in Hartford. Member: Harvard Engineering Society of New York.

WILLARD DANA WOODBURY

I left college in the winter of 1908, and have been connected with the firm of Woodbury and Leighton Company since that time, in building construction work. The name Woodbury and Leighton Company has been changed to I. F. Woodbury and Sons Company, of which I am the treasurer.

STEWART CAMPBELL WOODWORTH

I went to the Law School in the fall of 1909 and was graduated from there with the class of 1912. That autumn I entered the law office of Brandeis, Dunbar and Nutter, of Boston. One year later I began work with Messrs Fish, Richardson, Herriek and Neave, 84 State Street, Boston, where I have remained to date. The work is most interesting. Member: Atlantic Tuna Club, Harvard Club of Boston, Union Boat Club, St. Botolph Club, Algonquin Club.

I was connected some time with the New York Public Library. I have since left the Library. My plans are uncertain, and I have no permanent address.

LUCIEN WULSIN

I returned, for the college year 1910-1911, to the Graduate School of Applied Science and completed my electrical engineering work, begun in my senior year. In June, 1911, I received the degree of M.E.E. Beginning with July of the same year, I spent six months in travel, going to Alaska and then visiting many electric and water-power properties all up and down the Pacific coast, in Colorado and the Mississippi Valley. I then spent two weeks at the Panama Canal. In December, 1911, I went to work in the statistics department of the Stone and Webster Management Association, in Boston. I had to resign this position in June, 1912, on account of my father's illness and death. In August, 1912, I went to work for the Baldwin Company in Cincinnati. In January, 1913, I was made secretary of the Baldwin Piano Company, one of their subsidiary corporations. For the first year my work was entirely in the manufacturing departments, then I was transferred to the selling and administrative end. In December, 1913, I was made a director and treasurer of the Baldwin Company. On June 6, 1914, I was married to Miss Margaret M. Hager, of Ashland, Ky. On May 10, 1915, we had a daughter, Katharine Roelker Wulsin. Member: Queen City Club, University Club, Cincinnati Country Club, all of Cincinnati, University Club, Chicago, Ill., Harvard Club of New York, Harvard Club of Boston, Associate Member American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Corporation at Henniker, Contoocook and nearby in New Hampshire as inspector of certain drilling in connection with a water power development project. In December, 1911, I left for the Suriana Mining and Smelting Company's mine in Guerrero, Mexico, where I stayed until March, 1912, when it was policy to leave on account of bandit troubles, the whole force being obliged to leave in a hurry. After a three-day trip on a mule to the best point on the railroad line, with varied experiences and delays, I got on a train for Mexico City, the journey being made very interesting by a thorough "shooting up" of the train by some of Zapata's bandits. Since April, 1912, I have been employed in connection with certain coal property near Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where I lived until December, 1914, in the meantime having been married in November of 1912. Since leaving Wilkes-Barre, I have been living in Swampscott, Mass., making trips to Pennsylvania from time to time. In April, 1916, I was one of two to form a company, namely the Craig-Wyman Company of Boston, which is selling the Gill one-piece piston ring in a certain territory having Buffalo as its most westerly branch office. The Boston office is at 93 Massachusetts Avenue.

PHILIP WYMAN

After graduation, I started the battle of life behind a fort of Baldwin pianos and have so far been able to repulse the determined assaults of the butcher, the baker, and the rent-collector. The first year and six months I worked in our Cincinnati factories to find out how pianos were made, and in going through the various departments my college education was of inestimable value; for example, I was able to invent a new and delicious bean soup for the factory restaurant. One day the cook, meaning myself, used too much red pepper, and, as a result, our hero was transferred to the selling end of the business. For six months there was an amazing number of blots in the office ledgers, when the auditor shipped me off on another six months' tour of the country, visiting the various points of interest, starred in Baedeker, at which Baldwin pianos are sold. On my return, I was given the management of our export business. My chief duty was to embrace odorous foreigners and conduct correspondence in original Hindustanee. Being somewhat of an embracer, I was next sent to London with an exhibit for the Anglo-American Exposition and made a decided splash among the crowned heads of Europe. In fact the war started while I was over there because George wouldn't let me ship a Baldwin player that William had ordered. I couldn't do anything with those boys, so I came home and started to pull door-bells for retail selling. On the strength of a very comfortable and luxurious touring car, to be frank, a Ford, I got married. Now, after a year of domestic happiness, I have another job. I am a knight of the road, making Pikeville, Steubenville, and all points East, and hope to reach Cambridge by June at the company's expense. Member: Cincinnati Golf Club, University Club of Cincinnati.

GEORGE GRAY ZABRISKIE

During the year 1910-1911 I was a student at Trinity College, Cambridge University, and also travelled somewhat in England and on the continent. In the fall of 1911, I returned to the Harvard Law School, where I had spent my senior year, and was there for two years more. In the summers of 1912 and 1913, I again travelled in Europe. In October, 1913, I entered the office of Burlingham, Montgomery and Beecher, lawyers, where I am still employed, at 27 William Street, New York City. In 1914, I was admitted to the New York bar, and also have the degree of LL.B. from Harvard. Member: Harvard Club of New York.
